1915 REVIEW OF IMPORTANT EVENTS OF THIEF RIVER FALLS

Another Chapter In The History of This City Ended At Mid-Night December 31.

TIMES' FILES TELL HISTORY

Thief River Falls' Dream of Having A Hospital Erected Came True—Many Prominent People Have Died During 1915.

A newspaper file can tell the history of a city as nothing else can.

Another chapter of Thief River Falls' history was closed at 12 o'clock last Friday evening, when the old year passed and the new one was ushered in. The files of the Times for 1915 tell a few tradedies and comedies, and many other events of interest and importance for the twelve months that have passed.

During 1915 many prominent citizens have been summoned by death. The city saw its long cherished dream of having a hospital erected come true.

For those who would take a glance backward, and review the happenings of the last twelve months, the Times has compiled a summary of the important events of 1915. It follows:

Jan. 5—Rev. R. K. Callaway had hand badly mangled while operating circular wood saw.

Jan. 5—Chief of Police Berge turned in annual report of police department to city council, showing $1,167.98 had been collected during 1914: the largest amount in the history of Thief River Falls.

Jan. 6—Martin Evenson sustained a broken knee cap, at Minneapolis, while alighting from a street can onto the slippery pavement.

Jan. 7—John H. Ley completed the compilation of the city directory and found that the population of Thief River Falls had increased a little over 400 in two years, or at a rate of 10 per cent.

Jan. 8—Swen Johnson, 78, one of the old settlers of the community, died at the home of his daughter, Miss Gertie Johnson.

Jan. 17—A. Joe Giller died at St. Josephs hospital in St. Paul after a brief illness.

Jan. 22 and 2—Northern Minnesota Editorial association held their annual winter business meeting at the Auditorium.

Jan. 25—Fire discovered in the Catholic church, but was stopped immediately by quick work on the part of the fire department.

Jan. 27—Frank H. Kratka, first mayor of Thief River Falls and postmaster for seven years, died at Pasadena, California, where he had gone to improve his health.

Jan. 28—Commercial club held the annual election of officers.

Feb. 2—City council accepted bond of company to build incinerator.

Feb. 9—Robbers entered "Last Chance" saloon and extracted between $80 and $90 from the till. The safe was not touched.

Feb. 19—Doctors Douglass. Froehlich, Hieber and Gambell incorporated hospital company with capital stock of $25,000.

Feb. 22—Carl Hillard purchased business property of Dennis Kavanaugh, 204 LaBree avenue north.

Feb. 23—$400 damage done to residence of John Sagvold on East side of river.

March 8—Supt. J. H. Hay reelected to superintendency of city schools.

March 14—James Martin, resident of Thief River Falls for over fourteen years, died at the hospital in Fergus Falls.

March 15—Clerk of Court Harry Ives received annual report of vital statistics of county from H. M. Bracken, which showed that there were 142 births in the city of Thief River Falls and 55 deaths. The grand total for the county showed there were 327 births and 120 deaths.

March 18—Stockholders of the First National Bank doubled the capital stock, at a special meeting. C. L. Hansen was elected president and W. W. Prichard, Jr., cashier.

Band to Give Dance.

Friday evening, January 21, at the Auditorium will occur the third annual ball to be given by the members of the Thief River Falls Concert band. The music for the occasion will be furnished by the entire band of between twenty-five or thirty pieces, under the directorship of Joseph Greenfield. Everything in late music has been procured for the event, and every effort will be strained to make it a success. The music for former dances given by the band has usually been furnished by one of the orchestras in the city, but this year the boys have decided to furnish their own music for the trippers of the light fantastic. The proceeds will be turned over to the band treasury for the general upkeep of the organization.

FIRST HOCKEY GAME TO BE PLAYED SUN.

Local Agregation Will Test Strength With Team Representing Crookston.

Thief River Falls will have its first hockey game on Sunday, January 9th, at 3:30 p. m., at the Municipal rink, the opposing team being the fast Crookston aggregation.

The Thief River Falls team is just in its embryo and more candidates are wanted so that the strongest possible team can be put on the ice. No favorites will be played and the game is open to all.

The attendance record will greatly determine how good a team Thief River Falls can support and that will determine the team's value as an advertising medium for the city, as the real asset for advertising value is games with such teams as Winnipeg, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Grand Forks, and if the attendance is such that the receipts will warrant the bringing of such teams here they will be brought, as all receipts taken in at the games will be paid out in expenses of bringing visiting teams to the city.

Games have been arranged with Karlstad, Roseau, Worroad and Baudette, with the possibility of a game with Grand Forks.

The admission will be twenty-five cents and will be entirely on an honor system. Tickets will be provided to attach to the button-hole and straw will be placed around the rink to prevent cold feet.

G. Howard Smith, Manager.

Bridge Contracts Awarded.

Contracters Holt & Prestebak of this city, were awarded contracts at Bemidji the latter part of last week, for the construction of 34 eight-foot tamarac bridges on ditch No. 34, at a cost of $1,778.20. Hans W. Hanson of Grygla, was awarded the contract for the construction of 45 eight-foot tamarac bridges on Judicial ditch No. 21; his being $2,224.

Paul Engelstad, who is a student at the agricultural college at Crookston, left Monday to resume his duties after having spent his vacation at the home of his parents, who reside in the town of Rocksbury.

PENNINGTON JOINS WITH OTHER COUNTIES

Pennington, Marshall and Roseau Counties Join Forces To Erect Building—Red Lake And Kittson Counties May Be Included.

The board of county commissioners at their meeting last evening voted in favor of Pennington county joining with Marshall and Roseau counties for the purpose of establishing a sanitarium where people suffering with tuberculosis may go for treatment. This county's share in the undertaking will be $5,000, Marshall county, $10,000 and Roseau, $5,000. To this the state adds an equal amount which will make the total fund available for this purpose $40,000.

It is also likely that Red Lake and Kittson counties will come in on the proposition as the matter has been submitted to the county commissioners representing those counties. In such an event a larger and better equipped sanitarium will be established and the amounts to be furnished by each county will probably be lessened a trifle.

The site for the sanitarium has to be approved by the state board and it is very likely that it will be near Thief River Falls. This city seems to afford the best railway accommodations for all counties concerned and it is probably the most central of any that could be designated. The other counties favor this location and it is likely that it is the one that will be decided upon. This, however, is something that will be determined later.

Each county will be represented by a sanitarium board and the members for Pennington county have already been named by the county commissioners. They are A. C. Tvedt of Goodridge, 1 year term; K. O. Gigstad of St. Hilaire, 2 year term; Dr. O. F. Melby of Thief River Falls, 3 year term.

Hippodrome Vaudeville at Lyceum.

Manager Morgan of the Lyceum theatre wishes to announce to the patrons of the popular [illegible]house, that a change in vaudeville service has been made and he has been specially fortunate in securing what is known as Hippodrome vaudeville. The first bill will open Friday, January 7th and will continue through Sunday evening. The Lyceum offers a novelty, these evenings, in the form of a four-act vaudeville program in addition to the regular picture program. This should prove of great merit, consisting of a good dancing act, two distinctly different singing turns and a dramatic sketch that holds the interest from start to finish. This program was arranged in Seattle and has been booked right through by the Kellie-Burns booking agency of Seattle, the western representatives of Sullivan & Considine. Local theatregoers will no doubt appreciate the efforts of Manager Morgan in trying to secure the very best in vaudeville. This is the first time anything of its kind has ever been attempted in Thief River Falls, and should it prove to be successful this service will be continued every week. The admission for Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings will be 10c and 25c. On Saturday afternoon a children's matinee will be given to which an admission of 5c [illegible] 10c will be charged.

Tuesday evening, January 11, [illegible] usual Broadway feature will [illegible] shown, entitled: "The College Orphan," in 6 reels, featuring [illegible] sprightly pair of Broadway headliners—Carter DeHaven and Fl[illegible] Parker DeHaven. "The College Orphan" is a sintillating com[illegible] drama of college life, showing how [illegible] pampered college youth, deserted [illegible] his father and fiancee because of supposed intrigue, proves his ster[illegible] qualities through the devotion [illegible] little orphan waif.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NOW UNDER NEW ADMINISTRATION

Patrolman—Chas. Alexander.

Tuesday evening the reins of the city government were turned over to the new administration by the council that has given this city the best administration in its history. The retiring city officials were: Mayor Lars Backe, Aldermen A. M. Langseth, F. H. Herrick, Frank Effinger, Sievert Brandon, and A. H. Akre.

The last work of the retiring council was to approve the annual statement submitted by the city auditor and order it published in both city papers. It is a statement that every member of the council is proud of and well may they be for it is a complete record of the best and most efficient administration this city has ever had. During the two years that they served the city the indebtedness of the city was reduced $36,000, of which sum $28,000 was interest bearing. The statement was prepared by City Auditor B. E. Dahlquist and it is complete in every particular. It appears on pages two and three of this issue of the Times and should be read by every taxpayer.

Another one of the important accomplishments of the outgoing council was the establishment of an excellent system of bookkeeping in the city clerk's office. In the shape that they are now kept the records are complete and accurate and show just what each department is earning for the city or what it is losing.

The new city officers are: Dr. F. H. Gambell, mayor; C. W. Ackerman and Henry Amble, aldermen at large; Carl Froseth, alderman of the first ward; M. N. Benson, alderman of the second ward; Ole Ihle, alderman of the third ward; O. L. Bakken, reelected alderman of the fourth ward.

The new council disposed of the business on hand in a quick and efficient manner and it is expected that their work during the present year will be of a standard that will compare favorably with that of the retiring council.

MUD LAKE LANDS TO BE OPENED SOON

General Land Office At Washington Has Announced That Over 8,000 Acres Will Be Opened.

Mud Lake, which was once a great hunting and fishing ground, and which was drained a few years ago, giving way to an agricultural region of over 8,000 acres, is to be opened for entry and settlement in the spring. This is the announcement of the general land office at Washington. Twice before similar announcements have been made, but some hitch prevented the opening.

After the draining of the lake, the lands were surveyed and platted by the United States. Little was heard of the lands until July 1914, when a "stampede" of settlers "squatted" upon all the available land in one day and declared their intentions of living upon same. The "squatters" then went to Crookston and demanded the right to file upon the land, but as it had not been officially opened by the government, they were refused by the land office. The settlers then went back and are still residing on the former bottom of Mud Lake, to await the opening by the government. The lands in question are part of the Red Lake Indian reservation, [illegible] Marshall county, and what ever [illegible] accrue from the land open[illegible] go to the Indian fund.

Visiting Nurse For This County.

Word has been received by the Woman's club that this county is entitled to a visiting nurse as a result of the successful campaign conducted here in the sale of the Red Cross Seals. A letter from the state board gives the information that of those that have thus-far reported Thief River Falls leads all other places in the state in the number of seals sold. The campaign conducted by the Woman's club of this city was a spirited one and the members are deserving of whatever honors are to be received as a result of their work. Should the club so desire they may retain 50 per cent of the total amount of the sales in the county instead of securing the services of a visiting nurse. This will be decided upon at a future meeting of the club.

FARM PRODUCT LIST IS NOW PREPARED

All Exhibits Must Be Entered On Or Before Wednesday, January 19th, 1916.

The farm section committee in charge of the Farm Products Display, has prepared the following list of products, on which prizes will be awarded at the Mid-Winter Fair and Home Products Dinner. Those wishing to enter are requested to bring their exhibits to the office of the Thief River Valley Land Co., opposite the Auditorium, where one of the committee can be found at any time. No entry fee will be charged on these exhibits, and the committee will also find sale for such products as the owners wish sold, at regular market prices, for which no charge will be made.

To make our first Mid-Winter Fair a success, the farmers must necessarily assist to a large extent, and you are therefore urged to bend every effort toward helping to make this fair a winner in every way.

COUNTY BOARD [illegible] PROBLEM IN OFF[illegible] PRINTING MA[illegible]

County Printing Awarded To [illegible] Hilaire Spectator—Legality of Paper In Doubt.

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE

Law Makes Certain Rigid Requirements For Legal Newspaper—Alleged That Spectator Can't Meet Them.

At the annual meeting of the board of county commissioners the county printing and designating of the offical newspaper for the year were among the important matters that came up.

Two bids were received for the printing, one from the St. Hilaire Spectator and the other from the Thief River Falls Times. The bid of the Spectator was 40c per folio for the first insertion and 20c per folio for each subsequent insertion of all legal notices and the county financial statement and 7c per description for the publication of the delinquent tax list. The bid of the Times was 50c per folio for the first insertion and 25c per folio for each subsequent insertion of all legal notices and the county financial statement and 12c per description for the delinquent tax list. This would make the cost of the printing for the entire year not to exceed $300 more if the bid of the Times was accepted instead of the bid of the St. Hilaire paper.

This difference is insignificant when the service to the taxpayers of the county is taken into consideration. The Times has a guaranteed circulation of 2,500 and covers the entire county while the St. Hilaire Spectator reaches but a handful of people in the vicinity of St. Hilaire. Every taxpayer in the county is entitled to know just how the business of the county stands and what disposition is being made of the county's funds by the commissioners. This is the service that would be given them by the Times, while with the publishing done in the Spectator the greater portion of the people of the county would be kept in ignorance of the county's business for the entire year.

In accepting the bid of the St. Hilaire paper the board acted hastily and did something that a few moments sober thought would have convinced them was entirely wrong and not in accordance with the interests of the people of the entire county whom they represent.

After the action had been taken the question of the legality of the paper that had been awarded the printing came up and it was apparent that there was every reason to demand an investigation. Mr. Gunstad, publisher of the St. Hilaire Spectator, was notified to appear before the board and produce proof that the Spectator was a legal newspaper. He appeared this (Thursday) afternoon but failed to produce any evidence before the board. He declared that the paper was a legal publication but gave only his statement to substantiate his claim. However, the county attorney and members of the board seemed inclined to be lenient, and Mr. Gunstad was given time to furnish proof that his paper was legal. Later the board decided that something definite must be done at once and at the time of going to press they were considering taking further action.

Loud protests against the county printing appearing in the St. Hilaire paper are coming from all parts of the county, the unanimous opinion being that the idea is ridiculous. Whether or not the county board will heed this criticism remains to be seen but should they decide to designate the St. Hilaire paper as the official county paper it is certain that some serious complications will arise later, as the legality question regarding the paper would surely come up concerning certain important legal publications.

In fairness to the members of the board it must be admitted that they are apparently desirous of safeguarding the interests of the county in this matter. They are not inclined to take any chances on an important matter of this kind and after the matter of the legality of the paper in question was brought to their attention they seemed anxious to proceed cautiously. They will undoubtedly thoroughly satisfy themselves on all points and then act in accordance with the interests of the taxpayers of the entire county.

CUPID GETS K. O.—
FURNITURE TO ADVANCE.

Battling Danny Cupid was hooked a regular knockout blow by the National Furniture association in convention at Grand Rapids, Mich., but as yet he hasn't taken the count. Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed are going to pay 20 to 50 per cent more for their furnishings next year on account of the war. These are the gloomy tidings that emanated from their convention. Lumber has advanced 10 per cent, hardware 100 per cent and mirrows 150 per cent. There's the reason.

Young-Prichard.

On New Year's day at high noon in the First M. E. church at Aitken, Minn., occurred the marriage of Miss Elsie Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Young, old residents of that place, to Harry R. Prichard of this city. Rev. Villars read the service in the presence of about three hundred guests. In the church, evergreens and the Christmas colors were used in the decorations. The ushers were Cecil Young, the bride's brother, who resides at Minneapolis, and James Prichard and Walter Smith of this city. Misses Rhue Young, sister of the bride, Miss Florence Prichard, sister of the groom, and Miss Helen Hoag of this city, were the bride's-maids, and were gowned in pink. They wore gold bows and carried pink Killarney roses. The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory satin, made round length, and elaborated in pearl trimmings. Her tulle veil was in cap effect and caught with real orange blossoms, sent to her from California, and she carried a shower bouquet. Her going away gown was of blue Georgette crepe with which she wore a small black hat and plush coat.

Mrs. Hensy was at the organ and played the Lohengrin Wedding March for the processional and the Mendelssohn March for recessional. Preceeding the ceremony Miss Evelyn Young, another sister of the bride, sang: "When Song is Sweet."

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents and covers were laid for forty. The flowers in the home decorations were pink carnations.

A bridal dinner was given at the home on New Year's eve for the wedding party and the family members.

Mr. Prichard and his bride left in the afternoon for a trip to the Twin Cities and Duluth, and on their return here they will go to housekeeping in their new home, 223 Duluth avenue north. They will be at home to their friends February 1st.

FIRE AT PARK HOTEL--ROOM NUMBER 13

Ole Prestebak And Frank Holt Discover What Might Have Been Serious Blaze.

While engaged in laying plans for their chicken farm and discussing some very complicated poultry problems in room No. 12 adjoining room No. 13 on the third floor at the Park Hotel, the attention of Ole Prestebak and Frank Holt was aroused this evening at 5:45 when they smelled the burning of paper. Upon investigation they found that the wall in the adjoining room had ignited from a defective thimble in the chimney and the flames had already gained a good start and would probably have resulted in a very serious fire. The fact that the blaze was in room 13, showed that the jinx was around, and on trying the fire fighting apparatus, which is kept on the third floor, it absolutely refused to work for some reason. They then sounded an alarm through the hotel and with the aid of other boarders were successful in extinguishing the fire.

DRINK SIX GLASSES OF WATER DAILY

An Interesting Statement by One of the Big Men In the Drug Business

A. E. KIESLING

of Houston, Texas, says:

"If you have a muddy complexion and dull eyes, you are constipated. Six glasses of water daily and one or two Rexall Orderlies at night will correct this condition and make you 'fit as a fiddle.' Rexall Orderlies, in my opinion, are the best laxative to be had, and can be taken by men, women or children."

We have the exclusive selling rights for this great laxative. Trial size, 10 cents.

FAIR REMINDERS.

The mid-winter fair will be opened Wednesday, January 19, and will cover two days, instead of one.

All exhibits MUST be in by noon of the opening day, Wednesday. Exhibitors will not be charged admission but will be charged for the dinner.

Wednesday, January 19, will be "Thief River Falls Day"—Let everyone turn out and boost the fair.

Reservations for booths MUST be made at once—the invitation is general and if space is taken and you are late, do not blame the committee.

We expect to have 1,000 visitors here for the second day of the fair.

The farmers and residents of the rural districts will find the fair and program well worth their patronage and as for that dinner—in the parliance of the street it will be "SOME DINNER."

The Commercial club will hold open house both days of the fair and visitors are cordially invited to make it their headquarters.

The ladies will be well cared for by the Woman's club committee.

Bring the entire family and enjoy two days of entertainment, shopping and meeting your friends in Thief River Falls, "The Hub of Northwestern, Minnesota."

The committees are urged to be ahead, not behind the game, in the details of their respective departments. Do it now.

The Commercial club plans to give its members one of the most interesting programs and best dinners of the winter at the club rooms Friday evening, when the Thief River Falls band will entertain in a program of late hits, interspersed with a number of solos. The club lunch will be more elaborate than usual, the House committee having decided on "oyster patties and trimmings" as the tickler for palates of club epicurians. The lunch is to be served at 6:15 sharp and the concert hours will be from 7:0 to 8:30, followed by a discussion of several important subjects requiring the attention of the club. "Come and bring a friend" is the general invitation the House committee has sent out and it is expected that over 100 prominent business and professional men will be present.

All roads will lead to Thief River Falls on Thursday, January 20, when the first midwinter fair and home product dinner will be held at the handsome Auditorium, under the auspices of Commercial club. The club plans to round out its fiscal year ending Feb. 15, with this event as a climax to a successful year in the new organization since it took up its headquarters in the Citizens Bank building, fitted out fine quarters and began its work of civic improvement and legitimate boosting along organized lines of endeavor.

The annual election will occur on January 27 and the present officers and directors will close their year's work, their successors to take office February 15, at which time the club year closes, annual reports are submitted and plans for the coming year discussed.

Every effort is being made to make the mid-winter fair a big success and as a closing feature of the year's activities and local merchants and manufacturers will be well represented in attractive booths, while a section devoted to the high school and one to the farmers will be other features certain to prove interesting and instructive.

The secretary is busy with the correspondence incident to securing speakers for the afternoon and evening program and has already received favorable replies from a number, among them J. D. Bacon of Lilac Hedge farm, Grand Forks. Mr. Bacon will talk on his pet hobby, corn, cows and alfalfa and the farmers and others who know him by reputation are anticipating a good, sound talk from a practical man on an important subject to the farmers.

A number of East Grand Forks men are expected and invitations have been sent to prominent agriculturalists in this section of the state, so that there will be a representative gathering of men who take an active interest in community development present. The club expects to serve between 500 and 1,000 people at the dinner, from 12 to 2 p. m., and fully fifty per cent of these will be farmers and settlers of Pennington and Marshall county.

Some Of The Results Obtained At My Clinic.

Having been aware of the short comings of medicine and surgery in treating diseases, I equipped my office years ago with the necessary apparatus for the carrying out of Nature Cure teachings in my practice, and below is a list of cases to show the results I have been able to obtain by so doing:

In the spring of 1913 I treated two cases (a man and a woman, both middle aged) for Chronic Articular Rheumatism of four and seven years standing, respectively, with complete relief in two and three weeks' treatments. In the early spring of 1913 I treated two young men and in the summer of 1914, another young man, all for Sciatic Rheumatism, for about two weeks each with complete relief and no signs of any return since in any of the cases.

I recall four cases of Pneumonia (two young men and two young ladies) where the disease was broken in 24 hours.

I have treated several cases of Eczema with curative results; but one case in particular that I treated in the fall of 1912 was that of a young lady with a very chronic type of the disease of several years standing, who after having tried all sorts of doctoring with no avail, was completely relieved under my care.

Several cases of Acute Rheumatism have been cured in the shortest possible time under my treatment. All sorts of skin and veneral diseases are rapidly cured by Nature Cure Methods.

Any other disease, no matter of what nature, such as: Asthma, Bronchitis, Pulmonary Tuberculosis, Liver, Stomach, Bowel, (including Appendicitis), Kidney, Nervous and generative organ troubles, as well as diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, etc., are best handled by Nature Cure Methods.

The most remarkable cure I have obtained is that of a young boy who, after having been given up by two of the leading Thief River Falls physicians for Abdominal and Lung Tuberculosis, was cured by my methods four years ago and is well today. Since then I have relieved a girl for Tuberculosis of a Kidney by the same treatment and I have at present a boy under my care who was entirely crippled three years ago with Rheumatism and Hip and Ankle Tuberculosis in connection, but who is now progressing nicely toward recovery.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over an heirloom, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also, the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the girl, Esther, reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther. Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so does his companion and cousin, Blair Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley. In stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem.

Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventuress, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Esther's being received in Fairfax society. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen demented. Marmaduke Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning Arthur is a fugitive he seeks Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving for the west. Their train is robbed, Vivian losing the diamond, which a slain train robber drops in the desert. The $10,000 he stole is found by Arthur, now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment and Esther is in Richmond society. Abe Bloom, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman. Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich he buys Stanley hall, sold at auction, through Blake, and also provides for Hagar and Esther. Luke Lovell buys the diamond from the squaw, but loses it in a fight. Vivian, desiring [illegible] to ensnare Arthur, sends for Blair.

Vivian is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Esther to deliver to Arthur. Blair and Luke go to Arthur's yacht and find Esther there.

Esther and Quabba escape while Blair and Luke battle. Blair in the meantime has joined Vivian in Los Angeles. Durand, "king of diamonds," a crook known to Vivian, goes to a saloon to try to discover the diamond. There he meets Luke Lovell. Esther and Arthur appear on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles in care of the physician-crook, Durand. Esther follows and is refused admittance to see him. In the meantime the diamond is found by two bill posters, one of whom murders the other for it. Arthur is "doped" by Durand, De Vaux and Vivian, although Blair, who has taken charge of Arthur's business affairs, protests.

The diamond passes in dice play from the bill poster to Santley, circus owner, who is killed, and the diamond is put up at auction as part of his estate. Blair and Vivian falsify a telegram from Blake to Arthur, making Arthur believe he suffered from hallucination in thinking he saw Esther. Luke is "railroaded" to prison by Blair. At the auction is Homer Graydon, an aged admirer of Vivian, who has promised to buy the diamond for her.

CHAPTER XLVII.

"Sold to John Powell!"

"ARE you all through, gentlemen?" reiterated the auctioneer. "I have been offered $70,000 for this magnificent diamond. Its previous history is unknown, but local experts have pronounced it to be worth ten times the sum you offer. Where did it come from? That I cannot tell you, but by the decree of the court it is adjudged an asset of the Santley circus, bankrupt. As such the purchaser's title will be valid. Am I offered any more? Seventy thousand, seventy thousand, seventy thousand!"

Homer Graydon, wealthy spendthrift that he was, grew ashen faced. Seventy thousand dollars would tax him to raise, but Vivian Marston gave him an alluring smile, and as his pride was also at stake, he made an effort to smile back at Vivian and nodded to John Powell as if to say, "Go higher if you can!"

The rival bidder laughed recklessly. Once more he felt all the daring carelessness of his wild youth as Arthur Stanley of Stanley Hall.

"Eighty thousand!" he cried.

Vivian was in a flutter of unholy delight to realize she was the inspiration of the money mad rivalry between John Powell and Homer Graydon as they eagerly bid for the bauble that had been a talisman of death.

"Eighty thousand I am bid by Mr. Powell!" chanted the auctioneer. "Come, come, Mr. Graydon. Do not let superstition stop you. The lion would have killed the lady and the jealous husband would have killed Sam Santley even had this diamond not figured in the case perhaps. All great diamonds have their dramatic history. Remember the Kohinoor and Orloff diamonds. This diamond may be a lucky stone for all we know despite what has happened."

Arthur knew better, Blair knew better, and so did Vivian and the English lawyer, Smythe. So did Durand, the international diamond thief and swindler. And so did his accomplice and jackal, the dapper Count de Vaux. But Homer Graydon only knew that Vivian Marston's favor depended on the diamond.

"Eighty-five thousand dollars!" he cried; then he gulped and grew ashen pale again. To raise $85,000 cash to pay for this bauble to give a woman would be his ruin.

"Ninety thousand!" cried John Powell.

Homer Graydon gave the auctioneer a negative jerk of the head in reply to his inquiring gaze.

"Ninety thousand! Ninety thousand! Are you all done? Ninety thousand, once! Ninety thousand, twice! Ninety thousand, for the last time!" He paused. "Going, going, gone! Sold to Mr. John Powell for $90,000!"

Arthur scribbled a check as the crowd buzzed and swayed around him. Vivian gave a hysterical laugh and clutched Arthur by the arm as the auctioneer handed him the diamond from the sky. Then as the purchaser and his little coterie of friends passed through the dispersing crowd Vivian looked Homer Graydon in the face deliberately and turned her back upon him.

In her room at her modest hotel Esther debated nervously with herself. The rank injustice done Luke, who had been railroaded to prison by the influence of Blair Stanley and Frank Durand while Arthur had never interfered made her more bitter than she had been at the strange attitude Arthur had taken toward her since his recovery from his injuries. Rumors that his mind was affected as a result of his hurts were rife in Los Angeles, where those who had formerly called him "the golden man," now designated Arthur as "John Powell, the mad millionaire."

For herself she would never again intrude upon Arthur, surrounded as he was by sycophants and parasites who worked him evil. But for Luke Lovell, done a great injustice, she would make one last appeal before she returned to Richmond and Hagar. The remorse and contrition of Luke that he had ever been disloyal to her and Hagar, Esther felt genuine. She determined to take the English lawyer Smythe into her confidence, and found occasion to send Quabba to Smythe with a message.

Lawyer Smythe was also preparing to leave Los Angeles. He had shipped his precious deer head by express with much misgiving and foreboding of harm befalling it ere it reached his dearly beloved England, where he was shortly to follow. Like Esther, the eccentric but loyal English lawyer was becoming discouraged and dismayed at the puzzling conduct of the American heir, a fugitive from justice in Virginia, flourishing under the name of John Powell, a thousand leagues from Stanley hall, Virginia.

"I confess it is an enigma to me," he explained to Esther. "Of course, Blair Stanley, as the next in succession, cannot become the Earl of Stanley so long as Arthur Stanley lives. That Arthur Stanley lives under another name only adds to the confusion of the whole bally thing!"

They Found Luke Contrite.

Then Esther told him about Luke, and because he had a kindly heart in his queer body the English lawyer accompanied Esther to the prison on a visiting day. They found Luke contrite and tender both toward Esther and his gypsy sovereign, Hagar. He begged to be remembered to Hagar and that she be assured that once he was out of prison and had his revenge he would return to the tribe and serve Hagar faithfully as head man again. But he was obdurate in his sullen determination to have his revenge in his own way.

"Go back to Virginia, Miss Esther," he said, "and leave the matter of my enemies to me. They have so much influence a poor gypsy could get no justice against them in the courts. If I told my story it wouldn't be listened to. But I can't be held here forever, and I will have a better revenge in a better way."

And in this frame of mind, mingled with his tender attitude toward her, Esther and the English lawyer left him. Luke looked strange and grim with his cropped head and shaved face in his prison garb. He was not the rugged, picturesque figure Esther had known since childhood. He seemed another being, a graven faced, implacable personification of a vengeance that could wait to strike.

Hardly had the newspaper sensation of John Powell's purchase of the diamond died down than "the mad millionaire," as he was called for eccentricities, broke into print again. Now the newspapers announced that to celebrate his recovery from his recent injuries Mr. John Powell would give a great fete, the first formal house warming of his grand new mansion. At this fete, the papers stated, the great diamond that had caused the tragedy and bankruptcy of the Santley circus would figure in a sensational surprise.

Smythe, In Armor, Persisted In Carrying His Great English Umbrella.

It was Vivian who had suggested the fete, a costume affair. Arthur, tormented as he was with the devilish suggestion of insane delusions and addicted to evil drugs, welcomed any excitement, any dissipation, to make him forget the attacks of remorse that ever and anon obsessed him. Like many others in the same situation, Arthur believed his evil companions were his good friends and true, for ever they fed his vanities and flattered and fawned upon him. Vivian lived in an elysium of reckless and costly luxury. There were high revels nightly by the mad millionaire and his friends in the gay resorts of Los Angeles, and now there was to come the crowning effort in wasteful and luxurious prodigality—the Powell costume ball.

Arthur abandoned all business affairs to Blair. Now that he had the diamond from the sky, Vivian was exerting every wile to obtain it. And Arthur promised he would present it to her fittingly at the fete.

But there is no honor among thieves. Already Durand was planning to cheat Blair after Arthur, as John Powell, was ruined. Durand broached this to Vivian, who played her cards tactfully and seemingly encouraged him in his treachery to Blair. Her one desire was the diamond, and that was to be hers the night of the fete. She could hardly wait for it.

The night came, as all nights will.

Esther had decided the best way to intercede for Luke would be to intrude upon Arthur at the fete and make him promise to secure Luke's release from prison.

Smythe accompanied Esther in a taxicab to the fete. He was attired as a knight in armor, but persisted in carrying his great English umbrella. He explained he did not wish to get wet and become rusted in his armor in case it rained. When informed that the rainy season in this section of the country was yet some months off Smythe had replied that rain knew no seasons. He had seen it rain in London when even the Times had predicted fair weather. So he would run no risk and would take his umbrella.

"I feel better when I carry something," he added. "When I carried my game trophy, the deer head, I did not need an umbrella. In fact, it did not rain while I carried it, which was remarkable. So now I shall carry the umbrella, especially as I have shipped the deer head to London, and I do hope it will not be stolen or injured in transit."

At the Powell mansion, entering with the crush of maskers, Esther and Smythe found the butler, arrayed as a gorgeous major domo, receiving the guests, as the host was to make his entrance in some novel and surprising manner, it was whispered. In fact, the costume fete was a lavish bohemian revel. Wine flowed, punch was served on every side, and the guests made themselves at home and joined in the dance and revels. A Hungarian band played in the grand ballroom and a string orchestra in the conservatory.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

"Choose Between Us!"

SMYTHE, a humoresque figure in his helmet and armor and with the incongruous crook handle umbrella, led Esther to the one quiet spot in all the bedlam of romp and revelry. This was a small upstairs reception or tea room, plainly but richly furnished, and with a large window that overlooked the lawns and flower garden. A wide branched palm in a handsome jardiniere screened a small divan or settee near the center of the room. Beside it was a small ornate table. A great door led to the billiard room and through the billiard room gave ingress and egress to the quiet spot. A few couples strayed in and out, but for the most part Esther was alone in this small tearoom after Smythe left her to apprise the master of the house that a lady wished to see him there.

In the great ballroom the gay set of Los Angeles were hilarious with wine and music. Blair, a handsome and striking figure in the full uniform of a Confederate officer, forgot his schemes and plans and enjoyed himself with all the abandon of his reckless nature. Durand, arrayed in a conventionalized costume as the king of diamonds, looked like that court card come to life.

"I am running true to form," he whispered to Vivian. "'The pack' called me the king of diamonds, and here I am, you see, costumed for the part!"

"You wouldn't have dared to dress in character abroad," laughed Vivian. "The police of Europe look too constantly for the king of diamonds!"

"You are right, my dear girl," replied Durand carelessly. "But, speaking of Europe, even the carnival at Monte Carlo was no gayer scene than this. Certainly our friend, the whilom John Powell, is giving a princely fete. But what is this big surprise he is to spring?"

"I haven't the least idea," confessed Vivian. "He is very secretive of late."

Then her brow knit in a slight frown as she remembered that Arthur had promised to give her the diamond this night, but when she had sent him a note by her maid he had only returned her word that the diamond would be given her later in the evening. Where was he? What was his surprise?

"I thought you would come as the Queen of Hearts," remarked Durand, interrupting her train of thought. "When we despoiled Europe you were known in the pack as the Queen of Hearts, as I was known as the King of Diamonds. De Vaux, too, is chary of our old pseudonyms. He touted for our victims at the select and exclusive clubs in the various capitals of Europe, so he was called the Knave of Clubs. But he, too, seems to wish to forget. There he is, dancing with a dark oriental dancer. He is in the costume of a French zouave."

"Let us forget the past—and our pasts!" said Vivian bitterly.

Then Durand exchanged a smile with a charmer attired as a Neapolitan flower girl and whirled away in the dance with her.

Upstairs Esther waited nervous and impatient, half regretting she had come. Then she remembered Luke, unjustly in prison, and her resolution returned.

Esther Was Alone In the Tea Room.

Suddenly the music stopped. There was a fanfare of trumpets, and the rays of a calcium light were turned from the gallery toward the great purple velvet curtains at the end of the ballroom. These were drawn aside by two slim young girls in the costume of Tudor pages, and there between the parted velvet curtains, full in the great pencil of light directed at him, sat the figure of a cavalier on a great white horse with crimson trappings. Immovable as a statue stood rider and steed. Then the band crashed a march, and through the ballroom to the center came rider and horse. Here they paused, and the rider made a sweeping bow to the startled assemblage.

It was Arthur Stanley of Stanley hall, Virginia, but known here, save to a few, as John Powell, rightly "the mad millionaire!" He dismounted and took from his neck the great diamond in its curious locket and chain. He held it in the fierce light beating on him, and it blazed and sparkled.

"Friends, my dear and welcome guests," he cried in a ringing voice, "I will tell you a strange story of the first finding of a great gem such as this. A gem known as the diamond from the sky!"

And there he told, and with a poetic diction he must have practiced, the story of the adventurer, Sir Arthur Stanley, sometimes called the Fallen Star, founder of the Stanley family in Virginia and finder of the diamond from the sky.

While the revelers hung spellbound at the story, he told of how 300 years ago the reckless Sir Arthur, younger son of the first Earl of Stanley in England, had been banished to America to the English settlements in Virginia and had gone far up the Rappahannock river trails to steal away an Indian princess. He told of Sir Arthur's capture by the savage red men, his torture by stake and fire, and then the fall of the meteor in the night that had saved his life and deified him, for the Indians had taken it as a sign of the Great Spirit's displeasure.

He Took From His Neck the Great Gleaming Diamond.

Then he told of the finding of the great diamond in the cooled meteor and of his ancestor bearing it away and consigning it to his heirs to be worn when a descendant of his would be called to the English earldom. "It is called the diamond from the sky, the 'charm against harm,'" concluded the speaker dramatically. "For none save a true descendant of the adventurer who found it or the woman he loves can possess it lest it bring disaster and death!"

Thus Arthur concluded and a groom led the horse away. The crowd cheered, the band struck up a lilting measure and the dance went on.

Removing his plumed hat and wig, Arthur led Vivian upstairs to the reception room that they might be alone. As they ascended the stairs a great uproar of laughter rose in the ballroom.

Marmaduke Smythe had been standing on a chair to better see and hear the story of the diamond from the sky. In moving to get down to convey Esther's message to the dismounted speaker, Smythe had broken an electric light wall bracket and as a result his metal armor had short circuited a live wire. He was rescued with a smoking plume, hardly any the worse for the electrical mishap, when Vivian and Arthur entered the room where Esther waited. They did not see the slight figure behind the palm.

Arthur Begged Her to Take It and to Forgive Him.

Vivian threw her arms around Arthur and kissed him.

"Give me the diamond, Arthur, dear," she murmured.

But Arthur drew back with a startled cry, for there, looking full at them with scornful gaze, was Esther!

Vivian realized the subterfuge that Esther was an apparition would no longer avail. She shrieked, "Choose between us!"

Arthur thrust her from him and through the door, the one entrance to the room, and turned the bronze bolt, while Vivian screamed and beat outside in rage and baffled desire for the diamond.

But ere Arthur had thrust her from the room Vivian's clawing grasp had ripped his velvet sleeve and shirt, and his arm was bare to the elbow as he extended the diamond from the sky to Esther and wildly cried, he knew not why, for her to take it and to forgive him.

But Esther's eyes were wide and wild. Her gaze was upon his naked arm, scarred and marked from the needle thrusts of his drug addiction. She had read of such things in the newspapers. Now she knew—

"That is the reason!" she gasped in horror and disgust. And with indignant fervor she snatched the diamond from his grasp and threw it from her as an evil thing.

Stricken with shame and remorse, Arthur bowed his head on the table and sobbed. He had not seen or cared where the diamond had been flung, nor had Esther. It had hurtled through the open window and had fallen, only to be caught in the trembling branch of a rosebush far beneath.

Vivian's screams had not disturbed the noisy revelers in the ballroom, showering confetti and singing as they danced and drank, but Durand and Blair, mindful of the diamond, had followed. They found Vivian hysterically scrabbling at the door of the little room, and Blair burst it in.

Marmaduke Smythe was close behind the intruders.

"Where is the diamond?" shrieked Vivian.

Below the gayety in the ballroom was at its height. Outside the dawn crimsoned in the east—and a hand reached to the rosebush beneath the window and bore away the diamond from the sky!

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Strong on Grammar.

A lad just returned from boarding school upon being asked by "dad" how he stood in grammar at the end of the term came back with something like this, remarks an exchange:

"Say, dad, take it from me, grammar was my long suit. On the start I was up against it hard. Couldn't get it through my noodle. Fell down every time I went to class. Finally I says to myself: 'Look here, old kid, it's up to you. You've got to cut out the funny business and take a brace or you'll see your finish, the surest thing you know.' Well, I studied, believe me. And, say, when it comes to the final exams, did I lose out? Not on your life. I was right there with bells on. There was certainly some class to the way I answered those quizzes. A cold mark of 95 when it was all over. Not so worse, eh? Can you beat it? How I did it I don't know. You can search me. But, anyhow, it's going some, eh, dad? None of 'em's got anything on me when it comes to grammar, that's a cinch."

Diplomacy.

"Look here, Charlie," said one young undergrad to another, who had been asked to run his eye over a letter which his friend had written to his father, in which there was the inevitable request for money, "you've spelled jug 'g-u-g!'"

"I know," said Charlie, "but, you see, I need the cash and don't want the old man to think I'm putting on airs. That's how he spells it."—Pittsburgh Press.

VILLAGE OF ST. HILAIRE

I. O. O. F. Installation.

On Thursday evening, December 30th, the I. O. O. F. lodge number 147, of St. Hilaire, took in one of the largest classes of new members during its experience.

The new members were put through the initiative degree and all the old members were present to help them get acquainted. It was expected that a degree team from the head lodge would be present for the occasion, but as they were unable to come that evening a large delegation from Red Lake Falls was present, who filled the bill equally as well.

After the new members had become acquainted with riding the "goat" and had partaken of the different "treats" in store for them, a buffet luncheon was served by the Odd Fellows, who proved to be bountiful hosts and capable of satisfying the appetite, which had been acquired by the new members during the evening. The new members are as follows: Lyman Peck, Edwin Roy, John Maakrud, W. C. Thomas, E. H. Stephens, Wm. Lindahl, R. V. Trask, Andrew Hanson, Myles Jackson, A. F. Hall, Selmer Wahlbeck, C. Keller and Hans Wilson.

The Odd Fellows expect to initiate three other members next week, and the following Thursday they intend to put the entire class of sixteen members through the first degree.

Civic Club Entertains.

The ladies of the St. Hilaire Civic Club entertained their husbands and gentlemen friends at the I. O. O. F. hall last Wednesday evening. Norwegian whist furnished the amusement for the evening. A delicious lunch was served by the Mesdames Hooper, Roth and Wilson and Miss Gertrude Hooper. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Lars Loberg. Miss Ragna Loberg and Mrs. Aalmquist will be the hostesses.

Insurance Meeting.

The Bray Mutual Fire Insurance Company held its annual meeting in the village hall at St. Hilaire, January 3rd, 1916. A fairly large crowd was present, and after the year's business had been gone over, along with other matters of importance the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: Nels K. Anderson, president; John O. Swanson, secretary; N. A. Nelson, treasurer; A. Aug. Erickson, director, Ed. A. Aubol, director; Fred Goether, director.

Berg-Calsnes.

At the home of Mrs. Ole Sherva of St. Hilaire, on New Year's evening, at six o'clock occurred the marriage of her daughter, Nettie, to Carl Calsnes of Bemidji. The bride was very becomingly dressed in white crepe de Chine and carried a boquet of bridal flowers. Reverend Gryting performed the ceremony. After the ceremony the guests partook of a sumptuous supper. The bride has grown up in St. Hilaire and is well thought of by all. The young couple expect to make their home here for the present. Their many friends join in wishing them a bright and happy future.

Sleighing Party.

Last Friday afternoon N. E. Beebe and son, Lee, each took a sleigh load of fun-makers from St. Hilaire to V. C. Noper's at Thief River Falls. The ride up proved rather chilly but everyone felt well repaid for their effort when they partook of the delicious oyster stew which Mrs. Noper had prepared for them. A very pleasant time was spent at Noper's and from there the crowd proceeded to Thief River Falls, where they attended the opening performance of the Princess theatre. They arrived home very early the next morning and we can vouch that the first two sleigh loads of people coming from Thief River Falls in the year 1916 were in a much better condition than some of the loads of 1915.

Band Concert.

The St. Hilaire band under the direction of Ben Lonson of Thief River Falls, will give a band concert in the Imperial hall, Friday evening, Jan. 7th. The boys have worked up a very select program for the evening and it should be the duty of every citizen of the village to be present and give the band a boost. After the concert a dance will be given which promises a good time for both young and old.

Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Fellman were host and hostess at a dinner party Friday and proved to be such amiable entertainers that their guests remained and spent a very pleasant afternoon and evening also. The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Satterberg and their daughter, Miss Martha Satterberg, Mrs. Johanna Fellman and daughter, Miss Anna Fellman, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Burstad, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Holmberg.

Dance at Badger.

The St. Hilaire "peerless" orchestra left here Friday morning for Badger, where they furnished music for the mask ball given there Friday night. Those who attended the dance report having had a very fine time. The orchestra returned home Saturday afternoon with nothing missing except a long night's repose. Notwithstanding the demands of nature, the young people again turned out Saturday night and furnished music for the New Year's dance held at the Imperial hall. A large crowd was present as usual and a very pleasant evening was spent.

Whist Party.

Mrs. H. O. Jackson entertained Thursday evening, complementary to her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gresie. Norwegian whist furnished the amusement for the evening, and a delicious luncheon was served at twelve.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Patterson entertained a party of their St. Hilaire friends at their home Tuesday evening. The evening was pleasantly spent in cards and music. On Thursday of the same week a large crowd of young people from Thief River Falls called at the Patterson residence and they also report having spent a very pleasant evening.

Robert Jackson of Red Lake Falls, was in town between trains on New Year's day, and had dinner at the home of his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Burkee entertained at a sumptuous turkey dinner Sunday evening. The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hed and family, Dr. and Mrs. C. Swanson and daughter, Elna, and Miss Grace Hall.

Miss Laura Lanman of Black River, left Saturday to resume her school duties at the high school of Larimore, North Dakota.

Miss Louise Wilson spent a few days at Badger last week, and attended the New Year's dance given there Friday evening. She returned on the afternoon train Saturday.

The Misses Esther and Edith Nelson, who are attending the Gustavus Adolphus Academy at St. Peter, Minnesota, have been home for the past two weeks visiting with their parents. They left Saturday to take up their duties again.

Miss Ruth Martz left Saturday afternoon for Moorhead, where she expects to visit a few days with friends and may arrange to take up a course of study at that place.

Mrs. Jake Sieff of Red Lake Falls, was in town Thursday and Friday of last week. She returned Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McAllister and baby, Muriel, returned Tuesday from Badger, where they had spent a few days with Mr. McAllister's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Roth and their son, Beryl, were entertained at supper at the H. Roth home last Thursday.

Miss Larner, a member of the faculty of the Thief River Falls public schools, was a guest at the Dan Patterson residence last week from Thursday until Friday evening.

A BIT OF ADIVCE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. In such cases the kidneys often need help.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble—they are recommended by thousands. Can residents desire more convincing proof of merit than the statement of a citizen of this locality?

Mrs. R. Hammond, Pencer, Minn., says: "For a long time I was troubled by irregular action of my kidneys. I had a constant desire to pass the kidney secretions and suffered from severe pains in my back and hips. I had headaches and dizzy spells and felt miserable. One of my family had been benefited by Doan's Kidney Pills so I tried them. They gave me relief at once. That was quite a while ago and my health is now unusually good. I give all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hammond had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Jan. 6-13.

NOTICE.

An "Evangelistic Campaign" is now being conducted in the Scandinavian language on the East side, in the Swedish Baptist church, on corner Markley avenue south and Schuneman street. The evangelists have been students of the Northwestern Bible and Missionary Training school in Minneapolis, Minn. A. G. Anderson has been a missionary for the American Sunday School with headquarters at Crookston, for four years up to a year ago when he started evangelistic work, helping churches and communities with gospel meetings from one to three weeks at each place. Has held meetings among all denominations. Has helped Salvation Army at three places, meeting one week at each place. These places are Valley City, Fargo and Crookston. Had a large attendence at each place.

Rev. Victor E. Anderson from Bethel, Minn., has been engaged two years. The evangelist conducted meetings all winter in the towns located between Crookston and Fargo, and had a very successful season's work.

This winter we intend to work in the northern part of our glorious Red River Valley, the future of our state, (Minnesota), and its bread basket. We have the people and the climate and praise such.

We do not preach any higher criticism but the good old plain gospel, that Peter preached at Penticost, "Mighty to Save, and Keep Saved, to Serve God."

We kindly invite all Scandinavians to these meetings. Come yourself. Bring your family with you. Meetings every night at eight o'clock sharp. Will announce later where meetings will be held next week.

We invite the good people of Thief River Falls and vicinity to come to our meetings, because it is a "union meeting" free for all. We do not knock any denomination—only sin—wherever it is found, whether it be in the church or outside the church. We believe in a God, Christ, Holy Spirit, Heaven, Hell, Devil.

We are yours for Salvation of Souls,

A. G. and V. E. Anderson,
Evangelists.

FAIR AND AUTO SHOW MAKE THEIR BOW NEXT WEDNESDAY

City Council Grants Permission To Auto Committee To Widen Auditorium Doors.

STAGE NEARLY SET FOR FAIR

Vice President W. L. Martin And General Manager Huntington Of The Soo Will Be Present On Second Day.

Motoria, the goddess of the automobile world, ascends her throne at the Auditorium Wednesday afternoon, there to rule for two days at the first motor car exposition, which will be a big feature of the Mid-Winter Fair and Home Products Dinner to be held next Wednesday and Thursday, January 19 and 20. The auto show is now assured by the action of the city council at their meeting held on Tuesday evening, when they granted permission to the committee in charge of the event, to widen the front doors of the Auditorium in order to get the machines into the hall. 1916 models of the Buick, [illegible] Paige, Overland and Saxon, all of which are handled by local dealers compose the list of cars at the present time to be displayed.

Secretary Fred T. Lincoln received word [illegible] from Vice President W. L. Martin and General Manager Huntington of the Soo Line, that they would be very much pleased to be present on the second day of the fair, and both of the men will make addresses in the evening.

The big Mid-Winter Fair and Round-Up, planned by the Commercial club, will be held two days instead of one, thus giving local merchants and manufacturers an opportunity to place their exhibits and profit by at least one and one-half days showing.

This has been decided by the general committee and the opening day will be designated as "Thief River Falls Day," Wednesday, January 19, at 2 p. m., when Mayor Gambell will formally open the fair and the Auditorium will be open to visitors and spectators.

For the opening day, the nominal sum of ten cents admission including the afternoon and evening program, will be charged. The Auditorium should be packed on the opening day and the program, as given below, includes interesting addresses, vocal and instrumental music and a number of special events worth five times the admission price.

The fair management is not aiming to make any big financial profit from the fair and has been very liberal in the price of space, the farmers in particular being shown special courtesies, they not being charged for space to exhibit. Exhibitors at the fair will not be charged an admission, but the dinner will be 25 cents to one and all.

Many Visitors.

It will be noted that the evening program for the opening day is an interesting one and a large number of outside visitors are expected while it is urged that Thief River Falls people in particular turn out and give the fair their support by their presence.

The space has been divided off this week and booths will be arranged and made ready for the opening day, Wednesday, the first of the coming week. Secretary Lincoln of the Commercial club warns exhibitors and all committees of the importance of being prompt and having every detail arranged for the opening day, in order that there may be no confusion when Mayor Gambell takes the rostrum to say, "welcome to our city," Wednesday afternoon, January 19, at 2 o'clock.

"McDaniel's Kitchen" will not be located on the left side of the entrance, as heretofore announced but will be located in the Auditorium basement. The reason for the change is that there is a larger amount of space and that better accommodations can be afforded. The luncheon will be of the "stand-up" order and will be served from twelve to three o'clock. After three o'clock the Commercial club will maintain a booth, where lunch will be served to those arriving late.

The Woman's club will have an attractive booth and corner for serving refreshments, and the high school booth, showing the work of the manual training and domestic science departments will be of special interest. Take it all in all, everything points to one of the most successful and interesting gatherings of Pennington county people in the history of this city and this being the first attempt of this kind, it is hoped that local people will co-operate and do their part to make the fair a record-breaker.

TIMES SECURES ADVERTISING EXPERT

T. J. Austed, Prominent Newspaper Man And Expert Printer, Joins Force of This Paper.

The Times force has this week been augmented by the addition thereto of T. J. Austed, a practical printer and newspaper man, who has given special attention to the writing and composition of advertising matter. This department of the Times has grown to such proportions that it is deemed advisable to put it under the direction of one who can devote the necessary attention to its development.

Mr. Austed was for years connected with the Grand Rapids Herald-Review, everywhere regarded as one of the really great country papers of Minnesota, and his former employers pay him the following tribute in the last issue of that paper:

"About twenty-two years ago when the Herald-Review was young T. J. Austed came up from Duluth to accept a position in the mechanical department of this institution. Tom was young then, too, but he soon demonstrated that he was a naturally good printer and remained as foreman for about eight years. Becoming possessed of a notion that he wanted to see some of the world outside, he departed and saw about eight years of it, acquiring much valuable experience as printer and reporter in many cities and towns. Then he came back home four years ago and has served as one of the Herald-Review's most valuable assets in various capacities, aiding very substantially in making this one of Minnesota's leading weekly newspapers. Now he goes to Thief River Falls to join R. H. Ross in making the Times of that thriving city bloom and blossom into a typographical and journalistic gem. We regret to lose Tom Austed, because such men as he are not to be found every day, but we sincerely congratulate "Dick" Ross, the Times and the people of Thief River Falls. He will make the Times, which is a good paper, a decidedly better one. He is one of the best all 'round newspaper men we know and as a printer he is an artist. The Herald-Review wishes him that abundant success which his talents, industry, loyalty to the interests which he serves, and splendid personal qualities so richly deserve."

New "Joy Wagons" Arrive.

Two bright and shiny 1916 model Saxon cars were unloaded at the Great Northern station Tuesday afternoon, the consignees being Dr. C. R. Crandall and Secretary Fred T. Lincoln, respectively. This will be "Link's" first experience of managing a "benzine buggy," but with a little coaching, promises to "burn up" as many tires as "De Resta" 'em. Dr. Crandall has just recently accepted the agency for the Saxon car.

DISTRICT COURT APPOINTS CITY CHARTER COMMISSION

Matter Was Taken Up By Old City Council—Petition Signed By 146 Freeholders.

IMMEDIATE ACTION EXPECTED

New City Charter Thought Necessary To Remedy A Number of Important Provisions Not In Charter Now In Force.

A short time ago a petition to the district court for the appointment of a charter commission to draft a new charter for Thief River Falls was prepared by the city council and presented to Judge Grindeland. It was signed by 146 freeholders, more than the number required by law. Judge Grindeland this week complied with the request of the petitioners and named the members of the charter commission.

This matter has been agitated for some time and now that the petition has been favorably acted upon by the district court and a charter commission has been named it is likely that the work of preparing the charter will be started at once and that it will be presented for the approval of the voters at the earliest possible date.

Following is the order of the court, giving the names of those appointed to serve on the commission:

In the Matter of the Appointment of a Board of Free-Holders to Frame a City Charter for the City of Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota.

A petition having been duly presented to the Judges of the District Court of the Fourteenth Judicial District, State of Minnesota, requesting them to appoint a Board of Freeholders to frame a City Charter for the said City of Thief River Falls, and it appearing that the said petition was signed by 146 qualified voters of said City of Thief River Falls, and that said signers constitute more than ten per cent. of the number of voters of said City of Thief River Falls, as shown by the returns of the election last held therein; and it further appearing that the persons hereinafter named are freeholders of said City of Thief River Falls and have been qualified voters thereof for five years last past. It is therefore ORDERED, That Lars Backe, G. A. Penny, H. G. Hieber, Wilhelm Michelet, Math. Barzen, Anton Langseth, O. F. Mellby, Fred Roth, Daniel Shaw, E. J. Overland, A. H. Akre, Bernhard Knudsen, Halvor Loken, Olaf Ramstad and Milton Forder be, and they are hereby, appointed as such Board of Freeholders to frame a City Charter for the said City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, as prayed for in the said petition, and that Lars Backe act as temporary chairman of said Board until a permanent chairman be elected by the members thereof.

Dated January 8th, 1915.

ANDREW GRINDELAND,
District Judge.
WILLIAM WATTS,
District Judge.

NEW INSURANCE RATE BOOKS SENT OUT THIS WEEK

General Reduction In All Lines Ordered For This Section of The State.

ARE EFFECTIVE AT ONCE

Change In Basic Rates Is Result of Investigation Which Was Started Some Time Ago.

The General Inspection Company of Minneapolis, began this week, sending new rate books to the insurance agents in the counties affected by the reduction in rates recently ordered by Insurance Commissioner, S. D. Works. The order in brief, directs the basic rates in Northern Minnesota to conform with Southern Minnesota.

The towns in Northeastern Minnesota will be re-adjusted as rapidly as possible, and in conformity with the Commissioner's order, taking cognizance of forest exposure conditions which tend to increase the fire hazard. This re-adjustment will be made as rapidly as possible and will probably be completed within the next thirty to sixty days.

The following percentage reduction will apply on rates now in force on property in the following counties: Anoka, Chisago, Isanti, Sherburne, Ottertail, Wilkin, Clay, Mahnomen, Norman, Becker, Red Lake, Pennington, Polk, Marshall and Kittson, with exception of the following towns in Ottertail county: Fergus Falls, Dalton and French; Wilkin county: Breckenridge, Foxhome, Everdell, Doran, Campbell, Tenney and Nashua; Anoka county: Anoka.

Brick or stone mercantile buildings now having rates made before July 1st, 1915: 20 per cent. discount on building rate; 10 per cent. discount on contents rate.

Brick or stone mercantile buildings having rates made after July 1st, 1915: 10 per cent. discount on building rate; 10 per cent. discount on contents rate.

On all frame, iron clad, hollow concrete, brick block or brick veneer mercantile buildings: 15 per cent discount on building rate; 15 per cent discount on contents rate.

These discounts are only to apply on renewals, or new business, and reductions are to continue in force only until such time as the risks may be reinspected or rerated by the revised schedule, filed with the state insurance department.

The rates on dwellings are reduced in all 5th class towns in these counties on brick or stone buildings from 32c to 24c (reduction 25 per cent.), on frame dwellings with stone or brick foundation from 40c to 32c (reduction 20 per cent.), on frame dwellings without stone or brick foundation from 60c to 52c (reduction 13 1-3 per cent).

On brick or stone building from 45c to 36c (reduction 20 per cent).

On frame buildings with stone or brick foundation, from 54c to 45c (reduction 20 per cent).

A Last Word To Exhibitors

Exhibitors at the mid-winter fair are urged to be prepared to arrange their booths early, in order to be ready for the opening day, Wednesday, January 19, at 2 p. m. The booth frames will be put up Monday and the Auditorium open Tuesday in order that there may be no excuse for being behind when the time comes to open the fair.

The committee is working hard to make this fair a success. It cannot do this without the co-operation of local merchants and manufacturers. The following completed list to date shows those who have engaged space at the fair. The invitation has been general and if any who at the eleventh hour make up their minds they would like to exhibit, find space taken, the committee cannot be blamed.

We are to have between 500 and 1,000 people in attendance at the fair each day and evening, judging from indications and inquiries. This is the first attempt here to conduct an event of this nature and it requires united effort to make it the success it is bound to be if the public gives its support and our business men act PROMPTLY. Please "DO IT NOW."

The list of exhibitors follows:

Merchants: Wold & Co., Loken Bros., Lieberman Bros., Korstad Bros., Black's Sweet Shop, Laing Hardware Co., Anton Langseth, Holt & George, Zeh & Curran.

Manufacturers: Thief River Manufacturing Co., Thief River Grocery Company, Hanson-Barzen Co., Tessum Seed, Grain & Supply Co., Times, News-Press, Model Laundry, Safety Bracket Co., George Kootsikos, Farmers Elevator Co., Northern Culvert Co., Jung Bros., Prichard Company, Winton-Nichols Company, Sharp Printing & Manufacturing Co.

Pres. Vincent Here Feb. 16.

The last number of the Lyceum Course that is being conducted under the auspices of the Woman's club, will be February 16, and it will undoubtedly be the best of the entire course. Pres. Geo. E. Vincent of the University of Minnesota, will deliver a lecture on that date and to all who have heard of Pres. Vincent nothing more need be said. He has been styled the "rapid fire" orator, which is a perfect description of his ability. He can say more in thirty minutes than most public speakers can in thirty hours and every word comes straight from the shoulder with a "punch" that drives it straight home. On the evening of February 16th the Auditorium should be packed to capacity.

Bowling Contest.

Manager Roberts announces that he expects to have a bowling team here from Red Lake Falls on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week to meet the crack pin spillers of this city on his alleys on LaBree avenue. The exact date of the contest will be announced later. Mr. Roberts is interested in having a bowling league formed by the various towns in this section of the state and if his plans materialize some corking good games will be seen in this city. At any rate an effort will be made to organize a city league and this alone will mean a number of spirited contests.

CO. BOARD SETTLES PRINTING MATTER

Times Designated As Official County Paper At Meeting Of Board Held Wednesday Afternoon.

At the meeting of the county commissioners held Wednesday of this week the county printing matter, which was held open from the meeting last week, was settled and the Thief River Falls Times was designated by the board as the official paper of Pennington county for the year. All of the official printing of the county will appear in the Times, which means that it will go into practically every home in the county. This will be most satisfactory to the taxpayers and will give the official business of the county the best possible publicity.

GOOD GAME ON FOR TOMORROW'S CARD

Local High School Quint Will Endeavor To Put Crimp In Fast Ada Five.

Facing what Coach Johnson thinks will probably be one of the hardest tests of the season, the Thief River Falls high school basketball quint has been working hard to be in shape for the opening game of the 1916 season, which will be played against the Ada team Friday evening at the Lincoln gym. Although nothing startling has been heard of Ada's record this season, it is generally conceded that this quint is formidable.

Coach Johnson is using every available man in the high school line-up and Tuesday evening the regulars dashed off play after play against several former high school stars and "scrubs," with a precision that was creditable. A strange floor and a speedy group of opponents is likely to spell defeat for the Ada five, and will put the local team one step nearer toward capturing the district championship.

This will be the last game on the home floor for at least three weeks, after which the games will be played at McIntosh, Fosston and Crookston. The contest will start at 8 o'clock sharp.

"Oyster Patties" Were Popular.

One of the most interesting programs and best "stand-up" lunches of the winter was given at the Commercial club rooms last Friday evening. The lunch consisted of "oyster patties with trimmings" and proved to be some palate tickler for the large number who attended. The lunch was followed by the Thief River Falls Concert band. At this juncture, President Johnson called upon Attorney G. Halvorson for the report of the drainage committee. Mr. Halvorson stated that the committee had met with the farmers in the town of Hickory to discuss the flood situation there and had met with much success. He also said that he had consulted with parties at Grand Forks, Crookston and other places, with a view of securing some financial aid to help carry out the plans to secure a temporary relief for the farmers in the town of Hickory, and the plan was being met with very heartily.

CROOKSTON DOWNED IN OPENING HOCKEY GAME OF SEASON

"Would Be" Champions Return Home Sunday Evening, Sadder, But Wiser Boys.

GAME INTENSELY INTERESTING

Thief River Falls, 2; Crookston, 1.

The first real hockey game ever played in Thief River Falls took place last Sunday at the Municipal ice rink, when the local septet faced the Crookston seven, which has held the amateur championship of Minnesota for four years, and defeated the visitors by one point.

At 3:30 a large crowd gathered around the fenced rectangle to witness the first game of hockey, with a heavy snow falling. Both teams made their appearance amid loud cheering. Crookston entered the game over-confident for the reason that it was the first time Thief River Falls had a team in the field, but after a few minutes play they fully realized what kind of a problem they had to solve. At instances Crookston had the puck well within their territory but failed to bring home the bacon at the proper moment.

"Pug" Peterson of the Crookston team was the first man to score. A few minutes later the local team scored two in succession: Hagen making the first and Backus the second.

All those who saw the local team make its initial debut last Sunday with the 2 to 1 victory over the Crookston aggregation, were more impressed with the possibilities of the team than the actual performance, which, while fully up to the standard of the visiting team, fell short of what may be expected throughout the balance of the season. The teamwork has not been perfected as yet, but it cannot be denied that the team did splendid work for the fact that it was their first game. With the defeat of the Crookston team, claimants of the amatuer championship for the past four years, it seems as though the local team will win all if not most of its games on its own ice, and on strange ice as well.

Manager G. Howard Smith announces the second game of the season for next Sunday, if weather permits, when the Roseau team will try conclusions with the local hockeyists at the Municipal rink. The game will start at 2:30 p. m.

The line-up:

MAYOR STARTS LAW ENFORCEMENT

Lid Was Clamped On Tight Sunday And Chief Berge Carries Out Orders To The Letter.

Thief River Falls was some "tight" town last Sunday. Pool rooms, bowling alleys, grocery stores, meat markets, clothing stores, in fact all lines of business except drug stores, eating houses and confectionery stores, were closed up tight. The order was sent forth by Mayor Gambell last Saturday and Chief of Police Berge carried out the orders. All of the places of business were notified and all complied with the order.

The state law requires that certain places of business and amusement be closed on Sunday but there appears to be some question as to just how for reaching this law is and the county attorney has asked the attorney general of the state to give his opinion on it. To date an answer has not been received by the county attorney and at the present time there is much speculation as to just what places of business can and cannot remain open on Sunday. The attorney general's opinion will undoubtedly be received before next Sunday and the matter will then be somewhat clearer that it is at present.

Annual Election.

The annual election of the Commercial club will be held at the club rooms Thursday, January 27, at 8 o'clock p. m. All members in good standing are entitled to a vote at this election.

Secretary.

MASSACRED BY VILLA'S ORDERS

Sixteen Americans and Two British Subjects Slain.

SHOT DOWN IN COLD BLOOD

Party Returning to Chihuahua to Reopen Mines Taken From Train and Executed After Being Robbed of Money and Stripped of Clothing.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 13.—The worst massacre of peaceful Americans in Mexican history was detailed in official messages received here telling how sixteen United States citizens and two British subjects were dragged from a Mexico Northwestern train, robbed of $25,000, stripped of their clothing and stood naked along the railway track to be shot down in cold blood.

The murders, the report said, resulted from orders given by Francisco Villa, the bandit, to kill all Americans and foreigners his followers meet. Villa was reported personally to have commanded the firing squad.

The firing squad started to shoot the eighteen men one at a time. Seeing death was inevitable several attempted to flee, but were shot and killed as they ran.

The shrieks of the murdered men were heard by Thomas Holmes, who was on the train at the time of the robbery, but who escaped and carried the news to Chihuahua.

Slowness of Carranza officials to take action resulted in a mass meeting being held in which mine owners denounced the Washington policy toward Mexico.

Victims Returning to Mines.

The men who were murdered were on their way back to their mines in Mexico. They had been granted passports by the United States and had received assurances of safety from the Carranza government. They had asked that an escort of 100 soldiers accompany them, but their request was denied.

Confirmation of the massacre was contained in messages from British Vice Consul Scobell of Chihuahua to H. C. Myles, the British diplomatic agent here.

Fifteen bandits stopped the train at Santa Ysable, Chihuahua. The mining party consisted of officials and employes of the Cusi Mining company, of which Potter Palmer of Chicago is president.

The eighteen men were going to reopen the Cusi company's rich silver mines at Cusihuirachie, Chihuahua. The official list of dead follows:

Charles R. Watson, general manager Cusi Mining company; William J. Wallace, E. L. Robinson, George W. Newman, M. B. Romero, T. M. Evans, Richard A. McHatton, Charles Wadleigh, J. P. Coy, Avery E. Couch, Alexander Hall, J. W. Woon, Charles A. Pringle, W. D. Pearce, Maurice Anderson, H. C. Hasse, R. H. Simmons and J. Adams.

The majority lived in El Paso.

TEN DEAD, FORTY INJURED IN WRECK

Brandon, Man., Jan. 13.—Ten men were killed and forty injured in a collision between a snow clearing train and a heavily laden stock train a mile east of Brandon.

The victims are chiefly foreigners employed in the snow clearing gang. About sixty men were in the caboose of the snow train.

The dead and dying lay in a temperature 46 degrees below zero. The cold added to the difficulty of rescue.

COAL SCARCE IN ST. JOHN

Distress Feared as War Cuts Off Colony's Supply.

St. John, N. B., Jan. 13.—The colony, and the city of St. John in particular, faces a coal famine. With weather of the usual frigid temperature prevailing, stores have been depleted until little more than a fortnight's supply of fuel at high prices remains.

No further shipments are in immediate prospect, and some distress is feared. The condition is a direct result of the war.

Streets of City Inundated.

Weston, W. Va., Jan. 13.—With flood waters from the west fork of the Monongahela river six feet deep in the principal streets and the river rising six inches an hour flood conditions here took on a most serious aspect. One man is known to have been drowned and scores of families have been driven from their homes.

Ten Whales Washed Ashore.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 13.—Ten whales, weighing from 1,000 to 3,000 pounds each, were washed ashore at Cape Hatteras. Marine men believe the whales were part of a school and that they either were struck by ships and killed or were washed ashore by the northeast gale that swept the Atlantic coast recently.

SERIOUS BLOW TO THE ALLIES

Austrians Take Mount Lovcen in Montenegro.

CAPITAL IS THREATENED

Summit of Captured Position Dominates Cettinje, but a Few Miles Distant—Germans Hold Slight Gains as Result of Fighting in West.

London, Jan. 13.—Announcement of the occupation by the Austrians of Mount Lovcen, in Montenegro, has caused uneasiness. The loss of Lovcen from the point of view of the allies is serious, because its summit dominates Cattaro bay, the Austrian naval base.

Before Italy entered the war the French had established guns on the mountain and had prepared emplacements for heavy guns which could have swept the bay. Austria, by seizing it, forestalls this danger and is in a commanding position with regard to Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, which is a little more than six miles distant, although sheltered by intervening mountains.

The Austrian advance, considering the distance to be covered, was much slower than that made in the Teuton conquest of Serbia, but in consideration of the formidable obstacles which the mountainous character of the country presents it is conceded the invaders are making steady progress.

Think Entente Allies Slow.

The question is being anxiously raised as to why the entente allies did not send aid long ago to the Montenegrins, and in particular why Italy, which is affected more acutely by this Austrian invasion, had not taken preventive measures.

The Austrians are only ten miles from the capital of Montenegro, calculating the distance over existing roads, and a successful blow at the heart of the country may have the effect of isolating the troops who are defending the northern frontier, it is said by military critics.

In the Champagne the Germans hold a slight gain, made as a result of the determined offensive of Saturday and Sunday. The French military authorities say the German forces which delivered the attack lost heavily.

From the Eastern front dispatches affirm that the Russians have been so successful in consolidating their new positions that the Austro-Germans have begun to remove the supplies from bases established in preparation for a spring advance.

OPPOSITION IS DWINDLING

British Commons Certain to Pass Conscription Bill.

London, Jan. 13.—Opposition to the government's compulsion bill dwindled to a meager handful in parliament and predictions in the lobby of the house of commons were that the vote on the second reading will find little more than twenty or thirty in opposition, as contrasted with 105 on the first reading.

The Irish Nationalists announced abandonment of their opposition, in view of the fact that the bill does not apply to Ireland. John Redmond, the veteran home rule leader, who made this announcement, shared the most prominent position in the debate with his old enemy, Sir Edward Carson, who, in a fiery speech, pleaded that Ireland ought to be included in the bill.

According to present arrangements the bill will reach the house of lords within ten days.

RELIEF SUPPLIES SHIPPED

Red Cross Sends Aid to France, Belgium and Montenegro.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Several large shipments of war relief supplies to France, Belgium and Montenegro have been made by the American Red Cross in the past few days. These shipments include more than 29,000 pounds of hospital equipment and women's and children's clothing to the American relief clearing house in Paris; 680 pounds of convalescent garments, bandages and socks to the Belgian Red Cross, and 10,248 pounds of supplies for the Montenegrin Red Cross at Cettinje.

BRITAIN GETS MAIL PROTEST

American Note Has Been Delivered at London.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Ambassador Page at London advised the state department that he had delivered to the British foreign office the American note regarding the detention and censoring by the British authorities of mail from the United States to European neutral countries.

The text of the communication probably will not be given out until arrangements have been made for its publication simultaneously in this country and Great Britain.

Voorhees Rallies Slowly.

Rochester, Minn., Jan. 16.—The condition of Theodore Voorhees, president of the Reading railroad, continues to be satisfactory to physicians in charge.

SCHOOL ELECTION CARRIES.

At the special school election held on Tuesday evening the proposition to issue $35,000 bonds for a new high school building, carried by a vote of 81 in favor of bonds to 9 against. The school board being provided with the necessary funds will now proceed to procure plans and advertise for bids, so that the work of building may be commenced early in the spring. The almost unanimous vote in favor of the bonds shows how the people of Warren feel toward the public schools and the cause of education in general.—Warren Sheaf.

BANK OFFICERS ELECTED.

The board of directors of the Citizens State Bank of Grygla held their annual meeting Wednesday evening in the bank parlors. Everything in connection with the business was found very satisfactory. The following officers were elected: President, Olaf Ramstad; Vice President, A. O. Fladeland; Cashier, A. J. Andersen; Ass't Cashier, J. H. Peterson; Directors, J. F. Brown and T. L. Melgaard.—Grygla Eagle.

INJUNCTION ORDERED BY CITIZENS.

Judge C. W. Stanton has filed a temporary restraining order against the county commissioners of Clearwater county restraining them from buying the Independent school building at Bagley to be used as a court house. A hearing will be held in the matter Jan. 13.

A permanent injunction has been requested by several residents of Clearbrook, who are represented by Attorney Eveson of that village.

The county commissioners at a recent meeting offered the school district $10,000 for the building in Bagley to be used as a court house. At an election it was decided by the school district to sell the building as a new school will be constructed in the near future.

The county commissioners were to have accepted the school districts proposition and the exchange made Tuesday.

The Clearwater county court house is at present located in a wooden building in Bagley. The building is very inadequate, and many of the county officers have not been able to find room in the building for offices. All the county records are in danger of fire as the vault space is limited.

The action taken by the county commissioners in securing the school building was believed by many to have been the best remedy for the situation and would give the county an excellent court house.—Bemidiji Pioneer.

Mayor's Message to City Council.

To the Members o fthe City Council of Thief River Falls.

Gentlemen:—

Pursuant to custom in so far as the form is concerned, I have the honor, as Chief Executive of the City, to submit to you for your consideration, this communication. As far as the spirit is concerned, I take it as special privilege to address you where neither custom or prestage has naught to say. I realize that I am addressing a body of men who have been selected by the people of the city because of the fact that each one of you have proven yourselves, in your individual work and business, to be worthy of the trust and confidence of the people in carrying on the work and management of this progressive city. Knowing you personally I realize that you have a heart and feeling in common to work for the good and upgrowth of this community. I believe that you have been wisely selected in that you represent all classes and conditions of men justly. Such being the case, I do not hesitate in bringing forward the few recommendations and suggestions which are uppermost in my mind.

I realize that the important requirements for the city for the next two years are problems not solved tonight. I am glad that it is impossible to, even should we wish. Questions will bob up and the people will clamor for action long before proper consideration can be given. A night to sleep over a question is a very good rule to go by. Therefore these suggestions are only a few of the inevitable propositions which are going to present themselves to you for your consideration, and the better that you can get informed the less likely will you be influenced contrary to your good judgment.

I believe that it will be imperative for you to take up early the question of supplying to the people water fit and proper for drinking and cooking purposes through our splendid system of water mains. These reach into the homes, the flats, the hotels, the store and offices now, carrying an abundance of water and yet when there is thirst and a drink is required, some well is sought probably a shallow one shaded between two houses with poor sanitary surroundings, it may be at a good distance from the person's place of business, and not only time is lost but poor water is secured and the health of the patient is jeopordized, causing the loss of time and health and money to the community in case of sickness.

Then will come the question of the light for the city. While you can only do a part of the deciding of this important question, yet you can do a very important as it is the first part you deal with. As we grow, and we are bound to; we are going to require more power. It will be the question of installing another engine or securing natural resources.

Another question which has agitated the minds of the people in the past is the question of paving. I believe that you should get ready this year with a block or two, having everything in readiness so that the pavement would not need to be disturbed when once laid, and then lay the pavement the next year with the ground settled and a good bed for the pave material while I think that you will need to consider the question of economy in the use of the money intrusted to you, still the chief expense of the paving will be met by the property abuting the street paved, and not by the taxpayers in general. It is a known fact that dirt streets can stand up to only a certain amount of rough usage and travel, and from our observance of certain streets each and everyone of us can testify that they have had their limit and more in the past. The question of paving will be forced upon you when you are not ready and it will be wrong to expend money on streets poorly prepared.

There are other questions that I would be pleased to present in the future, such as the "City Beautiful," "A New Charter," "A City Manager," and other questions of importance that will arise.

Respectfully submitted.

F. H. GAMBELL.

On motion duly carried the meeting adjourned.

C. W. ACKERMAN,

A. H. FASEL,
City Clerk.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over an heirloom, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also, the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the girl, Esther, reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther. Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so does his companion and cousin, Blair Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley. In stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem.

Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventuress, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Esther's being received in Fairfax society. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen demented. Marmaduke Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning Arthur is a fugitive he seeks Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving for the west. Their train is robbed, Vivian losing the diamond, which a slain train robber drops in the desert. The $10,000 he stole is found by Arthur, now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment and Esther is in Richmond society. Abe Bloom, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman. Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich he buys Stanley hall, sold at auction, through Blake, and also provides for Hagar and Esther. Luke Lovell buys the diamond from the squaw, but loses it in a fight. Vivian, desiring aid to ensnare Arthur, sends for Blair.

Vivian is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Esther to deliver to Arthur. Blair and Luke go to Arthur's yacht and find Esther there.

Esther and Quabba escape while Blair and Luke battle. Blair in the meantime has joined Vivian in Los Angeles. Durand, "king of diamonds," a crook known to Vivian, goes to a saloon to try to discover the diamond. There he meets Luke Lovell. Esther and Arthur appear on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles in care of the physician-crook, Durand. Esther follows and is refused admittance to see him. In the meantime the diamond is found by two bill posters, one of whom murders the other for it. Arthur is "doped" by Durand. De Vaux and Vivian, although Blair, who has taken charge of Arthur's business affairs, protests.

The diamond passes in dice play from the bill poster to Santley, circus owner, who is killed, and the diamond is put up at auction as part of his estate. Blair and Vivian falsify a telegram from Blake to Arthur, making Arthur believe he suffered from hallucination in thinking he saw Esther. Luke is "railroaded" to prison by Blair. At the auction is Homer Graydon, an aged admirer of Vivian, who has promised to buy the diamond for her. He is outbid by Arthur. The latter gives a costume ball at which Esther appears. Vivian insists that he choose between them. Esther snatches the diamond from him and hurls it through the window.

CHAPTER XLIX.

Plot and Counterplot.

THE miracle of dawn crimsoned all the east. The last boisterous revelers were departing from the fete of the mad millionaire.

Only the butler, as major domo, had speeded the parting guests, but the guests had reveled and gorged and swilled and cared nothing at heart for host or mansion that had entertained them with a Belshazzarian feast.

And it was a Belshazzarian feast, and the handwriting of destruction was on the wall.

In the small reception room upstairs the unhappy wretch once called the golden man sobbed on his arms like the drug weakling he was. Vivian, her hair in disorder and vixen-like in her anger and grief, shook Arthur by the shoulder and cried, "Where is the diamond?"

There, down below, was Angelo, the Italian gardener, up at dawn to his work, plucking the diamond from the sky from the rosebush, just where it had been cast through the window by the indignant Esther when Arthur had proffered it to her.

"Hi, there, you!" called Blair. "Don't take that! I am coming down for it."

The gardener, who, like the rest of the servants, bore a sullen dislike to the whilom friends who surrounded their master, growled an unintelligible reply.

Durand, who sensed that the diamond had been found, sprang from the room and made for the stairway, with Blair beside him. They ran from the front of the house and to the back. But the gardener picked up a heavy stake lying by the rosebush and stood them off.

"I take to the boss!" he said. Nor would he be shaken from his resolve.

Vivian Shook Arthur by the Shoulder.

And Durand and Blair, cursing his stubbornness, escorted him back into the house and to Arthur.

Vivian, realizing the diamond was recovered, had ceased her vixenish demands and was again resorting to wiles and cajolement.

But Arthur, shaken with shame and wholly unnerved that they had deceived him as regards Esther's presence in the city, his shame augmented by the realization that Esther knew now how he had fallen in his drug addiction, took the diamond and staggered from the room, with a few muttered thanks to the gardener.

Reaching his suit, he locked the diamond in an ornate cabinet by the great rear window of his bedroom and then, pacing up and down, fought the devil of drug desire for Esther's sake—and lost again.

The English lawyer Smythe, a knight in armor in all sooth, escorted the shaken Esther to her hotel, having picked up the watching and waiting Quabba in front of the Powell mansion and taken him with them in the taxicab. The next day she consulted him about her affairs.

"I will see you safely back to Richmond," said Smythe gently. "Your mother, you say, has recovered and you wish to return to her. I am going back to England resolved to let the American heir or heirs to the Stanley earldom claim the title when he or they may choose."

"But what shall I do about Luke Lovell?" asked Esther. "All his life, except for the brief revolt he now begs forgiveness for, he served my mother faithfully."

She Consulted Smythe About Her Affairs.

"I would suggest," said Smythe, "that our friend Quabba here stay behind us and see what he can do. He may secure Lovell's release by appealing to Arthur Stanley, or, as he calls himself now, John Powell."

"I have no faith in Arthur now," said Esther wearily. "He has fallen into evil ways through evil associations."

But in her steadfast heart Esther resolved to say nothing to Smythe now nor Hagar later regarding Arthur's drug addiction.

"Well," suggested the English lawyer, "our friend Quabba here can keep us posted, and we may be able to take up the matter of endeavoring to secure Lovell's release from this unjust incarceration after we return to Richmond. No doubt he chafes fearfully in his prison cell."

Quabba was an Italian gypsy, and his new friend and compatriot, the gardener at the Powell mansion, was at the train with him when he bade his respectful adieus to his young mistress and to Smythe.

On the way back from the depot the gardener, deeming Quabba needed cheering, led him to the garden restaurant La Bella Napoli. It was a humble place, an arbored resort frequented by Italian working people. Signora Solari made them welcome.

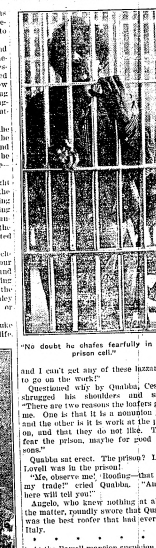
"She has no good looks," whispered Quabba's friend, "but you should see her daughter Rosa! Ah, Rosa is a charmer, and how she will smile at you if you pay for the better wine! You should see her!"

It was fated that Quabba was to see the ravishing Rosa. De Vaux, a lady killer, to his way of thinking, had also seen the ravishing Rosa.

She had smiled at De Vaux in passing, and he had followed her to the garden La Bella Napoli. A citizen of the world, the dapper count, who spoke Italian charmingly, knew well how to ingratiate himself into the favor of the landlady's daughter and the landlady. De Vaux ordered the high priced chianti on which there was the good profit.

From their distant table in the garden Quabba and the Powell gardener noted all this, but kept their distance unseen and unnoticed by the languishing De Vaux. Fate was playing into the hands of Quabba and his friend at their table in the corner. He had a grievance, had Cesare, the contractor. He proclaimed it.

"Look you," he said. "I get a contract—a good contract—to fix a roof, and I can't get any of these lazzaroni to go on the work!"



"No doubt he chafes fearfully in his prison cell."

Questioned why by Quabba, Cesare shrugged his shoulders and said: "There are two reasons the loafers give me. One is that it is a nonunion job, and the other is it is work at the prison, and that they do not like. They fear the prison, maybe for good reasons."

Quabba sat erect. The prison? Luke Lovell was in the prison!

"Me, observe me! Roofing—that was my trade!" cried Quabba. "Angelo here will tell you!"

Angelo, who knew nothing at all of the matter, roundly swore that Quabba was the best roofer that had ever left Italy.

At the Powell mansion suspicion, plot and counterplot were the aftermath of the grand fete. Arthur announced that he would return to his business affairs and had hinted that he was prepared to pay Durand handsomely for his services as a physician and would be relieved if he and his familiar, De Vaux, would go about their affairs.

He drew a check for a large sum and gave it to Durand. But Durand had no intention of departing without the great diamond, word of which had drawn him to this place.

Durand had held threats over Vivian of disclosing their former swindling association to both Blair and Arthur did she not aid him and keep silent. On her part Vivian promised, but in her heart she was resolved that she alone would have the diamond.

Arthur's return to his office was made a happy affair by his employees. His desk bore a large horseshoe of flowers, and his secretary welcomed him back to health and his business in an earnest little speech.

Arthur, speaking as John Powell, their employer, thanked them feelingly and alluded to the loyalty and service of his kinsman from Virginia, Blair Stanley, who had so ably managed affairs in his absence. The little audience applauded and the business of the day was resumed.

CHAPTER L.

The End of Durand.

ARTHUR was grateful to Blair. He had been angry when he realized he had been deceived regarding Esther by all who surrounded him in his great mansion since the day he had been brought home shattered and insensible.

But Vivian and Blair had pleaded with significant hints that they had thought it best to accept Durand's suggestion, as Arthur's physician, that his patient be not unduly excited while convalescing. The hints inferred also that this was to shield Esther from the knowledge of the drug weakness; that she had learned, despite the efforts of all, when she had encountered Arthur face to face at the costume ball.

WELCOME BACK

Arthur Was Grateful to Blair.

Arthur had reluctantly concluded Blair and Vivian had meant well, but it began to dawn upon him that Durand was responsible for the drug addiction that now mastered him.

"He had better have let me die," Arthur confessed to Blair. "I shall get ride of him and his creature, De Vaux, and you and Vivian will help me cure myself, won't you, Blair? I want to go back to Esther clean and whole. I will divide all I have with you and Vivian if you will only help me. Say you will!" And Arthur clung to Blair and pleaded, and Blair glibly promised.

Handsomely paid for his services, good and bad, Durand affected to philosophically accept his dismissal. He proposed "one good night of it" before he left with De Vaux for the east, and the one good night took the form of a poker game in the Powell library.

* * * * * * * *

In Richmond, at the Riverview sanitarium, Hagar had almost wholly recovered. The clot upon her brain caused by the cruel blow Blair had struck her had been absorbed. Her memory came back to her. But the death, after a stroke of paralysis, of Blair's mother and meditation during her convalescence had broadened Hagar's gypsy nature to a disposition of forgiveness.

The sorrow she had undergone in the disappointment Arthur, her profligate son, had been to her also chastened Hagar's proud spirit.

Through Esther's letters she now knew that Arthur in all his wealth and luxury had surrounded himself with evil company and that Blair and the adventuress, Vivian Marston, were among his familiars and parasites.

But one thing she did not know, and that was Arthur had fallen into the clutches of the drug habit. Reunited at the sanitarium, Hagar and Esther embraced and wept when they spoke of Arthur.

"It is greed that has changed him," said Hagar softly. "Money greed—that was his father's curse."

And Hagar's mind reverted to that dreadful night of physical and mental anguish when Arthur had been born to her, and his unnatural father, the dead Matt Harding, had sold his newborn child to Colonel Stanley to further the family ambitions and family hatreds of the Stanleys.

"It was money greed that led poor Luke Lovell to revolt and evil courses," continued Hagar. "I am happy to know that Luke is contrite of heart in all save his present desire for vengeance on Arthur and his associates, who have betrayed and imprisoned him ungenerously, as he thinks."

"He is very bitter to them," murmured Esther. "He asks your forgiveness, mother dear, and longs to return and serve you faithfully again. But he will not be stirred from his determination to have vengeance."

"'Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord; I will repay,'" said Hagar softly as her hands subconsciously closed upon the Bible she was holding in her lap.

"We will return home, to your home, my dear child, to Stanley hall," whispered Hagar when she regained her composure. "There we will discuss the plans I have long meditated upon since my recovery and in your absence.

"Perhaps this good friend will go with us and give us the benefit of his able counsel." And she turned to the sympathetic, eccentric English lawyer, who had accompanied Esther from the west, and again thanked him brokenly for his kindness to and his protection of Esther.

* * * * * * * *

"You a fine bum roofer!" the contractor was declaring scornfully. "You no good for nottin'!"

Quabba shrugged his shoulders and replied, "Ha, what you tink you get for a scab job, a jeweler?"

"All right, tomorrow I fire you and hire the monkey you have. He gotta da more brains!" And the contractor spat in disgust and threw down the loop of scaffold ropes he was carrying and hobbled away.

Quabba raised his voice in sing song protest, mingling Romany expressions with his jargon of Italian and broken English, and he did so with a purpose, and the purpose had its effect.

At his cell window below the eaves of the prison roof the shaved and shorn Luke Lovell caught the gypsy jargon.

Luke tapped three times upon the bar at his window. Quabba heard and understood. He tapped three times in reply upon the gutter.

Then, taking a ball of cord from his breast, Quabba slipped a hacksaw from the tools, and, peering over the roof to note no watchful eyes observed, he lowered the instrument of liberty to the cell window.

In was drawn within, and then Quabba whispered over the gutter edge in Romany that he had a rope tied to the cord and that the other extremity of the rope was fastened to the chimney.

Further directions as to where Quabba would wait for the prisoner with a change of clothing were whispered in the gypsy tongue. The next night was the time appointed.

* * * * * * * *

At the Powell mansion "the last night" is duly celebrated. De Vaux is not there, but Durand and Vivian are with Arthur in the library plying him with liquor and encouraging him to wild and foolish play at cards. Durand has the money for the generous check that Arthur gave him. But the arch crook is not content with this. Congenitally he is a diamond thief, and big diamonds, rare diamonds, valuable diamonds, are his obsession—not to buy them, not to keep them, but to steal them!

In the cabinet in John Powell's room is the diamond from the sky. John Powell, whom he has snatched from the jaws of death and made a drug fiend of, has given Durand his conge as physician and associate, but ere he goes upon his way Durand, the king of diamonds, as the thief world knows him, will have the diamond. Outside, disguised as a workman and hiding in the shrubbery, is Durand's one faithful ally, De Vaux, the jackal, the knave of clubs of "the pack."

Durand has tampered with Vivian, but he does not trust her. Nor does Durand fear Blair, nor even John Powell, the millionaire; once he has the diamond in his hands and safe away.

Durand has lived too close to them all not to be aware that there are certain things in the lives of the two young Virginians that would make them avoid any too close inquiry into their records.

Reunited at the Sanitarium, Hagar and Esther Spoke of Arthur.

"Everybody has a past—generally a bad one," said a cynic philosopher.

What John Powell had done in the days he was Arthur Stanley Durand has not known nor cared. Whatever it is, it is enough that once he, Durand, has the great diamond no legal process to recover it will be dared.

So, while the card game for high stakes without limit is at its height, Durand deftly takes occasion to sift a sleeping powder into the glass of John Powell, whose tongue is thick and whose taste is deadened with his indulgence with wine.

The game breaks up, owing to the sleepy languor of the host, who is led away, and the others retire shortly afterward. But Vivian has betrayed Durand to Blair.

She knows Durand well. She knows once he has the diamond it will be taken abroad to Holland and sold and dissevered.

Hiding in her room after midnight, Blair and Vivian hear Durand creep down the hall. They give him time to enter and to work in the room of the drugged and unconscious master of the house.

Then, on noiseless feet, the desperate Blair steals upon the king of diamonds. Unseen, unheard, Blair creeps behind Durand in the semi-darkness of Arthur's room as the arch thief pries open the cabinet.

Durand has the diamond and gloats over it in the gleam of a hand flashlight. Without a word Blair deals him a blow with all his strength with the slungshot he carries. The blow glances, and Durand, no mean antagonist even for the strong young Virginian, closes in upon his assailant.

They curse and sway and struggle. Blair, held too closely by Durand to give full swing to his deadly weapon, rains blow after blow upon Durand at short range. The costly furnishings of the room are overturned and shattered.

Arthur is roused by the struggle from his drugged sleep and rises, wide eyed, from his bed. Vivian, in a tremor of anxiety in the doorway, switches on the lights full and bright.

At the light Blair rises to a frenzy of murderous activity. He seizes Durand by the throat, his weapon arm now free, and brings the slungshot down with sickening force upon the skull of the bleeding Durand and then casts the battered king of diamonds from him with a mighty effort.

Blair Deals Him a Blow With the Slungshot.

Back, flung like a sack, the arch thief, weak and stunned, falls against the low, wide window and through it down the sheer height to the lawn below, striking full upon his guilty, shattered head, breaking his neck.

But he has carried with him to his death, clutched with a grip Blair could not loosen, the diamond from the sky.

As Durand lies broken and dead upon the ground a moaning figure crouches over him in the shadow. A hand wrests the diamond from the relaxing grasp of the dead swindler, there is a thudding of hurried feet across the lawn, and the watcher is gone, and with him goes the diamond from the sky.

Wolf Spiders.

One of the largest of the family known as wolf spiders is the tarantula of southern Europe, which gets its name from the fact that it abounds in the neighborhood of the Italian city of Tarento. These spiders live in holes in the ground or under stones, from which they wander forth like wolves in search of prey. The bite of such a spider was once considered very poisonous and was supposed to cause a nervous disease called tarantism. The cure for this disease was to dance a wild dance called by its name until the person fell exhausted. Now and then a tarantula journeys to the north from Central America in a bunch of bananas. A large species of spider ranging from Missouri to the south is called the Texas tarantula. At one time this spider was eaten by the Indians, who had the idea that it possessed valuable medicinal properties.—Indianapolis News.

Ringing the Bells.

Conversation in the smoke room of the hotel had got round to haunted houses, and grewsome yarns of mysterious noises and unaccountable bell ringings in a house in the immediate neighborhood were being recounted. But there was a skeptic in the party who made himself heard.

"Come to that," he said, "I ought to be pretty good in the haunting line. I reckon I could make a dozen bells ring in this very place without touching one of them."

"Nonsense!" was the universal chorus, and the young man said never a word. Instead he opened a cupboard door near by and turned off the gas.

In less than two minutes every bell in the house was ringing, and by the time fresh light was shed on the subject the old hands had to admit that the "young 'un certainly knew something."—London Tit-Bits.

Unequally Armed.

Uncle Eph, an old colored man, was up in court accused of stealing a watch. He pleaded not guilty and, moreover, brought against the complainant a countercharge of assault. The man, he declared, had tried to kill him with an iron kettle.

During the cross examination the attorney, Lawyer Bennet, demanded: "Dare you to say that my client attacked you with an iron kettle?"

"Dat what he done, sah," replied Uncle Eph, with a nervous gulp.

"With an iron kettle, eh?" sarcastically reiterated the lawyer. "That's a fine story for a big, strong fellow like you to try to impose upon this honorable court. And had you nothing with which to defend yourself?"

"Only de watch, sah," was the unwary reply. "But what's a watch agin an iron kettle, sah?"—Harper's Magazine.

Mesdames L. G. Larsen and C. A. Pitkin have been appointed by Mrs. Wm. Russell, President 9th Dist. Minnesota Federation of Woman's clubs, to assist her in preparing the program for the district meeting to be held in this city May 4th and 5th.

Mrs. L. G. Larson and her brother, Ray Robinson, a senior in the high school here, returned from Walshville, N. D., last Saturday, where they have been since two weeks before Christmas at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robinson. An unusual feature of the Christmas dinner, and quite remarkable as well, was the reunion of this large family. There are thirteen children all grown to manhood and womanhood and at this dinner there was not a missing link. The children and those who are married, with their families, at the Robinson home during Christmas week numbered thirty-four, thirteen of whom were grand children. In the evening there was a large Christmas tree for the little kiddies as well as for the kiddies grown up. It goes without saying that their's must have been a merry Christmas.

Guests of Mrs. S. Hofto at a six o'clock dinner last Sunday were Messrs. and Mesdames H. Skagen and children, J. E. Nelson, E. O. Thompson and Miss Gina Wig.

Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Barackman very pleasantly entertained the Junior Christian Endeavor which now has a membership of thirty-two, at their home on 518 Main avenue north, last Friday evening. Various children's games were played during the evening after which a dainty luncheon was served.

The Y's T. C.—a boys' club organized by Rev. Barackman in November and so far composed of eighteen real live young Americans between the ages of 12 and 15 years, were entertained at the pastor's home Tuesday night. After an evening thoroughly enjoyed in playing games, light refreshments were served. The regular meeting night is Monday, Tuesday being chosen this week on account of the Chicago Male Quartette at the Auditorium.

Mrs. J. E. Nelson, 903 Knight avenue north, will be hostess to the Dorcas society of the United Lutheran church at her home next Tuesday evening, January 18th.

Truly Remarkable Fire.

J. F. Kielly, an employee of the Soo residing at the corner of Markley avenue and Gulf street, is still wondering just how it all happened. Monday morning he left his home at two o'clock to make his regular run. His wife is away on a visit, having been gone since Christmas, and on leaving he locked the door and took the key with him. He returned home the same day at 4 p. m. and from the exterior everything appeared to be just as he left it. As soon as he opened the door, however, he stepped back amazed. The furniture and interior of his home were black and blistered and everything appeared to be ruined. An investigation convinced him that his property had been damaged by fire to the extent of four or five hundred dollars and he immediately went to the neighbors to find out all about it. No one knew anything of it and he was soon convinced that the fire, after doing the amount of damage above mentioned, went out of itself—just how, he nor no one else will ever know. The fire evidently started from an electric light that must have jarred loose from the wall at the head of the bed, where it was fastened, and struck the bed clothes, being turned on in some manner in falling. As it was one of the old style carbon light it could easily have produced enough heat to ignite the bed clothes. What stopped the fire is another question but the fact that no air could get into the house and that the fire was not close enough to the windows to break them is undoubtedly the solution. Confined in practically an airtight space, it must have spent itself in a short time. It was truly a remarkable fire.

To Utilize Peat.

The peat fields of Minnesota will soon be utilized, according to Director Van H. Manning in the annual report of the bureau of mines, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915. That the Minnesota peat fields possess great potential wealth has already been recognized. James J. Hill is said to have conducted an investigation of the subject and employed experts to go thoroughly into the matter. The results of the Hill investigation are not known, but Mr. Manning says the possibilities for great development are there.

To Don New Togs.

One feature of the basketball game between Ada and Thief River Falls Friday evening, will be the appearance of the high school team in their new basketball garb. The suits arrived during the holidays and as the boys put it, "they are very nifty." The sweaters are colored maroon with two white stripes, and the flippers are of khaki color.

VILLAGE OF ST. HILAIRE

Band Concert A Success.

The St. Hilaire Concert band under the leadership of Ben Lonson of Thief River Falls, rendered one of the most choice musical programs held in St. Hilaire for some years past. The selections rendered by the band were grand and were met with loud applause. Several solos and duets were rendered and were also greatly appreciated, especially the cornet solo by Mr. Lonson. Both the band and Mr. Lonson are due much credit for the showing they made. The audience was not a large as was expected, nor as large as the boys deserved for their efforts. The boys expect to put on another program in the near future and it is hoped the town people will put forth an effort to be present and thereby help the band boys out financially. We are by all means very fortunate in having a band of this class in a village the size of ours and the business men should co-operate with the organization and help a good thing along.

The St. Hilaire orchestra furnished the music for a dance after the performance which was well attended and enjoyed by all present.

BEMIDJI MAN HELD PRISONER.

Cesar Niogret, formerly of Bemidji, who, while fighting at the front for France since the beginning of the European war, has each week received a copy of the Sentinel, is now a prisoner of war in a German camp according to information just received by his brother who lives near Nary. His brother is not able to correspond with him by letter, so that the only means of correspondence is by relatives who live near the western battle line in France, who also send Mr. Niogret some of the good things to eat that are not on the bill of fare of French prisoners of war in Germany. The Germans take the food sent by relatives and deliver it to the prisoner.—Bemidiji Sentinel.

SPELLING CONTEST FOR RURAL PUPILS

Two Will Be Selected To Represent Pennington County At Crookston.

Superintendent of Schools E. A. Mostue announces that two pupils are to be selected from the rural schools of the county to represent this county in the spelling contest to be held at Crookston. These two will be selected by preliminary contests to be held in this county between now and the time set for the contest at Crookston. All teachers are requested to hold spelling contests in their schools each Friday between this date and February 4th, at which time the winners from the various schools in the county will meet in this city and a final contest will be held to decide the two winners.

The contests in each district should consist of 50 words oral, and 25 written. The two standing highest in each district are then sent to Thief River Falls on February 4th when the final contest will be held to decide the two winners to go to Crookston. The following gives the necessary information on the contest to be held at Crookston:

The annual spelling contest in connection with the Farm Crops Show, will be held Tuesday. February 8th, 1916, at Crookston, Minn.

After giving the matter considerable thought, it has been decided to follow the rules of last year.

Each county may send two representatives: these to be selected by the county superintendent. The contestants must be from a one room rural school, or from a grade below the eighth in a consolidated, graded, or semi-graded school. Pupils from a district where a high school is maintained are not eligible.

Both an oral and written test will be given. The oral test will be divided into two parts. For the first part, a list of fifty words will be given and this will count one-half credit for the oral test. The second part of the oral test will be a public spell down, held in the Armory on Tuesday evening. This will count as one-half credit for the oral test. For the written test, the contestants will be asked to write some selection from dictation. In marking these papers, the judges will consider the spelling of the words, the use of capitals, periods and question marks.

The railroad fare for the contestants is to be paid by the Farm Crops Show. All contestants are asked to Crookston at 10:30 Tuesday morning, February 8th.

The written test and the first part of the oral test will be held at the high school building. The public spell down will take place in the Armory in the evening.

No person can take two prizes. In the oral test only one trial will be given. When a word is missed, the pupil must take his seat, and a new word pronounced to the next line.

Prizes.

Written Contest		Oral Test.
1.	$10.00	1.	$5.00
2.	5.00	2.	2.50
3.	2.50	3.	1.00
4.	1.00	4.	1.00
5.	1.00	5.	1.00

In addition to these prizes a banner will be given to the county having the two with the highest averages.

Orville Anton Anderson.

Orville Anton Anderson, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Anderson, who reside in the town of North, died yesterday after a short illness, death being due to convulsions. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Zion church, Rev. A. L. Larson officiating. Interment will be made at Greenwood cemetery.

"A Star By Mistake."

Among the features at the Lyceum theatre for the last half of the week is the mirthful, mysterious, novelty, comedy, singing, dramatic skit entitled, "A Star By Mistake," in which Roy Brandon, Jeanne Russell and company of clever performers will make their initial appearance to the local vaudeville audience. This, together with three other first-class acts compose the Hippodrome vaudeville offering for Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings.

On Tuesday evening the usual Broadway feature will be shown, entitled, "The Long Chance," featuring Krank Keenan. "The Long Chance" is a thrilling story of the unvarnished West in its beginnings, when the sheriff stood for all there was of law and order, a reputation as a bad man or a good shot was the best assurance of peace and prosperity to the individual; the saloon was the center of social life and prospecting and gambling were the main industries. It is a six reel feature and is said to be one of the most satisfactory films ever shown.

Senator Lobeck Will Speak Here.

State Senator E. E. Lobeck of Alexandria, is making an extended speaking campaign through the northwestern part of the state in the which will be the paramount issue in Minnesota politics this year. He will be in Thief River Falls on Thursday, January 20th, where he speaks in the Zion church at three and eight o'clock p. m. The afternoon lecture to be given in the Norwegian language and the evening meeting in English. Senator Lobeck's platform ability is so well known all over this state, that the mere announcement that he is to speak here insures a crowded house.

Form Partnership.

Oscar Olson arrived here this week from Minneapolis and is now associated in business with Jos. C. Lutz of this city. A partnership has been formed and the new firm has taken office room in the Citizens State Bank building. Their business will be all kinds of general architect work and the superintending of building construction.

OSCAR OLSON

Mr. Lutz's ability as an architect is well known by local people and Mr. Olson comes to this city highly recommended as an expert on building construction. For the past eight years he has been employed by the Cary Construction company as superintendent and during that time many buildings of national prominence have been constructed under his supervision. One of the most prominent of these is the Many Glacier hotel at Glacier National Park.

This firm will be strong competition for any of its kind in this section of the northwest and they will undoubtedly enjoy a flourishing busi-

Ruth Olson Laid At Rest.

The last sad rites over the remains of Ruth Olson, who was so suddenly called from this earthly life to the Great Beyond in her fifteenth year at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Olson, was held Saturday afternoon from the Zion church at 1:45 o'clock. The funeral was attended by members of the family, distant relatives, Sophomore classmates and many friends. The services were conducted by Rev. A. L. Larson, while the choir and Miss Dora Holmes rendered several musical selections during the funeral service.

Interment was made at Greenwood cemetery.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank our many friends for their kind assistance during the illness and death of our beloved daughter and sister, Ruth. We wish to extend especial thanks to the Ladies' Aid, Young Peoples society of the Zion church, Sophomore girls of the high school, Mr. and Mrs. J. Adams, Mrs. Otto Gullingsrud, Mrs. J. H. Jacobson, Dora Holms, Bernice Langseth, and Alfrida Knudsen for the beautiful floral offerings.

Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Olson, Clara, Vivian, Orten and Marcus Olson.

In Memory of Ruth Olson.

We had a treasure,
She was our joy and pride
We loved her, oh, perhaps too well,
For soon she slept and died.
All is dark within our dwelling
Lonely are our hearts to-day,
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever passed away.

Manager G. Howard Smith of the hockey team is in receipt of an invitation from H. P. Wickham, manager of the St. Paul Outdoor Sports Carnival, in which the local team is invited to participate in the carnival to be held in St. Paul, January 27 to February 5. Mr. Wickham stated that arrangements have been made for the entering of the team and would be very glad to see the local septet put on for the hockey tournament. The following taken from the St. Paul Pioneer Press says: "This coming tourney will be held at the carnival grounds at Harriet Island and will be an elimination affair open to amateur teams. The resident rule will be strictly adhered to and this will bar the teams of the St. Paul and Minneapolis Athletic clubs, while all other amateur teams of the Twin Cities and the Northwest are invited to compete. Duluth, Virginia, Thief River Falls, Crookston, St. Croix asked to enter, while, of course, the many teams of the Twin Cities will be contestants."

Hockey Game Sunday.

Another fast hockey game has been arranged by Manager G. Howard Smith between the City Regulars and All-Stars, to be played Sunday afternoon at the municipal rink. The game will start at 2:30 sharp, one hour earlier than the games previously played. Owing to the light attendance at last Sunday's game with Roseau, the financial end of the association is not in a very healthy condition. The total expense in staging the contest was in the neighborhood of $85, while the receipts amounted to approximately $15. The entire proceeds of the game to be played Sunday will be used to help defray expenses incurred in bringing the Roseau team here. With a let-up in the cold wave and the approach of milder weather a record-breaking crowd should turn out and help the boys along.

The line-up:

Regulars	Position	All-Stars
Smith	Goal	Bennett
Haug	Point	Campbell
McFarland	Cover Point	DeVenny
Rice	Center	Hendrickson
Backus	Rover	Sundahl
Welch	Right Wing	Schuster

Chester Wilson, son of Mrs. O. Isaacson of Thief River Falls, and who is a student at the Northwest School of Agriculture, is making good. At a recent tryout Chester was awarded a place on the school debating team. This is one of the highest honors a student of the school may attain. The team of which Chester is a member will debate the Wahpeton School of Science of North Dakota during the Farm Crops Show at Crookston, February 8th, and later will debate the team from the West Central Agricultural School at Morris.

Fire Chief Injured.

While alighting from the step, at the doorway of the Soo Cafe, onto the slippery sidewalk, Paul Medderigh, chief of the Thief River Falls Fire Department, slipped and fell Sunday evening at about six o'clock severely injuring his spine and the muscles of his back. Mr. Medderigh was just returning to the jail with a dinner bucket in each hand, when the accident happened. At the present time his condition has not changed, and it will probably be weeks before he will be able to be up.

BANK CLEARANCES SHOW INCREASE IN EVERY DEPARTMENT

IMPROVEMENTS COST $31,550

Capital And Surplus of The Four Thief River Falls Institutions Show An Increase of $54,000—Savings Also Boosted.

An increase in bank deposits of $173,689.23 during a year by no means regarded as exceptional from a business point of view, must be considered very satisfactory for a city the size of Thief River Falls. This is the showing made by the four banking houses here and indicates a solid, steady growth for the community. No great influx of money caused by the establishment of new industries is to be recorded for the twelve months just passed, and the increase must be regarded as due to the greater business activity along lines already established.

The total deposits on hand in the banks of Thief River Falls on December 31, 1915, was $1,385,968.19, as compared with $1,212,278.96 at the same time a year previous. In the banking house, furniture and fixture account the total shown is $64,203.45, being practically double the amount reported a year ago, when it was $32,652.70. It is expected that this sum will be at least equalled during the fiscal year just beginning, it being announced that one bank will soon begin improvements that alone will nearly cover the amount. This also is an excellent indication, as banking directors do not vote large expenditures during times of depression or where there is any doubt as to the community's growth justifying the outlay.

The capital and surplus of the four banks increased at the rate or more than one thousand dollars each week during 1915, the total being at this time $186,000. In this item also a large gain is expected during the coming year.

Savings departments report a total of approximately $30,000. In common with banking houses all over the country, Thief River Falls' financial institutions are making special efforts to interest the small depositor. They realize that the young man who saves his money now is the business man of tomorrow and that the relations established while he is a savings depositor will be of vast value to both in later years. These accounts are invited and every facility offered for making the department of the utmost value to those who wish to put aside some part of their income.

Taken as a whole, the year was very satisfactory, and bank officers are unanimous in their opinion that the coming season will show an even greater increase along all lines.

COMMERCIAL CLUB ELECTION JAN. 27

Full Attendance Desired To Make Best Possible Selection of Officers.

The annual election of officers of the Commercial club will be held at the club rooms next Thursday evening, Jan. 27th. This will be the first election since the club was reorganized and housed in the present elegant quarters. Conducted as the club now is, on an extensive scale, the work of the organization has greatly increased and the field for operations is ever widening and extending farther and farther. For this reason the selection of officers at this time is of the utmost importance and a full attendance at the meeting next Thursday evening will be necessary to select the best available men for the various offices.

Every club member should feel that he is in duty bound to attend this meeting in the interest of himself and the entire city.

Chester Barden, brakeman on the Soo line, left Monday evening for St. Paul, where he was in attendance at the Gibbons-Ahearn fight held on Tuesday night. Chester and several of his friends are of the opinion that he should change his name to "Otto Luck," for the reason that some accident continually befalls him. He is at the present time unable to work owing to an injury to his right hand, having burned it, and later a cold settled in the wound.

K. Kratzer, farmer, Sunbeam.

P. A. Skerpeing, farmer, Kratka.

Thoreberg Norstelo, farmer, Erie.

The petition of George Joyce was dismissed on the grounds that he had moved to Nebraska. One petition was rejected because the petitioner did now have a sufficient knowledge of government.

After the hearing Clerk of Court Harry Ives presented each of the petitioners with a silk American flag. Judge Andrew Grindeland was so enthused over the new idea that he announced that he would notify all the clerks in his district to follow suit.

The next hearing will be held July 20, 1916.

Electric Line Holds Record.

The other railroads entering this city will have to take a back seat for the Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway company. It is the only one of the bunch that maintained its schedule during the several weeks of cold weather just past. Every trip found the car right on the "dot" while the trains of both the Soo and Great Northern were from one to five hours late. Of course the line of the Minnesota Northwestern is a "trifle" shorter than that of the Soo and G. N.—but its a record just the same.

To Pick Orator.

A representative of the Thief River Falls high school will be picked in an oratorical contest, which will be held at the Lincoln high school next Wednesday evening, to represent the local school at the annual declamation contest of the Farm Crops Show.

CO. OPTION PETITION FILED IN RED LAKE CO.

Election Will Probably Be Held Monday, Feb. 28—296 Voters Sign Petition.

The expected and unexpected has happened. Red Lake county is to have a county option election. A petition, bearing the signatures of 296 voters, was filed with County Auditor Geo. Dupont last Tuesday. According to the provisions of the county option law the election must be held on the 21st or 28th of February. Auditor Dupont has not set the date yet but it is though that it will be February 28.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette has the following to say regarding the filing of the petition and the election:

"The petition is signed by 296 voters of the county which is 29 more than the required twenty-five per cent of the vote cast for governor in the last election. 1092 votes were cast for governor so it required 273 signatures to the peitiion to make it good."

"An examination of the petition indicates that the people seeking the election took the least troublesome and least expensive means of getting the issue before the people in a manner that would indicate considerable strength. They could, of course, have secured a much larger number of signatures by a thorough canvass of the county. About 225 of the signatures were secured in the townships of Garnes, Equality, Emardville and Poplar River. A few were secured in Lambeck and Gervais townships and Oklee and Plummer villages."

H. S. BOYS TRIUMPH OVER ADA QUINT

Local Basketball Team Takes One More Step Towards District Championship.

In a game that was not marked by sensational plays and passes, the Thief River Falls high school basket ball team took the Ada squad into camp last Friday evening by a score of 29 to 15. The game throughout was slow, which is accounted for by the large number of fouls that were called on both sides.

The local five appeared on the floor in new uniforms at 8:15, and they were greeted with loud yells from the rooters' stand. The Ada boys came onto the floor shortly afterwards. After a short practise of basket shooting, time was called, and the teams were off. Ada made the first basket of the evening, shooting it after thirty seconds of play. Very little team work was displayed by either team, but at times sudden flashes would occur. The locals however, lost no time in finding the hoop and shot several baskets which put them in the lead. When the first half ended the score stood, 13 to 9.

During the second half Ada was allowed six points while Thief River Falls scored 16.

The line-up:

T. R. Falls	Position	Ada
Brown	R. F.	Bjerk
Fasel	L. F.	Bang
Linde	C.	Bowen
*Holzknecht	R. G.	Tenney
Schmitt	L. G.	*Murphy

*Connor substituted for Holzknecht last nine minutes.

*Miller substituted for Murphy last half.

Field baskets made by Thief River Falls: Brown, 4; Fasel, 1; Linde, 3; Holzknecht, 2. Free throws: Fasel, 6; Conner, 3.

Field baskets made by Ada: Bjerk, 2; Bowen, 2; Miller, 1. Free throws: Bjerk, 5.

Referee: Miller. Umpire, Kaldem.

STATEMENT SHOWS COUNTY FINANCES IN GOOD SHAPE

RECEIPTS WERE $444,928.17

Current Tax Collections Were $218,459.57, While $31,127.81 Was Left From Previous Year.

County Auditor T. P. Anderson has completed the compliation of the financial statement of the county of Pennington for the year 1915, and the same will appear in full in the Times next week. The statement shows the total receipts for the twelve months to have been $444,928.17, while the disbursements were $397,962.18, leaving a balance of $46,963.90 with which to commence business at the beginning of 1916.

The largest item of receipts is naturally the current taxes, these providing for $218,459.57 of the total, while delinquent taxes collected represent $16,620.73. The moneys received from the state amounted to $43,400.74, being divided as follows: Apportionment to schools, $16,259.25; state aid to schools, $15,680.39; aid for state and county roads, $11,461.10. The sum of $83,396.16 was derived from bond issues, the drainage ditch issue bringing $43,198.90, and the state highway issue $40,197.26.

In the disbursement column the total expended for county, school, city, village and township purposes was $217,641.14. Of this amount the county orders represented $25,598.41 on the revenue fund, and $23,261.06 on the road and bridge. Warrants to the amount of $89,560.02 were issued against the school districts, while the city, village and township orders represented $79,201.65. Outside of this the largest amount on the withdrawal side of the ledger was for ditch purposes, this being responsible for a total of $55,482.13.

The statement shows that the affairs of Pennington county are being economically administered. Few of the newer counties of the state can show a financial condition so satisfactory, this being largely due to the determination at the time of the county's organization to keep the current expenses within the limit of receipts. This has been done and no bond issues have been necessary to meet the running expenses. The only bonds issued have been for the larger permanent improvements such as roads and ditches and it is the intention to take care of these as they fall due without resorting to further burdensome bond obligations if this is possible.

CALL ISSUED FOR STATE CONFERENCE

According To Last Gubernatorial Vote Cast, Pennington County Entitled To Seven Delegates.

The Pennington County Democratic committee is in recept of a communication from Secretary Robert W. Hardgadine of the Democratic State Central Committee, notifying them that a state conference will be held in St. Paul at 10:00 a. m., on Thursday, February 3. It is of great importance, Mr. Hargadine, states, that the full representation of delegates to which Pennington County is entitled, attend this meeting. The basis of representation is one delegate for each 100 votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for Hon. W. S. Hammond at the last state election, and therefore, this county is entitled to seven delegates.

The Thief River Falls high school basketball team will journey to McIntosh on Friday, where they will try conclusions in the evening with the high school team of that place. The boys expect that this will be one of the hardest games of the season, but are nevertheless optimistic in their views and will strain every effort to win. For the past two weeks Coach Johnson has been whipping them through some strenuous practise in order to regain their old-time form. McIntosh is especially noter for its fast basketball teams and if the local quint is successful and secures a win, the boys will have reached the fourth round of the ladder to the championship. The line-up will be: forwards, Brown and Fasel; center, Linde; guards, Holzknecht and Schmitt; substitutes, Conner, Stebbins and Zeh.

WITH OUR NEIGHBORS

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS IN NEARBY TOWNS

BURNQUIST COMING NORTH.

Governor J. A. A. Burnquist has become so much interested in the problem presented by the forests of northern Minnesota that he has promised State Forester Cox to come north in the near future that he may make a personal investigation of conditions here. Mr. Cox is now in the east and upon his return will accompany the governor north. Bemidji being probably the first point to be visited.—Bemidji Sentinel.

FINED $100 FOR GAMBLING.

A. B. Karnes, Ole Hanson and Trovel Hagen, who were arrested in East Grand Forks a short time ago charged with running a gambling establishment on a bench warrant issued by the grand jury. They were taken before Judge Watts late yesterday and arraigned. Hagen pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and sentenced to 60 days in the county jail. Karnes and Hanson will stand trail.—Crookston Times.

CAR LEAVES TRACK.

A broken journal on a freight car between here and Bejou, Monday night caused a carload of wheat in train No. 70 to leave the track. Both section crews from Mahnomen went up and tipped the car off the track and got the track in shape for the passing of the passenger trains. The local tied up in Mahnomen until about 9:30. The crew of the passenger train quit work here and the train was taken on to Thief River Falls by a freight crew.—Mahnomen Pioneer.

AUTO THIEVES PLEAD GUILTY.

Clifford Wentz and William Duggan, arrested last June in East Grand Forks on the charge of stealing an automobile belonging to E. M. Walsh of Crookston, entered a plea of guilty when arraigned in district court late yesterday afternoon. Judge Watts announced that he would sentence both at a later time.

It will be remembered that the young men drove the machine from Crookston to Devils Lake where they were compelled to abandon it on account of a small break which they found it impossible to repair. When arrested they stated that it was their intention to take the machine to Winnipeg where they expected to dispose of it.

CASE IS DELAYED.

The action brought by residents of Clearbrook to restrain the Board of County Commissioners of Clearwter county from purchasing the Bagley high school building for a court house, which came before Judge C. W. Stanton yesterday afternoon, was dismissed on the part of the relator, Edward Rydeen of Clearbrook, on the ground that since he got his order to show cause, the county commissioners have ordered a hearing to show cause, the county commissioners have ordered a hearing for February 15th, which destroys the effect of his order. However, this does not mean that the people of Clearbrook have abandoned their right against the proposition of purchasing the Bagley high school which will be vacated by the Bagley school district after the erection of a $26,000 school building which was voted upon at a recent school election. The old school building was offered to the county board for $10,000. Mr. Rydeen was represented by Attorney E. T. Evenson of Clearbrook.—Bagley Independent.

OLD OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

As was previously announced all members of the board of directors of the Red Lake County Agricultural Society whose terms of office expired were re-elected at the recent annual meeting. Since, the members of the board of directors have met and organized, for the work of putting on this year's fair. All of the officers who served the society last year were re-elected. They are:

President—Jos. J. Helm.
Vice President—J. D. Houston.
Secretary—Jos. Salley.
Treasurer—E. A. Nelson.

Members of the board of directors are, Jos. J. Helm, E. A. Nelson, Ildaige Baril, J. D. Houston, Chas. Fellman, C. O. Kankel, Jos. Salley, Ed. L. Healy, S. M. Strand.

The fair officials are holding frequent meetings and are planning on issuing the fair premium book at an earlier date than previously.

A proposition to run the fair for a longer time is being seriously considered and it is probable that the 1916 county fair will offer entertainment to the public for four or five days.

The exact dates for the fair have not been definitely decided upon, but it will probably be held the last week in July.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

HOW DOES THIS STRIKE YOU.

Bemidji is assured of the construction of a $17,000 armory building.

That's fine, but can't we make it better?

Over at Thief River Falls when they were assured of an armory appropriation they got together and decided to issue bonds and raise enough money to put up a fine auditorium, city hall and armory combined in one building; a structure that is a pride and never ending advertisement to Thief River.

What's the matter of Bemidji doing the same thing?

Would'nt it be pretty fine to have a modern city hall in Bemidji?

Would'nt it be fine to have a real auditorium here?

And of course its going to be fine to have an armory, but $17,000 does'nt build an entirely satisfactory structure. The public library here was constructed at a cost of $12,000 and it is said to have been put up at bedrock prices.

Will Bemidji ever have a better opportunity to get a modern public building that can be used by the people for so many purposes as she can by uniting her efforts and enlarging upon the armory proposition?

School Notes

The high school annual being prepared by the editorial staff of students is known as "The Prowler." It will be of the usual type of such publications and will contain a vast fund of valuable high school history.

The manual training and domestic science departments exhibited some of their products at the Manufacturer's Fair at the Auditorium this week. It is not convenient, or even possible, to display the work of all other departments, as their product is not always of such a tangible character as that on exhibition down town.

What is known as a "warm lunch" is now being served at noon to children who are compelled to bring their lunches to school. It consists of one cup of something hot of a liquid character, except tea and coffee. A penny per cup is charged, not that the penny will meet the cost of the cup, but that the independence of the child may be recognized. This privilege extends only to pupils compelled by reason of distance from town or by poor health to bring their lunches to school and is not intended for those who can conveniently go home at noon. It is a consolidated school requirement.

All young people over 16, who for various reasons have not recently attended school, are urged to join the SHORT COURSE next Monday at the high school. It is free and offers very practical work. Particulars appear in another column.

Warren has voted bonds for a new high school building. Bemidji, which constructed a $65,000 high school building the year prior the erection of the Thief River Falls Lincoln school, will also build a new high school. A year ago both Red Lake Falls and Crookston erected commodious high school buildings.

The Knox, with the exception of one room, is the most crowded building in the city. There are 49 pupils in attendance in Miss Sires' room and 50 in Miss Paine's, and almost as many in each of the others.

Until the well at the high school is finished, water from the pop factory is supplied the Lincoln and Washington pupils.

Ada played an aggressive game last Friday but fell before the prowness of the local boys. The game was rough, fifteen fouls being called on each team.

The second term or semester begins next Monday. A new program will be put in operation in the high school.

Written tests, of which much has been heard this week in junior and senior high school, determine only twenty-five per cent of the pupil's class showing. His daily recitation counts for seventy-five per cent of his standings. The idea is to place emphasis upon the students' daily preparation and study.

State examinations in several subjects are being held this week.

A declamatory contest will take place at the Lincoln assembly some evening the early part of next week, of which notice will be given through the schools. At this time one pupil will be chosen to represent Thief River Falls at the final contest at the Lincoln on Friday, January 28th, at which contestants from the Soo and G. N. towns, near Thief River Falls, will compete.

GLYCERINE AND BARK PREVENT APPENDICITIS

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, astonishes Thief River Falls people. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. SHORT COURSE STARTS MONDAY, JANUARY 24

Free To All Under 16 Years of Age—Many Practical Courses Are Offered.

The Annual Short Course of the Thief River Falls high school will begin on Monday, Jan. 24, the opening day of the second half of the school year and will close on March 31st.

It is open and free to all persons above sixteen years of age from the country and city, regardless of their former school standings. Particularly is it desired to make it valuable to young men and women who have not attended school for some years and who feel the need of more training. There is no tuition—everything is absolutely free.

The course offers the following opportunity for study, from which students may choose what they desire:

AGRICULTURE—Daily lessons under the supervision of the high school agriculturist in stock work, farm management, crops and other farm interests. This is considered the most important study of the course.

COOKING AND SEWING—These comprise many of the ordinary features of the work most needed in the home.

ENGLISH—No text book is needed. The work covers reading, correspondence, correction of common mistakes in talking and a study of simple every day English including spelling and penmanship.

PRACTICAL ARITHMETIC—This is just what it suggests—practical problems relating to ordinary business operations.

ACCOUNTS—Study of common forms of commercial papers and the keeping of simple accounts and records.

FARMERS' LAW—This presents a brief outline of those laws relating to roads, ditches, weeds and simple problems closely relating to rural life.

No grammar, geography or history will be taught. Special arrangements will be made for special students, but all will be required to take Agriculture and English. Literary meetings, the musical and athletic events and all the high school activities are open to the SHORT COURSE students. Board and room at reasonable rates can be easily secured.

Further information may be secured by writing the undersigned.

PROGRAM IS PRACTICAL

And So Are The Premiums—This Is a Distinctive Feature of Farm Crops. Show.

One thing about the Fifth Annual Farm Crops Show to be held in Crookston February 7 to 12, is that the program each day and evening is practical and devoted to the real problems of the farmers of the Red River Valley. No theorist with high flown verbiage will be found on the program. The men who will speak will be men of practical experience, men who have wrestled personally with the problems to be discussed. The open discussions and demonstrations with the live stock on the stage makes an impression that farmers will carry home with them and put into practical use. The helpful hints from actual farmers regarding the solution of real problems will also be of inestimable value.

The spelling contest, the word-forming contest, the debate, the stock and corn judging contest participated in by the young people will also be interesting and educating features, and the prizes offered will be treasured for a life time by the winners.

The farmers of Pennington county should prepare at once to enter their exhibits and land their full share of the $5,000.00 worth of premiums to be offered. Two exhibitors will become the owners of silos, and a vast amount of machinery, etc., and close to $600.00 in cash prizes will be distributed. Secretary C. H. Zealand will soon mail out the premium lists and programs, and a post card addressed to him at Crookston will insure your getting one as soon as they are out.

If you miss the Farm Crops Show you will miss the biggest event of the kind held in the Northwest for the year.

Small Blaze on East Side.

The residence of Henry Peterson, 223 Kendall avenue south, was slightly damaged by fire late Friday evening, evidently the result of an overheated chimney. The alarm was sent in by one of the neighbors, who saw the flames shoot out from around the chimney. A bucket brigade was formed and by the time the fire department arrived the blaze had practically been extinguished.

PICKS MAXWELL FROM BIG FIELD

Big Detroit Company Chosen For New Alliance By M. Anderson & Sons.

NEW CARS ARE HANDSOME

Local Organization Enthusiastic Over Prospects For Big Business.

Formal ratification has reached this city of a contract whereby the Maxwell car is to be handled by M. Anderson & Sons.

This ratification was the conclusion of negotiations which had been informally closed some time ago.

By the terms of this arrangement, bringing as it does an active and ample organization to the Maxwell army, adequate representation for this popular-priced car is assured here. While the present contract runs for one year only, the solid permanence of the parties interested gives ground for the belief that relations will be of indefinite length of time. Such is, in fact a characteristic feature of Maxwell agencies all over the country.

The entire organization of the new local Maxwell store is enthusiastic over the possibilities of the alliance.

"We took our time and looked over the whole field," said M. Anderson, Manager of M. Anderson & Sons.

"We were out to pick, without the use of anything but cold common sense, the car that would make us the most money during the season of 1916, and indefinitely into the future. We believe we have gotten the best one in the Maxwell. While the dealer's margin of profit on a $655 car is very small, the market is immense and the volume of sales assured, in case the car stands up and gives satisfaction. We know that the Maxwell will do this. The Maxwell cars of last year and the season before gained the reputation for beauty, power and efficiency second to none in the light-car field. This year's car is handsomer, larger and more efficient than ever before, as we thoroughly convinced ourselves before signing the contract. Best of all, it fulfills in a gratifying way its legitimate heritage of sturdiness—a quality for which Maxwells have been famous for many years of motoring history.

"We have made ample arrangements for a service department, designed to keep every Maxwell car in our territory at its top efficiency all the time. In this detail we have been greatly helped by the factory organization which has developed a plan of supply to dealers that has shown itself adequate and prompt."

Maxwell demonstrating cars have already arrived at the local salesroom and a considerable shipment will be made soon from Detroit to take care of orders already booked.

BANDITS HOLD U. S. SOLDIERS

Mexicans Capture Seven Following Battle.

COWBOY BRINGS THE NEWS

Says Handful of Seventh Cavalry Met Defeat in Battle Near Doyle Wells, N. M.—Fifty Mounted Troopers Sent to Assist in Pursuit.

Douglas, Ariz., Jan. 20.—Seven soldiers of the Seventh United States cavalry were captured by Mexican bandits at Doyle Wells, fourteen miles south of Hachita, N. M., according to reports received here. The surrounding country was scoured by cowboys hunting the bandits.

News of the capture of the soldiers was telephoned from near Hachita. The message said that a cowboy named Doolittle had arrived there with the news shortly after midnight.

Doolittle said he had seen the fight between the soldiers and Mexican bandits and had escaped unnoticed by the Mexicans.

Fifty cavalrymen were sent from Hachita to aid in the pursuit.

SENATORS IN WARM DEBATE

Mexico Subject of Discussion in Committee.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Heated discussion over the Mexican situation featured the meeting of the senate committee on foreign relations, which adjourned without taking action on resolutions providing for intervention or sending troops to aid Carranza in protecting American citizens in bandit infested sections of Mexico.

Senator Borah of Idaho, who urged speedy action, has decided to make a canvass of the senate to determine what support would be given an effort to consider proposals of intervention should the foreign relations committee fail to act on resolutions before it.

Democratic senators, it was declared, would stand solidly behind President Wilson in the crisis. The opinion prevailed that none of the intervention resolutions will be reported at present and that a majority of the committee will uphold the president in its ability to establish order in Mexico and to punish murderers of American citizens.

The data called for in Senator Fall's resolution regarding the Carranza government and its recognition was not before the committee and Chairman Stone, who saw the president earlier in the day, could not say when it will be ready.

CARRANZA FORCE IN PURSUIT OF VILLA

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 20.—Carranza's death order has thrown a chill of horror into the hearts of Mexican bandits.

The public parade of the corpses of bandits to show the fate of the lawless has driven the outlaws farther into the mountains. With the reported murder of two more Americans near Torreon still unconfirmed officers here were convinced that the campaign of extermination would sufficiently avenge the death of the eighteen Americans at the hands of bandits.

The object of a great bandit hunt now on in the mountains of Chihuahua and Durango state is the capture of Francisco Villa. Carranza officials said they would only be satisfied when they displayed the bandit chief's bullet-riddled corpse in parade.

A picked force of fearless Carranza soldiers has been charged with pursuing Villa night and day with his capture their sole object.

GIBBONS SCORES KNOCKOUT

Defeats Ahearn in One Minute and Thirty-one Seconds.

St. Paul, Jan. 20.—A quick left feint, a flashing right counter, which had all the weight of Michael Gibbons' body behind it, and the light went out forever on the middleweight championship aspirations of Jacob Ahearn, at the Auditorium, after exactly one minute and thirty-one seconds of tense but not extraordinary boxing.

Gibbons earned nearly $8,000 for ninety seconds' work. As the house ran to at least $22,000 his share is not less than $7,700, or $85.55 for every second he was engaged in battling.

MONTENEGRINS REJECT TERMS

Now Said to Have Refused to Lay Down Arms.

REPORT COMES FROM PARIS

Announcement Made in British House of Commons That Conditions of Surrender Proposed by Austria Were Found Quite Unacceptable.

London, Jan. 20.—News of the surrender of the Montenegrin army, as reported by wireless, appears to be premature, according to an official statement issued in Paris.

"It is announced that negotiations between Austria and Montenegro have been broken," the official statement says, "the condition of surrender imposed by Austria having been found quite unacceptable by Montenegro.

"The king, the royal family and the diplomatic corps of Montenegro are about to proceed to Italy."

An indication of the importance attached to the reported surrender of Montenegro is seen in the proceedings of a session of the Prussian diet, according to a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam, quoting information from Berlin. The president, the dispatch says, referred to the surrender of Montenegro and said that it constitutes evidence that the entente, while outwardly appearing to be a structure of solid form, is smoldering internally and soon will collapse. He said that the splendid success of the Austrian troops at Lovcen is a favorable omen for the definite result of the war.

German casualties to date are 2,535,-750, Harold J. Tennent, parliamentary under secretary for war announced in the house of commons. Of this number, he said, 588,986 were killed. Mr. Tennant said his figures were those published in the Berlin casualty lists.

The war under secretary said the German wounded and missing numbered 1,566,549, while 356,153 men had been taken prisoners. In addition 24,080 Germans had died from various causes.

BRITISH REPLY SARCASTIC

Official View of German Note on Baralong Case.

London, Jan. 20.—"Some surprise is expressed that the nation whose armed forces have been responsible for the sack of Louvain, the murder of hundreds of unoffending men, women and children on the Lusitania and other ships, the execution of Edith Cavell, the use of poisonous gas, the poisoning of wells, attempted torpedoing of hospital ships and countless other atrocities, should describe their methods of warfare as humane."

The foregoing is taken from a statement of the British official view of the German note regarding the Baralong case. It follows a statement to the effect that Germany has adhered to recognized rules of war and punishes those responsible for any violations.

RUSSIA DENIES REPORTS

No Truth in Stories of Defeat in the Caucasus.

Petrograd, Jan. 20.—The Russian general staff has issued a denial of rumors that Russians have suffered severe defeats in the Caucasus and in Persia.

"On the contrary our new offensive on both fronts is devolving favorably," it was stated. "We have suffered only small losses and have made heavy captures. Pressing forward on the Caucasus front our troops have annihilated entire Turkish regiments."

An earlier official statement reported the capture of 224 Turks on the Caucasus front.

Serbians Land at Saloniki.

Athens, Jan. 20.—A transport load of Serbian troops has been landed at Saloniki to co-operate with the Anglo-French forces, according to dispatches received here. They were carried from the Albanian coast by a British steamer.

Kaiser Reported in Serbia.

London, Jan. 20.—A Reuter dispatch says that Emperor William is in Nish, Serbia. According to this information, which was forwarded from Nish by way of Berlin, the German emperor met King Ferdinand of Bulgaria at Nish.

LET'S BE UP-TO-DATE.

The people of Thief River Falls like to consider their town the best, cleanest, brightest and most progressive city of a wonderfully favored section—and it is. They are also inclined to brag just a little of the rapid forward strides the town has made during the past few years—and they have a right to do so. They like to point to the brilliant future that is in store for the municipality, the county and the section—and in this they are amply justified. They will also cheerfully convey to you the information that they have the best business houses of any city of the size of Thief River Falls in the state of Minnesota—and you never think of doubting them. Some of them will perhaps tell you that their splendid stores are conducted along the most modern business lines—and you may believe this, too, unless you happen down town some evening and find the aforesaid stores open and doing business when the proprietors and clerks should be at home or out enjoying themselves.

It is doubtful if there is a town in the state of Minnesota having the size and pretensions of Thief River Falls where the stores are kept open at night. Merchants everywhere have long ago come to the conclusion that running their business houses after the supper hour is unnecessary, unprofitable and against the best interests of everyone concerned. The proprietor himself gains nothing by it. Not a dollar will be taken in over his counter after six o'clock in the evening that could not have been taken in earlier in the day or that will not be taken in just as well the next morning. None of this money will disappear over night and the reason for spending it will be as good the next day. The buying public is certainly not the gainer, even in convenience, as it is concededly better to make selections of any kind of goods during the daylight hours. For the workpeople in the stores the system is a decided hardship. They are asked to work longer hours than the employees in any other calling. Their labors are always trying, often irksome, and demand that they put forth the best that is in them at all times. They must under all conditions be alert, pleasant, obliging and accurate. When this is required of persons under a nervous strain for an unreasonable stretch of time the result must be unsatisfactory to everyone. So well is this recognized that merchants in cities where early closing is in vogue would not return to the old long-hour schedule if it were left entirely to them and the clerks were willing. It simply is not business, and is as far behind the times as kerosene lamps.

Most of the merchants of Thief River Falls would close their places in the evening, and some of them do. It is up to the people to see that the remainder follow suit. One merchant refusing to do so can keep the rest from closing. They believe that it is a matter of self protection for them to keep their stores open as long as their competitors. The buying public, however, can very quickly settle the matter, by simply refusing to patronize the merchant who does not join in this humanitarian as well as wise business movement. No man will keep his store open in the evening if no one buys anything at that time. Instances in plenty are on record where the people took this matter in hand and refused to trade with any merchant who worked his clerks unreasonable hours. And no instance has yet come to light where the merchant thus admonished failed to see the error of his ways. We might also add that he has generally been glad that he was thus prevailed upon to change his mind.

We are living in a modern, up-to-date community. Let's not remain so far behind the times in this one matter.

AVOIDED WASTE OF MONEY.

A body of men having in charge the letting of contracts for services or supplies to be paid for by the public must take into consideration a number of things that do not enter into transactions between individuals. It is quite as inconsistent and wasteful to pay a small price for something worth nothing as it is to pay a greater price than is necessary for something of worth. The time when local administrative bodies most often fall down in this respect is when it comes to the awarding of public printing. The laws of the state of Minnesota specifically set forth the manner in which this work shall be done, the time at which it shall appear, and the price to be paid therefor. Outside of these specifications the members of the awarding board or council are allowed almost unlimited latitude in the exercise of their own judgment.

This law was enacted many years ago and met the conditions at that time very satisfactorily. It provided for a fair price for all work on the basis of cost then existing. It made no provision for an increase in case the cost of producing the work should become greater, and, on the other hand, simply left to the unsatisfactory expedient of competitive bidding the duty of bringing the cost down in case the work could be produced at a lower price than the maximum provided for in the statutes. The qualification test was easy. Practically the only requirement for the paper doing the public printing is that it should have been in existence one year, have a circulation of 240 copies, and be printed in the English language. This has led to abuses and errors until a very valuable public service has been brought down to where it is of practically no value in many counties of the state. In others the boards or councils having the matter in charge have taken it up intelligently, with the result that they are operating along the lines so evidently intended by the law instead of its narrow and misleading phraseology. These communities employ the same amount of intelligence in the expenditure of money for printing as they do in other matters coming up for their consideration with the result that the paper or plant offering the best service and most general distribution gets the contract at the price provided for in the laws.

These boards always find it necessary to throw out or disregard the offers made by publications of small circulation and concerns of doubtful responsibility. They realize that the intention of the law is to provide a means whereby people may be made acquainted with the business transactions of their servants and that the more fully and completely this is accomplished the more nearly will the law's intent be realized. This means that a county such as Pennington, with a population of approximately 12,000 people, would not have been properly, economically nor sensibly served by the publication of its official business in a newspaper just barely coming under the legal requirements as to circulation. The fact that such a publication offered to do the work for little or nothing does not in the least matter. The service would have been worth even less, and the county commissioners acted not only wisely in disregarding the offer, but followed a rule practiced in all well-governed and progressive communities.

The Thief River Falls Times will do this work for the county during the year 1916 at a price considerably below that stipulated by the laws of the state. This cut in price should not have been necessary. The cost of everything going into the production of a newspaper is much higher now than when the law above referred to was enacted while the prices received for work of this kind has remained stationary, or has even been forced to a lower level by irresponsible bidders. The fact that the commissioners of Pennington county decided to give the widest possible publicity to the business of the county is to their credit and will be approved by every thinking person. To secure a service or an article at as low a price as possible is considered good business, although there is a question as to this, but to pay even a small price for something absolutely without value is foolish and inexcusable.

Every man, woman and child who has the present welfare and future development of Thief River Falls at heart will second the recommendation for pure water made to the council by Mayor Gambell. Nothing is so important to a community as a plentiful supply of water, and there is nothing that Thief River Falls is so decidedly without. The mayor makes no suggestions in his message as to the best means of obtaining the necessary supply, recognizing no doubt that this is a matter that the people themselves will have to help the council decide. But his warning is timely. Hot weather will soon be here, and neglect to provide an adequate supply of water for drinking and cooking purposes is likely to be followed by the most serious consequences. The mains are already in place and it only remains to discover and employ the best means for supplying them. This may be more of a contract than it seems, but however great the effort and at whatever cost, the source must be found if our people are to remain healthy and happy.

There is no doubt but that a poll of the voters of Northwestern Minnesota would show a decided preference for Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, as the Republican candidate for president. He comes from a neighboring state, which would naturally be in his favor, but outside of this there are many things about the man and his record that would be strongly in his favor with the voters here. His attitude at the time Canadian reciprocity was an issue before congress coincided particularly with that of the people hereabouts and they feel that they owe him their good will for his work against that measure. But aside from a feeling which might be regarded as existing because of the geographical location of the senator's home and outside of a kindly feeling for him for services rendered, he is recognized as a statesman of the very highest order and of distinctly presidential size throughout.

Laurence A. Rossman, who in colaboration with that Minnesota newspaper veteran, E. C. Kiley, publishes the Herald-Review at Grand Rapids, has announced himself as a candidate for the legislature from the Fifty-second district, comprising the counties of Itasca and Cass. Mr. Rossman is a Minnesotan by birth, educated at Carleton and all his interests are in his native state. He is a young man with ideas and opinions of his own, and they are right ideas and good opinions. He would rather do things than talk forever about them—and he is a decidedly good talker at that. A strong believer in efficiency and accomplishment, he might help infuse some needed energy into the legislative body and this alone should be sufficient to cause everyone to desire his election. The Fifty-second is an important district and should send to the legislature a man big enough to take his job seriously. This Mr. Rossman may be depended on to do.

HOCKEY TEAM WINS ONE FROM ROSEAU AND LOSES ANOTHER

Local Septet Wins Saturday Evening's Contest By The Close Score of 1 To 0.

SUNDAY'S CONTEST RED HOT

Roseau Wins Second Game On Sunday Afternoon In Tightest Game of Season—Score 2 To 3.

The Thief River Falls and Roseau hockey teams braved the cold on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon playing two games as per schedule, the local team winning the first game by one point while Roseau won the second contest by a score of 2 to 3.

On Saturday evening the first game was played with the mercury soaring below zero, which helped to infuse plenty of "pep" into the teams. The only score made during the contest was made by Welsh in the second half. In recording the 1 to 0 victory over Roseau, special mention is due Bennett, whose uncanny goal keeping had much to do with the result.

Sunday's weather conditions militated against the promised outpouring of hockey fans, and a very small crowd was in attendance to witness the game, which produced flashes of really high-class hockey, interspersed with a somewhat rambling brand of the game. There was not a slow minute during the entire exhibition. At the end of the second half the score stood 2 to 2, and it was found necessary to continue the game. The playing of both teams was fast and furious during this session and Roseau finally shot the puck into the goal, winning the game by one point.

As has been noted, Bennett was the major part of the entertainment and goal-keeping such as he exemplified Sunday is discouraging to even such earnest and hard-working a bunch of players as represents Roseau. Campbell, Backus, Rice and Devenny also shone as stars in both games.

The line-up:

T. R. Falls	Position	Roseau
Bennett	Goal	O. Oie
Campbell	Point	Alley
Devenny	Cover Point	Durham
Welsh	R. Wing	D. Oie
Flozsdahl	L. Wing	Jacklund
Backus	Rover	H. Hagen
Rice	Center	R. Hagen

Julius Schmall Remains a Puzzle---Silent as to Intentions Regarding Governorship---Frankson, Haycraft and Others After Second Place

By "The County Chairman"

St. Paul—(Special)—If Secretary of State Schmahl, dubbed the "silent," would only say something quite a number who regard the state capitol and the future of those housed beneath its massive dome as their special care would feel much relieved. Right here you have the Republican gubernatorial contest as it stands today in a nutshell—just one word from Julius—and until the secretary of state does see fit to break the silence those who have taken upon themselves the task of furthering an act of Providence in the elevation of Lieutenant Governor J. A. A. Burnquist to the governorship will not feel entirely safe or their work completed. With the passing of the days of mourning incident to the death of Governor Hammond and the natural haste to welcome Governor Burnquist as his own successor has come deliberation and with it the knowledge that while the political atmosphere in a gubernatorial way has been cleared the horizon is still obscured and the obstruction is the secretary of state. He is still the fly in the gubernatorial ointment. Hard on the death of the Democratic executive that group of Republican kingmakers whose stamping ground is the Twin Cities began an immediate assembling of the faithful and the weeding out of a troublesome gubernatorial field. How they succeeded in sidetracking James A. Peterson of Minneapolis is history, and while they made no impression on the hopes of Charles A. Lindbergh or former State Auditor Iverson it is needless to say that the position of the two was considerably weakened. In the secretary of state, however, they found different material. The job of handling Mr. Schmahl, I am told, was entrusted to Chairman Gunnar Bjornson of the state central committee and it is his failure that now threatens to return the Republican gubernatorial scramble to its old condition of uncertainty. Schmahl would not say yes or no.

✣ ✣ ✣

When I last interrogated the secretary of state—which was only a few days ago—I might just as well have talked to the winds. Though giving attentive ear not only to yours truly but to any number of others more anxious than I to learn his future intentions, Mr. Schmahl met the bombardment with a smile and the brief statement. "I'll let you know if I file." He could not be induced to unburden himself further. His noncommittal manner and his smile were maddening and you can well imagine how it has the kingmakers going. To them it was madness without reason, but I opine that there is more than reason in his madness. Laying aside the undoubted advantage that Governor Burnquist now has in any effort on his part or those of his friends to make him a permanent fixture officially for the next three years, the gubernatorial situation is by no means settled or the future of all concerned known until Mr. Schmahl announces what he is going to do. As the lone representative of a nationality now quite active, he holds the whip hand and the kingmakers must either fight or do business with him. As things look now Schmahl has decided to sit tight and await developments, and in a game like politics developments come fast.

✣ ✣ ✣

Governor Burnquist is learning rapidly that royalty is not all ease. He got an inkling of some of its troubles when a score or more pie hunters bombarded the executive offices the first day he was on the job and he has since learned that there is more to the game than drawing the salary in a persistent number who want to serve him as private secretary. When this was written no less than five men were reported with a hankering to succeed C. M. Andrist, Governor Hammond's secretary, who is still on the job. The list included Thomas H. Salmon, Minneapolis; Charles Mitchell, Duluth; Charles Cheney of the Minneapolis Journal, and Ernest Lundeen, also of the Mill City. Mitchell and Lundeen, I am told, are the most persistent candidates and have rolled up much backing in their behalf Down here the wise ones pick the Minneapolis Journal representative as the one likely to land the job. Of course there are applicants for countless other jobs in the gift of the executive, but they are likely to be disappointed. Governor Burnquist has announced that there is nothing doing in this line for the present, at least.

✣ ✣ ✣

How good the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor looks to quite a number who have been impressed with its desirability in a promotion way is evidenced by the fact that no less than five persons have secured filing papers for the place, and one of the number, Thomas Frankson of St. Paul, has already parted with $50 for a place on the ballot. The others are James A. Peterson of Minneapolis, Julius Haycraft of Fairmont, Speaker H. H. Flowers of Cleveland and Dr. J. A. Gates of Kenyon. All of them have had legislative connections. Thomas Frankson, who was the first to file for second place on the Republican ticket, has a St. Paul residence and this adds to the load which the Capital City is now carrying. Peterson's chances are not helped by a petition which is now being circulated in his favor, and Haycraft has a congressional failure against him. Speaker Flowers may not go after the job because of the big field, but Dr. Gates, who has had experience in the game, is certain to be there with both feet. He went after the job in the days of the convention and all but landed it. Geographically he is considered the best located of the lot.

J. E. HAYCRAFT.

✣ ✣ ✣

Speaking of the governor's official family, H. E. Samuelson, executive clerk to the late Governor Hammond, probably will be retained by Governor Burnquist. Mr. Samuelson, who is a resident of St. Peter, was taken by the Democrats from the St. Paul Dispatch, where he was employed, to handle their publicity. Governor Hammond recognized his work to the extent of making him one of his official aids, and Governor Burnquist has intimated to friends that he will use him in a similar capacity.

✣ ✣ ✣

It looks pretty much as if Frank A. Day of Fairmont was lost to the Democracy for good. Mr. Day has come out for Governor Burnquist and it is expected will root for him in the coming campaign. Though Democracy prevails in state and nation the Fairmont man realized but little, and his accepted desertion of the cause he long fought for is generally taken as the answer. If it is true Democracy has lost a valiant fighter.

✣ ✣ ✣

Friends in the state of former President Roosevelt are threatening an attack on the presidential preference primary law because of their inability to get their favorite on the ticket, but if anything is done it will have to be soon. Mr. Roosevelt has announced that he will not permit his name on the ticket and Secretary of State Schmahl has made answer that Mr. Roosevelt's wishes will be respected. That the law is bad is admitted, but opinion is general that it will be left to the next legislature to either amend or repeal.

✣ ✣ ✣

The state binding twine plant at the Stillwater prison faces danger in the introduction of bills in congress denying interstate protection to convict made goods. This means that binding twine could not be sold outside Minnesota and that shipments of raw material for its manufacture into the state would be hampered. The state board of control has already taken notice of the threatened calamity by making a vigorous protest to congress. The help of United States Senator Nelson also has been secured.

✣ ✣ ✣

Former Senator Elihu Root of New York is determined that his name shall not appear upon the presidential ballot in Minnesota and has written Secretary of State Schmahl to that effect. Mr. Schmahl promptly informed the New Yorker that his wishes would be respected.

✣ ✣ ✣

Another flaw has been discovered in the presidential primary law in a provision binding the electors to support the choice of their party expressed in the primary. For instance if the primary should endorse Cummins and the Chicago convention nominate Hughes the Minnesota electors are supposed to vote for Cummins or ignore the law.

✣ ✣ ✣

Opinion is general that the name of Frank Kellogg will be found among the list of candidates for United States Senator Clapp's scalp. Friends, it is reported, have taken the matter up with him and demanded that he must make the race. His answer is promised on his return from an Eastern trip.

✣ ✣ ✣

Fourth district Democratic leaders have announced that they will select delegates to the national convention at a caucus. Hennepin county will use the primary.

HOME TOWN BUILDING

How To Clear The Shelves of Overstock--Advertising Clearing Sales With Special Prices A Good Stimulator

While discussing the question of Home Town Building, the president of a large manufacturing concern of Chicago said to me recently: "There is just one thing that I have in mind for a hobby horse when I am able to retire with enough of this life's goods to enable me to amuse myself as I please, and it is this:

"I am going back to my home town in the State of Vermont, where I was born, and buy the general store, lock, stock and barrel. Then I intend to wake up the old town with a series of rapid-fire clearing sales that will be a revelation to the natives. I was back there last summer for the first time in thirty-five years, and I will make oath that 40 per cent of the goods on the shelves in that store have not been moved since I was a boy.

"There is in one of the back rooms a sufficient number of scythes to supply the wants of the Middle West in the scythe line for the next five years.

"I saw several cradles of the kind used by our grandfathers for cutting grain when Cyrus McCormick was a blacksmith. I suppose that those cradles would be implements of mystery to 50 per cent of the farmers of today.

There is plenty of good salable stock which is a little out of date but which would make excellent leaders for cut prices, and I would like nothing better," continued he, "than to make up a weekly catalogue of that stock and print it in a full page advertisement in the local weekly paper. Clearing sale prices on a few hundred items which that store has in stock, ranging all the way from old style farm tools in the hardware department, to dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, would certainly wake up the neighborhood. It might be somewhat difficult to find a manufacturer or wholesaler who could supply advertising cuts to illustrate the advertisements of some of the antiquated stock, but in that event I would omit the cuts and make a detailed description and let the price tell the balance of the story."

What is true of that store 'way back there in Vermont is also true of nine out of every ten general stores throughout the Middle West. Most of them have large quantities of merchandise which is a little out of date but which is still mighty good value at the price at which it could be sold.

Every merchant in the smaller towns knows that his greatest handicap is overstocks in things which he thought would sell but which did not go as fast as he expected, or in fact did not go at all. His annual profits are very likely to be tied up in goods of that kind and he is often entirely at sea for ways and means to make both ends meet, pay his bills and expenses, simply because he has dead stock which lays on his shelves year after year. That dead stock on the shelves would, if properly used, give him an opportunity to advertise a clearing sale of cut prices. Many shrewd advertisers never announce that they are doing anything unusual when they start to clean up in a clearing sale. They prefer to describe the article as having good value. A carefully phrased detailed description and a reduced price in plain figures will tell the whole story in a nut-shell. The use of extravagant phrases, such as "Phenominal reductions in prices," Record breakers," "World's greatest bargains," etc., etc., are misleading. They have a smack of insincerity which is not convincing. Furthermore, they require space which could be otherwise used to much better advantage in a plain, matter-of-fact description of the goods.

The best way to write an advertisement which will pull is to put the article on the desk before you and then write a short description covering its points of merit, just as you would do if you were talking to a customer instead of putting your thoughts on paper. That is advertising of the kind which has made some of the largest mercantile houses of the world. Beware of misrepresentation. Stick to the facts. Back up your statements by guaranteeing to take back the goods and returning the money if the purchaser doesn't consider them fair value for the price.

The merchant of the country town is the fountainhead of the town's prosperity. If he sets the pace, the professional men—meaning the lawyers, doctors, bankers, amusement men—and even the laborers, all of whom have something to sell, will get their quota of benefit from the market which the advertising efforts of the merchant creates.

Remember that every citizen has something to sell. It may be merchandise, professional skill, legal service, stocks or bonds, or even the time of the day laborer. There should therefore be hearty co-operation with the local merchant in his efforts to create a market for himself and his neighbors; every member of the little bee hive of industry owes faithful allegiance to each other as a means of promoting the welfare of all. That is the duty imposed by citizenship. It is the tariff charged for the protection and benefits shared in by each.

More Support Needed For Hockey.

Although the Thief River Falls Hockey asociation has made great progress within the last ten days in the way of establishing the reputation of its team, in defeating the championship team of northern Minnesota which team suffered its third defeat in six years, more progress in a financial way is needed. The following subscriptions have been added to the former published list:

Lieberman Bros.	$2.00
J. Provencher	5.00
First National Bank	5.00
Furan & Benson	1.00
Jerdee & Reedy	1.00
F. J. Stebbins	2.00

But as the entire expense of maintaining the hockey rink and building the fence around it and all cleaning expenses are paid by the Hockey association, it is necessary to raise $100 more to take care of that expense and owing to the fact that the city of Thief River Falls has received valuable space, far in excess of the money expended, in the Twin City papers and all the papers of the state, the city has gained great publicity and the merchants and business men of this city should feel proud to be able to support such a proposition that gains them publicity that they cannot buy.

That hockey has come to Thief River Falls to stay was evidenced by the fact that 200 people attended the Crookston game and although not one out of 20 had witnessed a hockey game before 200 were made ardent hockey fans and the attendance should be greatly increased and this means that the younger generation will take up the game and it was with that view in mind that the Hockey association was formed by old players who had practically retired from the game. It is the younger generation that is wanted on the hockey rink and the older ones will make every effort to teach them the game and in that way, the boys will be engaged in good, clean, healthful outdoor exercise.

The committee soliciting funds for the upkeep of the hockey rink will call on every business man in Thief River Falls and believing that they are representing a just cause, will ask that the business men give this matter a little thought and attention before passing judgment. The members of the team are each put to a personal expense of $25 in equipping themselves for the game and are buying their own uniforms which are expected to arrive in a few days, the color being black with yellow trimming with Thief River Falls in white letters, and it is hoped that they will be here for the next game.

Season tickets for the games are being issued, it being the object to schedule eight or ten games and to warrant the bringing of such teams as St. Paul, Winnipeg and Duluth to this city, thereby gaining the most publicity and to insure the payment of the expenses of these teams. Every person who intends going to the games and who wishes to support the game is earnestly solicited to take advantage of this opportunity of boosting the game, and make it possible to arrange for eight or ten games, including some of the above mentioned teams.

The hockey association has in view an excellent player much needed by the team who is a very good office man, being at present engaged by the Register of Deeds of Roseau county who will give his services to the hockey team if secured a position in this city and any business man in need of a good bookkeeper or accountant will confer a great favor on the club by taking the matter up with the undersigned.

G. HOWARD SMITH,
Secretary of the Thief River Falls Hockey Association.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CONVEY HOCKEYISTS

Return Game Will Be Played At Crookston January 30—60 People Needed To Insure The Special.

Arrangements were completed the first of the week, whereby the Thief River Falls hockey team will play Crookston a return game on the rink at that place on Sunday, January 30. The Commercial club of this city will run a big booster special and over 200 rooters are expected to make the trip. Secretary Fred Lincoln and George Johnson are in charge of the special and all those desiring to make the trip will "sign up" with them as early as possible. The round trip fare will be $2.50. In order to secure the train, a guarantee of sixty passengers must be given, but it is expected that no trouble will be experienced in securing the required number to make the journey. The train will probably leave here at ten o'clock in the morning and will return at seven or seven-thirty.

Crookston sent a large delegation to this city at the opening of the hockey season and it is hoped that their efforts will be outdone.

A special train of five Canadian Pacific coaches, conveying Gertrude Hoffman and 49 players, passed through the city Monday morning enroute to Winnipeg, after playing an engagement at the Orpheum theatre in Minneapolis.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over an heirloom, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also, the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the girl, Esther, reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther. Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so does his companion and cousin, Blair Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley. In stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem.

Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventuress, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Esther's being received in Fairfax society. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen demented. Marmaduke Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning Arthur is a fugitive he seeks Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving for the west. Their train is robbed, Vivian losing the diamond, which a slain train robber drops in the desert. The $100,000 he stole is found by Arthur, now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment and Esther is in Richmond society. Abe Bloom, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman. Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich he buys Stanley hall, sold at auction, through Blake, and also provides for Hagar and Esther. Luke Lovell buys the diamond from the squaw, but loses it in a fight. Vivian, desiring aid to ensnare Arthur, sends for Blair.

Vivian is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Esther to deliver to Arthur.

Blair joins Vivian in Los Angeles. Durand, "king of diamonds," a crook known to Vivian, goes to a saloon to try to discover the diamond. There he meets Luke Lovell. Esther and Arthur appear on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles in care of the physician-crook, Durand. Esther follows and is refused admittance to see him. In the meantime the diamond is found by two bill posters, one of whom murders the other for it. Arthur is "doped" by Durand, De Vaux and Vivian, although Blair, who has taken charge of Arthur's business affairs, protests.

The diamond passes in dice play from the bill poster to Santley, circus owner, who is killed, and the diamond is put up at auction as part of his estate. Blair and Vivian falsify a telegram from Blake to Arthur, making Arthur believe he suffered from hallucination in thinking he saw Esther. Luke is "railroaded" to prison by Blair. Arthur buys the diamond and then later gives a costume ball at which Esther appears. Vivian insists that he choose between them. Blair, trying to take the diamond from Durand, who steals it from Arthur, hurls Durand from a window, killing him. Quabba plans to aid Lovell to escape. Esther and Smythe return to Virginia, the girl rejoining Hagar at the sanitarium.

CHAPTER LI.

The Gypsy's Hoard.

THROWING back the great bronze bolt on the ornate front door of the Powell mansion, Blair Stanley darted from the vestibule and around the house to the back, closely followed by Vivian Marston and the shaking master of the mansion.

There, beneath the high window, lay the battered body of Frank Durand, physician, arch crook—the erstwhile King of Diamonds. His neck was broken, and the already congealing blood upon face and head marked where the cruel blows of Blair's slungshot had struck.

But the grasp of Durand's right hand had relaxed and the diamond from the sky was gone!

Arthur bent closer and then covered his eyes to keep out the grewsome sight as Blair screamed, "He is dead!"

"We must think of what account we give of this!" whispered Vivian, the quickest witted of the trio. Then she spoke as though directly to John Powell.

"Did you see the struggle? It must have been De Vaux who killed him!"

Arthur had been too dazed from the effect of the sleeping powder that Durand had secretly administered during the card playing and the drinking earlier in the night to have anything but a confused recollection of what had really occurred.

Then Blair spoke up. "I heard the fight in your room and rushed in," he said. "De Vaux was beating Durand with a slungshot, I think. Yes, here it is!" and he picked up the ugly weapon from where it lay beside the dead man.

"I found the switch by the door and turned the lights on full, and it was all over. De Vaux passed me and ran down the stairs and out," chimed in Vivian.

Then she sobbed and tore at her hair, hanging down her shoulders. Her grief and hysteria were not feigned. "The diamond, the diamond from the sky! The murderous little thief De Vaux got it! Who would have thought that little sneak would have the pluck?"

"He is dead!" Blair screamed!

Then she turned on the shaking man who was known as the mad millionaire in fury. "Why didn't you give it to me, as you promised?" she cried.

And in futile rage of disappointment she beat and tore at herself till Blair grasped her by the wrists.

"Quiet, you she devil!" he hissed. "De Vaux will not get away with the diamond. People are coming. Remember, now, not a word that we suspect Durand! We don't wish too much probing. That's the curse of it. There is where De Vaux has us. Fortunately he may suspect much about us, but he knows little."

Inspired again by this final tragedy of the diamond, the newspapers printed the stories of John Powell's rapid rise to wealth, the accident that had shattered him in a riot at his mines in the mountains, the skillful treatment of the stranger physician, Durand, that had restored the young millionaire.

Then had followed accounts of the triple tragedy in the deaths of the woman lion tamer, Santley, the circus proprietor and the clown husband of the Lady of Lions because of the great diamond from nowhere.

The recovery of the diamond after it had been stolen by Sankey, the stableman, following the panic at the circus, and the sale of the diamond were items that further spiced the sensational stories that were printed at Durand's death.

Physically Mr. Powell was in fair health, the papers said, but mentally and as regards his nervous system his condition gave great concern to his associates, and he was to be taken on an auto tour from California to Colorado.

Hagar and Esther, With Smythe, Journeyed to Fairfax.

Meanwhile De Vaux had found shelter in the gray of dawn at Signora Solari's cafe, La Bella Napoli, rousing that good lady and her ravishing daughter from their slumbers to admit him. He had ingratiated himself into their greedy graces by present cash payments and many promises of largess in the future.

The cunning De Vaux, dwelling in hiding under the name of Lancia, had carefully paved the way to avert suspicion in his hiding out, and so the clamor and search for him passed over and by the cafe of Le Bella Napoli, while he lay in a mean room and chafed at the confinement and drank heavily to stifle his fears.

* * * * * * *

In faraway Virginia Hagar and Esther journeyed from Richmond down to Fairfax, escorted by their new but firm friend, that eccentric bachelor English barrister and legal representative of the earls of Stanley, Marmaduke Smythe.

The tender affection between the devoted Hagar and the loving Esther had grown the stronger through their mutual sorrow and disappointment at the wild and profligate conduct of Arthur, flourishing and in luxury, yet surrounded by evil associations, in the far California city.

Unlocking the great door of Stanley Hall, Hagar led the way through the hall and into the old library. The windows were unlatched and thrown open to air the long closed old mansion.

Smythe examined the portraits curiously. "It is over a generation ago," he said softly, "since I was in this room. There is Colonel Stanley's portrait just as he looked in the flesh the night I attested the heir of Stanley over twenty years ago."

And the good hearted lawyer sighed and thought of old age that comes like a thief, yet slowly, to rob us of youth, of hope, of vigor and of those we love whom death has called before us.

To Hagar also the place revived dull old heartaches. There at that door she had stood in her young, despairing motherhood, to be dragged away ere she could cry in her agony that she was being robbed of her offspring like Rachel of old.

Then Hagar kissed Esther and shook off the gloom of these sad memories.

Esther Hoped to Find the Rest Theretofore Denied Her.

In her Virginia home Esther hoped to find the rest theretofore denied her.

Smythe understood now the reasons that actuated Arthur and Blair in their strange diffidence in claiming the earldom of Stanley that awaited the American heir. Arthur Stanley, as Hagar's son had been known here, could not claim it because he knew he was not the rightful heir.

Blair could not claim it because he was in the dark in this and thought his supposed cousin stood in his way. Besides, there hung over Blair the shadow of the murder of Dr. Lee. He feared to bring himself into any prominence while yet Hagar lived and knew.

All Blair could hope for was the death of the supposititious Arthur Stanley and of Hagar Harding, the gypsy woman, who had had the proofs of his guilt.

Hagar was first to break the silence as these thoughts flitted through all their minds. "Well," she said, "let us try to be cheerful though we lose you, our good friend, today."

"You do not lose me, I trust," said Marmaduke Smythe, with quaint gallantry. "True, I must return to England to attend to matters of the estate of the late Earl of Stanley.

"The matter of the succession must lie in abeyance for the present. But you may come to England with the fair Miss Esther here before long, or I may return to America again. Who knows?"

"And now," said Hagar. "I understand that there was some alarm manifested by the late Mrs. Judge Stanley regarding the expenses my stay at the sanitarium in Richmond brought about. I told you"—here she turned to Esther—"that I was a wealthy woman. I am, moderately speaking. Gypsylike, I would never trust to banks. After I leased Stanley Hall I hid my wealth in a secure place in this very room, an old hiding place that perhaps even Colonel Stanley knew nothing of."

Hagar reached into the chimney and brought from a ledge hidden behind the front of the fireplace an old long chisel. With this she pried up a strip of time worn wooden molding at the end of the hearthstone. This removed, the hearthstone turned on a hidden pivot, one end of the hearthstone descending into a cavity.

CHAPTER LII.

The Harding Family Tree.

FROM this cavity Hagar brought forth packages of banknotes from among a number of such.

"All this is yours, Esther, my dear," she said softly. "The Hardings had been rich people as gypsies go, but the profligate father of my husband, Matt Harding, died in poverty. It left my husband bitter and greedy.

"He remembered enviously the gypsy wealth his father had wasted. So when Arthur was born and a male heir, even if a false one, was desired at Stanley Hall Colonel Stanley had no great trouble in getting my husband to sell our newborn boy.

"This is very curious," remarked Smythe.

"My husband did not live long to enjoy his gypsy fortune. He died, and I returned, and in revenge—oh, forgive me, Esther, my child!—I stole you away, together with the diamond from the sky, and left my son to grow up the heir of Stanley.

"The death of your father that night, Esther, my child, made my wicked deed easy to accomplish. The two old colored servants that knew the secret had been slaves of the cruel Judge Lamar Stanley, Blair's father. You had been raised in secret here. The servants would not betray Colonel Stanley while he lived, and they loyally kept the secret till they died.

"Dr. Lee, the only other sharer of the secret besides the two colored servants and myself, was a kind yet timid man. He, too, had hated Judge Stanley and had been led into the colonel's conspiracy to cheat the son of his enemy of the great heritage of the Stanley earldom and the diamond from the sky.

"After my husband's death," Hagar went on, "I augmented the money he had received from Colonel Stanley by fortune telling and dealing in horses, the source of all legitimate gypsy wealth.

"And as my profligate son wasted your heritage here, and as we would accept no repayment from him now, I give you all this with a loving heart, for it is all rightfully yours.

"I intend to apprise your relatives in Fairfax and Richmond of the true facts. Some of them will come to dwell with you here in Stanley Hall, you will take your place in the station of life to which you were born, and I will return to mine own people, for I am a gypsy and as such cannot remain with Esther Stanley of Stanley Hall!"

"No, no!" cried Esther tearfully as she threw her arms around the sobbing Hagar. "You are my own dear mother! I will never leave you nor suffer you to leave me. What have the Stanleys done for me?

"What would they do for me? I ask this, and I answer it. They have done nothing for me but ignore me as Dr. Lee's ward and your daughter. They could do nothing for me as Esther Stanley to give me the happiness the feel of your arms around me gives!"

Lawyer Smythe turned and coughed to keep back his tears at this affecting scene. A yellow, time stained, frayed and bulky folded parchment had fallen from among the bank notes Hagar had drawn from the cavity under the hearthstone.

"This is very curious. I am much interested in old parchments, being a lawyer, you know," remarked Smythe as he picked up the parchment. He felt he was stuttering and talking foolishly at random, but he wished in his tactful way to relieve the emotional tension that had followed Hagar's recital. His words had the desired effect. Hagar smiled faintly and said:

"Oh, that? That is the gypsy Hardings' family tree. The old gypsy families, especially the gypsies of English stock, such as the Lees, Hardings, Lovells—yes, the Stanleys—have these things. Strange, isn't it? The outside world regards the Romany people only as vagabond wanderers, but there are Romany degrees of proud lineage.

"The Lees and Stanleys here in Virginia would be surprised to follow back their family lines to find they lead back in the centuries to gypsy camps on English downs.

"Who knows, Esther, my dear, but that you have gypsy blood in your veins, after all, even if it be ever so little!"

"It is a curious old document," repeated Lawyer Smythe, "and, as I said, I am interested in such things. May I have it? I will keep it carefully and return it in due time."

Hagar smiled and spoke half carelessly. "Keep it as long as you desire, Mr. Smythe. It may be cause to bring you back to return it, or for our going to England to fetch it back."

They all laughed at the suggestion, and Lawyer Smythe took the document and prepared to make his adieus.

His bachelor reserve was shaken to its foundation when Esther impulsively threw her arms around his neck and kissed him.

"You have been a father to me," she cried—"a dear, dear daddy!"

Lawyer Smythe was still blushing when he drove away to take the train from Fairfax, positively refusing to permit the women to accompany him to the depot.

* * * * * * *

Work is for workingmen. Quabba was a wandering minstrel, and even as a nonunion roofer loathed being mechanical. But he worked with a purpose on the prison roof, even though his purpose was not to work.

But he signaled to Luke that all was well the last day of the job, and left the coiled rope with one end fastened around the chimney and the lower end fastened to a cord that hung hidden down over the gutter of the prison roof to Luke's cell window.

Meanwhile Luke sawed at the bars and the appointed night came when Quabba waited for him on a bridge that spanned a mean and straggling street not far from the prison. Quabba had a change of costume for Luke's prison stripes, and, to avoid suspicion, he had with him the pony and street piano cart and Clarence, the monkey.

So Quabba waits at midnight, and Clarence, the monkey, shivers and whimpers, and the pony is restless to move and be on their way.

Listening to the sound of the retreating steps of the prison guard, Luke pushes out the bars, sawed at the lower end and draws down the rope from its coil on the roof by the cord and lowers himself cautiously.

He is halfway down when he feels the rope give ominously. He is near the ground, when the sentry hears the fall of a brick from the old chimney and turns. The sentry calls for the other guard and fires his rifle to alarm the prison.

His comrade joins him, and they are within reach of Luke, whose toes have just touched the ground, when the rope slackens and falls and with it, with a clatter and many heavy thuds, the old prison chimney. It has given way under the bulky weight of the escaping prisoner and falls upon the guards and overwhelms them.

The Bricks Fell Upon the Guards and Overwhelmed Them.

By a fraction of an inch the avalanche of bricks has just missed the startled Luke.

Clambering upon the loose pile of bricks that gives beneath his heavy feet, Luke scrambles to the top of the wall and by some miracle passes over the broken glass and spikes unscathed and drops down the sheer twenty feet of the prison wall to liberty.

Quabba is waiting on the bridge. From a bag on the piano cart he hastily hands the panting Luke an old coat, trousers and a hat that has a wig within it.

Then, as the footsteps of the searching guards and their cries are heard nearing, Quabba hands a stain compound to Luke that darkens still more the gypsy's already dark countenance and hands, and then they move on with pony cart and monkey—two wandering organ grinders.

The pursuit reaches them and pauses. "Did you see an escaped convict go by?" pants the warden.

"Si, signore!" says the crafty Quabba. His companion, who is quite lame, it seems, for he hobbles a little ahead, points to indicate the direction the fugitive has taken.

The signora has been playing cards with her ravishing daughter, Rosa, and the so charming patron, Signor Lancia, in the latter's apartment. The so charming Signor Lancia, sad to say, is quite overcome with wine. When so overcome the so charming Signor Lancia is indiscreet.

He has shown the ravishing Rosa a wondrous diamond whereat she has cried in delight, though the again discreet, if intoxicated, signor has the caution to place his fingers upon her rosy lips, the gesture asking silence.

A Heavy Blow Descends!

Signora Solari is in the doorway that looks into the garden. Quabba is there, and with him is a strange man, quite lame, it would seem, for he leans upon a heavy stick, a mattock handle, it appears.

"This is my cousin, signora," says the patron Quabba. "He desires a room till he gets a job. Perhaps when he has secured employment you will still honor him by the hospitality of your establishment."

All this Quabba says in Calabrian dialect, which the signora understands perfectly, although she, as she will tell you, is of a noble Neapolitan family.

The cousin, it would seem, is fatigued. Quabba leaves him with the signora and journeys with his pony and organ cart and his monkey to the stables, that are Quabba's domicile as well as theirs.

The signora leads the new guest to his humble room, gives him a lamp and wishes him sweet repose, but in the Neapolitan tongue and not in the Calabrese patois.

She returns to her daughter and the so charming Signor Lancia of the Italian secret service. The chianti flows, caution is forgotten, the magnificent jewel is shown to ravish the eyes of all.

In the next room a seemingly lame man listens at the thin partition, biting his tongue that he may keep from crying out, for he hears a tipsy voice saying: "You may well admire it. It is called rightly 'the diamond from the sky.'"

* * * * *

John Powell has returned from his automobile trip. He has seen the Garden of the Gods. But the trip and the wild scenery have not restored him.

Truly he is a mad millionaire. In fever delirium he has a dream. Before him floats, with a sad smile, Esther in vestal robes. He reaches to touch her, but she floats away and looks back and sadly smiles.

He dreams he follows on foot and in his speediest car—a race of madness. Down great mountains, up and over, and then halting in the wild, weird ruggedness of the great rocks in the Garden of the Gods.

So he pursues the fair phantom to the abyss edge of a giddy precipice. He clutches for her ere she falls and falls himself—down, down. And then with a dull shock he finds himself awake, fallen over the table where he has slept, his hands upon his arms.

In far Virginia the seraph of his dreams prays for him with all the fervor of a constant heart, but over him here and regarding him with a mocking smile stands a woman whose face is bold and sensuous—Vivian Marston.

* * * * *

In the Cafe La Bella Napoli the so charming Signor Lancia dazzles the eyes of his hostess and flutters the heart of her daughter, the ravishing Rosa, with the desire for the diamond.

And then from the softly opened door behind them a heavy blow descends. The lamp is smashed, the room is plunged in darkness.

Shrieks in the darkness and heavy, hurrying feet through the corridor. A door is burst open, and tables and chairs are heard thrown over and aside in the deserted garden under the arbors below. The signora brings another lamp in due time, but the so charming Signor Lancia screams and curses. The diamond from the sky is gone!

Some Of The Results Obtained At My Clinic.

Having been aware of the short comings of medicine and surgery in treating diseases, I equipped my office years ago with the necessary apparatus for the carrying out of Nature Cure teachings in my practice, and below is a list of cases to show the results I have been able to obtain by so doing:

In the spring of 1913 I treated two cases (a man and a woman, both middle aged) for Chronic Articular Rheumatism of four and seven years standing, respectively, with complete relief in two and three weeks' treatments. In the early spring of 1913 I treated two young men and in the summer of 1914, another young man, all for Sciatic Rheumatism, for about two weeks each with complete relief and no signs of any return since in any of the cases.

I recall four cases of Pneumonia (two young men and two young ladies) where the disease was broken in 24 hours.

I have treated several cases of Eczema with curative results; but one case in particular that I treated in the fall of 1912 was that of a young lady with a very chronic type of the disease of several years standing, who after having tried all sorts of doctoring with no avail, was completely relieved under my care.

Several cases of Acute Rheumatism have been cured in the shortest possible time under my treatment. All sorts of skin and veneral diseases are rapidly cured by Nature Cure Methods.

Any other disease, no matter of what nature, such as: Asthma, Bronchitis, Pulmonary Tuberculosis, Liver, Stomach, Bowel (including Appendicitis), Kidney, Nervous and generative organ troubles, as well as diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, etc., are best handled by Nature Cure Methods.

The most remarkable cure I have obtained is that of a young boy who, after having been given up by two of the leading Thief River Falls physicians for Abdominal and Lung Tuberculosis, was cured by my methods four years ago and is well today. Since then I have relieved a girl for Tuberculosis of a Kidney by the same treatment and I have at present a boy under my care who was entirely crippled three years ago with Rheumatism and Hip and Ankle Tuberculosis in connection, but who is now progressing nicely toward recovery.

Plain Talk

Between You and Me.

Prices on commodities are constantly changing. Groceries, dry goods, shoes, clothing, hardware—in fact about everything that is bought and sold, fluctuates in price from time to time. Sometimes it is a gradual change, and again it is a sudden jump; sometimes up, and sometimes down.

When a change in price occurs, or is about to occur, the manufacturer or jobber usually informs his customers of the change. And when a reliable jobber or manufacturer tells a merchant of a change in price, the merchant usually takes his word for it. He has confidence in the man he buys from, or in his salesmen, and nine times out of ten he accepts the statement if he is dealing, as we said, with a reliable, reputable firm.

Now Here's a Funny Thing.

What happens when the merchant passes this information on to his customers, and when he has to adjust his selling prices according to the new schedule? If the price drops, it seems to us that it has little effect on the customer. The average buyer seems to take it as a matter of course, and straightway forgets that he ever paid a higher price. Tell him that gingham which he always paid 15c for he can now buy for 12c, and it usually makes as much impression as if you said "Pleasant day, isn't it?" But when you say "We now have to get 15c for this 12c gingham," often that same customer finds it hard to be convinced. We know of times when a raise in price makes a customer look upon us with suspicion, while if the price was lowered that much he would not give it a passing thought. Maybe you do not have this attitude—but the number who do are very large indeed. There are so many who cannot see why prices must go up as well as down.

Now Why

Is the merchant more dishonest with his customers than the jobber is with his? We don't believe so. We believe it is a lack of understanding between the buyer and seller. We believe a little monthly heart to heart talk thru our "Store News" helps to eliminate this kind of feeling, and that is one of the chief purposes of our little monthly sheet. If it does it well repays for the trouble of getting it out.

The Old Fashioned Merchant.

Many people think the merchant still runs his business as did one Isaac. Isaac noticed that his son failed to sell a customer who was looking at silk. He reproved his young hopeful, saying, "Ikey, you shud haf sed, 'Madam the silk worms has lately all died, and that makes the price of silk higher now." Later young Ikey had a kick from a customer on the price of tape. "But Madam," said Ikey, "ve shoost got vord that the tapevorms has all died, and now ve haf to get more for the tape."

The Newer School.

We believe that merchants today believe in good, old fashioned honesty, simply because it is good for the business, if for no other reason. We believe that is what will produce the dividends, year after year. Smart tricks have no place in the business of the merchant who wants to sell a customer more than once—who intends to stay in business. Every trade paper, every merchant's convention, every good jobber and manufacturer, recommends this kind of policy strictly and without exception. We believe the successful merchant today believes this policy is best.

Keeping the Balance.

So if prices go down, don't be surprised if some prices have to go up. merchants are always more willing to have prices reduced than to raise them, simply because it is easier. But there are times when a price must be raised, and it is something that cannot be controlled by one man.

Appraised.

Visitors were at the door, and Bobbie was told to show them in, waiting the arrival of older members of the family. Seeing the visitors glance around the room, Bobby remarked: "Well, what do you think of our stuff, anyway?"

Lokens' Grocery Annex

You might think we lived most anywhere but in a civilized country, the way some of our FELLOW MERCHANTS act.

To close them up on Sunday, the Mayor found it necessary to enforce the law. Now what do you think of such businessmen?

Those same men insist on keeping their stores open until nine or ten o'clock every night, thereby compelling all other stores to do likewise; and on this account scores of clerks are deprived of any time for themselves. How would you like to have your daughter be compelled to work from 8:00 A. M. to 9 or 10 P. M. daily? Don't you think it's about time public sentiment stepped in? This evil, that's dead wrong, can be stopped by the women of this town. Think! The welfare of this community demands you act.

Are You

one of the few who have been letting the peddler man get 30 per cent more from you for groceries than you can buy them for at home, in small lots? If you are, ARE YOU GOING TO LET HIM DO IT TO YOU AGAIN?

Bald Assertion.

"Yes, and you usually get smooth on the top before you get there."

Ladies

Just wait until you see our new Spring suits, coats, dresses, waists and skirts—some styles, values and prices to please you.

Queer, Isn't It?

It is a funny thing, and yet
It is quite true, you'll find:
The faster you run into debt,
The more you run behind.

Optimistic.

"An optimist, my son, is a person who doesn't care what happens if it doesn't happen to him."

The Difference.

"Father," said Johnny, "What is the difference between farming and agriculture?"

"Well, my son; for farming you need a plow and harrow and other implements, and for agriculture all you need is a pencil and a piece of paper."

Northwest's Greatest Store

In but a few years of time, this, one of the largest mercantile plants in Thief River Falls, has grown. It's growing larger all the time—more, bigger and better stocks are continually being added. New fixtures, improvements and ideas are replacing those which have not measured up to our standard. The Loken standard of merchandise satisfaction, honest, dependable goods, at honest prices, high grade service, and a thoroughly modern department store, has created for us hundreds of the most loyal and satisfied customers. It's this loyalty and the peoples' "good will," if you please, that's making this the Northwest's greatest store.

Signs Of Spring.

Not in the weather—certainly not. But each mail now brings invoices requiring four and six cents postage, sheets of great length and staggering totals. They are for new spring stock—bought early before advances. From now we will be busy checking and marking spring goods which will be constantly arriving. Where's our dull, lazy, winter period? Truly, this is a busy world.

time you think that anything high remember that the blame, should not be placed upon the retail merchant. There is the whole economic condition of the country to consider. There is high priced labor at the factories. There is the cost of distribution all along the line until it gets to the retailer. There is the high cost of raw products. There is the rising prices on all products of the soil.

Nobody would be better pleased than we, could all prices be chopped in half. We would make more money than we are making now because there would be more trade.

In the light of all this we think you will conclude that your retailer is not such a robber and that his profit is well within the bounds of fairness. So far as we are concerned personally we wish you would make careful comparison and apply any test you wish in an effort to satisfy yourself beyond all doubt as to the fairness or unfairness of our prices. We have not the least misgiving as to the result.

Credit Is Precious; Do You Guard Yours?

One of the most valuable possessions any man or woman can have is credit. The person who has money and lacks credit is poor. If people won't believe you when you agree to pay money on a certain date you are laboring under a tremenduous handicap. If your word and your reputation are not sufficient to justify at least a measure of trust in your financial ability you lack something that nobody should be without.

From the standpoint of a man in business, credit is about the biggest thing there is. This is why a merchant is so interested on collecting his accounts up closely. He buys merchandise and if he does not pay for it within thirty or sixty days his credit suffers. The necessity of credit and the value of credit will cause merchants to pay interest upon money many times so they can discharge their obligations upon the due date. We don't hesitate to say we have borrowed money often to pay our bills and preserve our credit inviolate. This was not because we had no money coming to us, but because we could not get it when it was due.

What a great world this would be if everybody who bought merchandise—and by everybody we mean merchants as well as consumers—would pay their bills promptly when they fell due. In this happy condition you would hear no more about the advantages of selling for cash.

The main reason for selling for cash is that too many people will not pay their bills promptly. Many a perfectly honest and altogether responsible man delays paying his bills sometimes as much on account of carelessness as upon inability.

Credit is a great thing. How about yours?

Our Store Service Is Yours; Why Not Use It?

One of the notable advantages you gain in trading with us is the very excellent service that our store affords.

We always try to have everything clean and inviting. We believe in the highest degree of good housekeeping. We try to conduct such a store as we ourselves would like to buy from were we buying at retail. We try to give to our customers the excellent attention that we should appreciate were we in their places. We stand behind our goods and are ready to make right anything that is not right. We endeavor to have on hand at all times an adequate assortment of the merchandise that you have a right to expect to see in a store of this kind. Everybody in the store is supposed to be courteous to customers and to know enough about the goods to be able intelligently to answer any ordinary question that may be asked.

The whole scheme of the store's operating system is to make your buying easy, economical and speedy—to save you money, to save you time and to preserve your temper and good looks.

Are you availing yourself to the limit of the service advantages of this store? We surely want to have them at your disposal and trust you will not be backward about using them as you see fit.

We welcome suggestions as to how we can make our store service better. We most certainly are eager to please you and we will please you if you give us an opportunity.

Let us have your ideas about this. We can work out these ideas for the mutual good of all concerned.

I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and a short time after I used them, I felt better. I haven't had any kidney trouble in some time."

FIRST MID-WINTER FAIR IS A GLOWING SUCCESS

OVER 1,000 IN ATTENDANCE

Home Products Dinner Was Big Feature of Fair On Thursday—Numerous Prizes Awarded Exhibitors.

The first Mid-Winter fair ever held in Thief River Falls was brought to a successful close last Thursday evening after the two day session. A greater success crowned the efforts of the promoters than had been anticipated at first and the fair will hereafter become an annual event. Although the fair was in its infancy it proved to be a winner from every point of view, but future events of this nature promise to outshine this first attempt. The fact that those in charge of the fair had communicated and interceded with the weather man some time previous, ideal weather conditions prevailed during the two days and enabled all those who desired to attend from the country. It is estimated that over 1,000 people attended the fair during the two days. The net profits to the club amount to $157.71; all bills and other expenses connected with the exhibition being paid. The auto section netted the club $25 while $69 was realized from the Home Products dinner.

The big feature on Thursday was the dinner held in the basement of the Auditorium and over 500 people partook of the excellent menu prepared by C. W. McDaniel. Julien Provencher, who acted in the capacity of chief chef, is deserving of credit for the efficient manner in which he handled the part assigned to him.

The afternoon program commenced at 3 p.m. with an address by Hon. D. P. O'Neill, who delivered an interesting talk on "Our Farmers." During his discourse he complimented the farmers of Pennington county on the part they had taken in the development of its resources. C. D. Calderwood, appeared on the program also and gave a short talk on the subject of taxation. The afternoon was then given over to making the rewards on the various farm exhibits on display. The following is the list of prize winners:

Oats—F. B. Conklin, 1st; Joe Oski, 2nd.

Mammoth Red Clover Seed—H. Borden, Town of North, 1st.

Rutabagas—E. F. Culver, 1st.

The program for Thursday evening was a big drawing card and the Auditorium was filled to its capacity. President Geo. G. Johnson, of the Commercial club, opened the program with a few introductory remarks in which he thanked the people of Thief River Falls and surrounding country for interest taken in the fair, which was necessary to its success. He also mentioned that the success of the fair, was largely due to the inventor—Fred T. Lincoln.

The first number on thep rogram was a musical selection by the sextette, composed of Misses Evelyn Grindeland, Synneva Grindeland, Ruth Storli, Grace Dugan and Messrs. Chase Mix and J. E. Dickey. They acquitted themselves in a splendid manner and received spontaneous encores of applause.

Secretary Don V. Moore, of the North Dakota state fair, was called on next and responded immediately in which he complimented the Commercial club on their efforts. He stated that for the first attempt at an event of this kind it exceeded anything he had ever seen.

E. R. Montgomery of Grand Forks, rendered several vocal selections and was applauded very liberally.

Hon. Jerry D. Bacon, owner of the Lilac Hedge farm near Grand Forks, was scheduled as the speaker of the evening and addressed the audience in a very pleasing manner. Mr. Bacon held the attention of the people during his discourse, his sentences being punctuated at times with laughter from the audience. Following his address Mr. Way of Grand Forks rendered an excellent piano solo. This was followed by a three minute talk by Mr. Bacon on alfalfa, and he gave the farmers some valuable pointers along that line.

The farm crops display in charge of J. B. Conner and J. Bordewick, caused considerable attention; a large crowd always being in evidence at that section of the hall. The display of grains came fully up to the expectations, and the garden produce exhibit was also exceptionally good, while the exhibits in the culinary section was also of high order.

The first motor car exposition, and the feature of the fair, in which five 1916 models were displayed, proved to be a good drawing card. The models exhibited were the Buick, shown by Fred Haug; Saxon Four and Saxon Six, exhibited by Dr. C. R. Crandall; Maxwell by Anderson & Sons; Studebaker shown by J. P. Curtis. Other local dealers had con-

ANOTHER PLEASING BAND CONCERT SOON

Director J. Greenfield Announces That Second of Concert Series Will Be Given Friday, February 4.

The second of the series of band concerts to be given by the Thief River Falls concert band during the winter month, has been arranged by Director J. Greenfield and he announces that it will be held on Friday evening, February 4, at 8:15 p. m. All those who attended the first recital and those who have heard the favorable comment from the last concert will know what is in store for them at this time. The program has a varied arrangement of musical selections and will satisfy the tastes of all lovers of music, both classical and popular. A number of individual soloists will appear and the program is featured by a cello solo by C. B. Crandall. "The Barber of Sevelli" is the leading number of the band, and is a piece of music that amateur bands very seldom play. Another headliner for the program is the descriptive selection, "A Hunting Scene." The music is arranged according to the story. The morning breaks and the sharp call of the trumpeter is heard, notifying the members to assemble the fox hounds. The music protrays the meeting of the foxes and the hounds, the chase and the death. During the chase the music is quickened and rises to a striking cresendo and then gradually dies down.

The bands needs the support of all, and in order to keep this superb musical organization together it behooves everyone to attend this concert. The following is the program, subject to changes:

1. March: "Willow Grove"—Sorrinta
2. Selection: "Barber of Seville"—Rossini.
3. Clarient Duet: "Merriment"—Barnard.—Messrs. Loken and Nelson.
4. Vocal Solo: "In Old Madrid"—J. Dickey.
5. Overature: "Around the World"—Beyer. Introducing National Songs of Nations.
6. Trombone Solo: "The Message"—Brooks.—Hy Gaslin.
7. Descriptive: "A Hunting Scene"—Boulis.
8. Cello Solo: "Gavotte" No. 2 in D—D. Popper.—C. B. Crandall, Piano Accomp., Miss Strupp.
9. Melophone Trio: "Visions"—Hayes.—Messrs. Hermanson, Johnson and Smith.
10. Waltz: "Wedding of The Winds"—Hale.
11. Vocal Solo: "Perfect Day"—Carrie J. Bond.—Chase Mix. Piano and Cello Accomp., Miss Strupp and C. B. Crandall.
12. Medley Selection: "Popular Songs"—Remick.

Popular Songs will be rendered between numbers.

Nine Cents Attract Crowds.

The nine cent sale now in progress at the Loken Department Store is drawing large crowds, and it is expected that these will increase daily until the close of the sale January 29.

The Lokens placed a large assortment of wares on sale at a uniform price of nine cents on Wednesday last and it has proven one of the most successful features thus far inaugrated at the big store. The bargain basement has been filled with buyers daily and the entire stock offered will be pretty well cleaned up by the end of next week. The big double page advertisement in the Times last week is credited by these progressive merchants with having been largely responsible for the interest shown in the bargain event.

PEOPLES STATE BANK INCREASES CAPITAL & SURPLUS TO $51,000

Undivided Profits Amounting To $5,000 Makes Total $56,000—Youngest Bank In The City.

LOT PURCHASED FOR BUILDING

Large Modern Banking House Will Be Erected This Spring Or Soon After—All New Stock Taken By Local People.

An important announcement in the financial circles of the city this week comes from the Peoples State Bank, that institution by a majority vote of the stockholders having increased the capital of the bank from $36,000 to $40,000 and the surplus from $6,000 to $11,000. This makes the total capital and surplus of the bank $51,000 and the addition of $5,000 in undivided profits swells the amount to $56,000.

This bank, though the youngest in the city, having been opened for business in 1906, has enjoyed a flourishing business from the start and its growth has been nothing short of phenominal. H. S Dahlen, vice president of the bank, and Oscar Sponheim, cashier, are to a great extent responsible for the rapid strides foreward made by the bank in the few years that it has been in existence. Both are thoroughly familiar with the banking business and the needs of this community and they have always taken an active part in matters of public interest that have a direct bearing on the development of this favored section.

The new stock issue has been taken entirely by local people which is another evidence of the faith that all have in the future of Thief River Falls and the surrounding country.

At the same time comes the announcement that the Peoples State bank has purchased the lot just west of the present bank building. The lot is 24x100 feet and is known as the Kiewel Brewing Co. property, from whom it was purchased. The old frame building that was on the site has been torn down and in its place will be erected one of the finest banking homes in northern Minnesota. The building will occupy the entire lot and will be strictly modern in every particular. It will be designed especially to meet the needs of this fast growing financial institution and will be a substantial addition to the business district of Thief River Falls.

At the present time the officials of the bank are uncertain as to just when building operations will be started but it will be in the spring or shortly thereafter.

EASTER VERY LATE---CALENDAR IS UNIQUE

Many Unique Features Are On 1916 Calendar—One Extra Pay Check.

A number of unusual features are offered on the present calendar year, and one of the most interesting will be the immovable feast, Easter Sunday.

In the year 325 A. D., the old council of Nice established Ash Wednesday and Easter Sunday. The former to always occur forty days in advance of Easter Sunday, which is fixed by solar and lunar calculations. According to the Nicene laws, Easter shall occur annually on or after the first full moon on or after the vernal equinox, which is always March 21. At this rate it will be seen that the earliest date on which Easter day may fall is March 21 and the latest date is April 25. Ash Wednesday will fall on March 8 this year while Easter Sunday will come on April 23. The next period in which Ash Wednesday will come as late as March 8, is the year 2106 A. D.

The year 1916 was ushered in on Saturday and will go out on a Sunday. This is a happening that very seldom occurs and one that gives to the year fifty-two Saturdays, thereby giving all employees an extra pay check. This would occur regularly every twenty-eight years except that the compilers of the Gregorian calendar provided that centuries not divisible evenly by four shall not be leap years. When a century occurs as did 1900, there is a lapse of forty years between leap years that begin on Saturday and end on Sunday. From this year on the twenty-eight-year period proceeds according to the established rule.

Y. M. C. A. BRANCH IS PROBABILITY FOR NEAR FUTURE HERE

Several Social Organizations Working On Proposition—Outlook Is Very Favorable.

STATE ORGANIZER WILL ASSIST

Woman's Club, Brotherhood And Business Organizations Will Unite In Carrying Out Proposed Plans.

That a Y. M. C. A. will be established in Thief River Falls in the very near future is not at all unlikely. It is a well known fact that the state organizer has had this city in view for some time and now that several local organizations have become actively interested in the undertaking it will in all probability materialize.

For several months past the Woman's club has considered the need of an institution of this kind for the betterment of social and civic conditions and with the assistance of other societies they intend to do all that is possible toward the establishment of a Y. M. C. A. here. Another organization prominently identified in the work is the Brotherhood, a society that was organized several months ago and whose main object is the providing of clean, wholesome places of recreation for the young and old of the city. At a meeting of this society Tuesday evening the Y. M. C. A. question was taken up and much enthusiasm was displayed. All members expressed themselves as being heartily in favor of the proposition and it was at once decided to outline a campaign and proceed with the undertaking along the most favorable lines. The Woman's club was advised of the plans of the Brotherhood and assurance was given that the members of that organization would assist in every way possible.

It will be strictly a community proposition and the Commercial club as well as other societies will be asked to help in carrying out the proposed plans.

The need of something of this kind has long been recognized in this city and it is now likely that the plan will receive the united support of all citizens. The population of the city is increasing at a rapid rate and various forms of recreation under proper supervision must be provided.

For the present it is likely that temporary quarters will be secured until it can be determined how large a membership it will be possible to secure. If the plans then materialize as it is expected, Thief River Falls will have a Y. M. C. A. building that will be a credit to the northwest.

HOCKEY TEAM WILL PLAY AT ST. PAUL

Local Ice Artists Have Been Invited To Enter The Mid-Winter Sports Carnival.

The Thief River Falls Hockey team has been recognized as a fast team and the city honored by the Mid-Winter Sports Carnival at St. Paul, as the team has been invited to participate in the hockey tournament which will be played in St. Paul from February 2nd to February 6th. This is of great advertising value to the city of Thief River Falls and every effort should be made to take full advantage of this opportunity.

The Mid-Winter Sports Carnival is being advertised throughout the United States and Thief River Falls, in entering this carnival, will receive publicity that cannot be purchased at any price. The fact that Thief River Falls has been picked as one of the eight teams, in itself is an element of great value in the way of advertising. With the team fast rounding into shape under the direction of Bennett, the locals will undoubtedly make a good showing which will add much to the value of the publicity and it is hoped that the Commercial club and business men will do their share in advertising the trip, so that it will be a great success. The Carnival association pays traveling expenses one way and all expenses while the team is in St. Paul, the team bearing the expense of its return railway fare.

Charter Commission Members Qualify

All but five of the members of the charter commission appointed by Judge Grindeland of district court have qualified and it is expected that these five will qualify within the next few days. When this is done the members of the commission will organize and the work of going over the charter for this city now in force and framing a new one or amendments to the present charter will be started. This will take considerable time and it will probably be several months before the work is completed and the proposed new charter submitted to the voters for their approval. In case it is only found necessary to amend the present charter the voters will not be called upon to approve it as it can be adopted through the state legislature.

M. Anderson, manager of the garage at the corner of Third street and Horace avenue, left last evening on the Soo flyer for Detroit on a brief business trip.

JEFFERSON TRAIL COMMITTEE NAMED

Daniel Shaw, C. L. Hanson And J. H. McKinney Represent This City—Last Meeting of Executive Commtitee.

The last meeting of the executive committee of the Commercial club for the fiscal year ending tonight was held at the club rooms last evening. Among the important business transacted was the naming of a committee to represent this city in the Jefferson Trail matter. The members of the committee are Daniel Shaw, chairman, C. L. Hansen and J. H. McKinney.

For some time Secretary Lincoln has been corresponding with various interested parties with the object in view of having the route of the Jefferson Trail pass through Thief River Falls and the committee will carry on the work as started by the secretary. The Jefferson Trail or highway starts at the gulf and runs straight north to the Twin Cities, from there going to Bemidji. The committee will endeavor to interest the State Highway commission in having the highway pass through Thief River Falls from Bemidji to a point some distance west and then due north and west to Winnipeg. C. L. Hansen left today for Minneapolis, where he will meet with the State Highway commission and take up the matter of the route with them.

The reports of the various committees for the Mid-Winter Fair were received at this meeting of the executive committee and all were accepted. At the same time a vote of thanks was tendered all who assisted in making the fair the success that it was, particularly the following: all local and outside speakers, the chairmen of the different committees, the band, the Ladies' Sextette and others who participated in the programs.

The committee also voted $25 from the funds of the club to the Hockey club to be used in paying the expenses of the players to St. Paul, where they will participate in the Mid-Winter Sports carnival. The members of the committee also made personal donations to the Hockey club as follows: Geo. G. Johnson, $5; M. C. Cutter, $5; Thos. A. Way, $5; C. W. Ackerman, $2.50; C. W. McDaniel, $2.50; John Wold, $2.50.

Other business of minor importance was transacted and the business affairs of the club for the year brought to a successful close.

Band Dance Was Success.

The third annual ball given by the Thief River Falls concert band at the Auditorium last Friday evening was a decided success in every way. The music furnished by the organization was of first-class order and met with the opproval of everyone. The fact that this was the band's first attempt at furnishing music for a dance and the successful way in which it was handled, bespeaks credit for Director Greenfield the efficient manner in which the band is being conducted.

A. J. Wedge, Jr., of Bemidji, was here the first of the week attending the meeting of the board of directors of the Peoples State bank. The members of the board inspected a number of improvements recently made in the banking house and found that they added greatly to the convenience with which business can be conducted. The counting room has been enlarged and a system for keeping track of checking accounts has been installed. This last named system enables the teller to inform a person of the condition of his account with the bank at a moment's notice and aids greatly in expediting business. The directors found affairs in a most satisfactory condition and took the preliminary steps looking toward making some important improvements during the coming year.

THOMAS O. TWEDEN HANGS HIMSELF TO RAFTER OF BARN

Tragedy Occurred On His Claim Fourteen Miles East of This City Tuesday Afternoon.

WAS OF UNBALANCED MIND

Tweden Was To Have Appeared At This Term of Court—Brooding Over This Trouble Is Main Cause For Act.

Thomas O. Tweden, age 50, bachelor homesteader, living on a claim near Kratka postoffice fourteen miles east of this city, ended his life Tuesday afternoon by hanging. The tragedy occurred between the hours of twelve and one o'clock.

Tweden had just returned to his home, from the Young farm, where he had been invited to dinner and on leaving the house remarked to Richard Lund, who has been in his employ around the farm, "you had better come over this afternoon and Ill pay you what you've got coming. Hard telling what'll become of my money —law suits and one thing after another." Tweden then proceeded to his home and it was thought that the act was committed as soon as he had reached his destination, in order that the young boy would find him.

Equipped with a shot gun and rope the man went o the barn. The barn is just in the course of construction—the only unfinished part to it being the laying of the hay loft floor. By climbing upon the joists of the second floor and fastening his rope very securely, he then put the loop around his neck and jumped down between the joists ending his life immediately by the jerk. At one o'clock Richard Lund came to the farm to receive his compensation for services rendered but Tweden was not found in the house. The boy then left for the barn, where he discovered the man suspended in mid-air. Directly overhead of the dead man, the farm cat had perched itself.

The boy notified the neighboring farmers, who in turn notified Coroner Halverson of this city, who left for the scene about six o'clock. Upon the arrival of the coroner the man was cut down and an examination showed that death had resulted immediately. The fact that he was equipped with a shot gun leads to the belief that he had chosen two ways in which to commit the act, and decided his fate by hanging.

Coroner Halverson decided that no inquest was necessary, and the remains were brought to this city yesterday morning.

Tweden was to have appeared at the January term of court now sitting, on a charge of alienation of Mrs. J. Johnson's affections, and was being sued for $5,000 by the latter's husband. This, together with poor health, caused him to worry and he evidently decided to end it all.

He is survived by a brother, who resides at Fargo, a sister at Duluth and a second brother living in Seattle, Washington.

Funeral services were held from the Halverson undertaking parlors this afternoon and interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

MEMORIAL COMMITTEE MEMBERS APPOINTED

Will Solicit Funds For A Memorial To The Late Governor Hammond.

The Pennington county members of the Hammond Memorial committee, appointed by Secretary Works for the purpose of a memorial to the late Governor Hammond are John Morgan, E. M. Stanton and N. Tarrant, all of Thief River Falls. The members of the commission from Red Lake county are Frank Jeffers and Dan Linnehan of Red Lake Falls, and Henry J. Enderlee of Plummer. Marshall county's representatives are Julius Olson, Warren; Louis Olson, Stephen, and J. N. Nisbo, Viking.

Every county in the state will be represented on the committee and the active work of soliciting will be begun at once. Just what form the memorial will take has not yet been decided upon and will depend largely on the success of the committee in the soliciting of funds.

FEARS TROUBLE WITH NEUTRALS

Britain May Not Declare Blockade of Germany.

MATTER BEFORE COMMONS

Demand Is General for Greater Stringency in the Prevention of Foodstuffs and Other Conditional Contraband Reaching Teutonic Empire.

London, Jan. 27.—There are intimations, unofficial in nature, that the British government has decided against a formal blockade of Germany It is pointed out in English newspapers, which reflect the views of the government, that such a blockade might weaken Great Britain's hands and increase friction with neutrals.

Experts and self-styled experts on the economics of war and the law of maritime war on commerce mobilized in the house of commons for the eagerly awaited debate on the measures to be taken for a blockade against Germany.

Critics of the government's policy and the defenders thereof were equally insistent on the necessity of enforcing "a blockade as effective as possible," but they took issue on the best method of enforcing this, a keen desire being shown in some quarters to make the interference with neutral commerce as light as possible.

The demand was general, however, for a greater stringency in the prevention of foodstuffs and other conditional contraband passed by neutral countries into Germany.

The debate hinged on a motion introduced with the object of obtaining from the government a full statement of the facts and giving an opportunity to deal with most of the aspects of the recent complaints against the foreign office.

COERCION MEANS FAILURE

British Trade Unionists Attack Compulsory Military Service.

Bristol, Eng., Jan. 27.—The representatives of more than 2,000,000 members of trades unions met here to decide the attitude of organized labor toward the war and in particular compulsory military service.

Early in the proceedings an attack on the compulsory service bill now before the house of lords was made by the president of the conference. William Anderson, member of parliament for the Attercliffe division of Sheffield.

Mr. Anderson, who has opposed the bill in parliament, declared that it does not redeem the pledge of Premier Asquith regarding compulsion.

"No formula of words can offer immunity from danger," he said. "We cannot have forced military service without the risk of forced industrial service. Any attempt to use this weapon to coerce trades unionists will lead to great bitterness and end in failure."

DEPUTIES BECOME EXCITED

Premier Briand's Speech Throws Chamber Into Turmoil.

Paris, Jan. 27.—The Chamber of deputies, by a vote of 394 to 138, sent the censorship bill to committee.

This bill provides that all publications must be communicated to the government before being offered to the public, but the censor shall have the right to suppress only such unofficial matter as refers to military operations and diplomatic negotiations, the disclosure of which would be harmful to the national defense.

Premier Briand, on making an impassioned speech in the chamber of deputies in defense of the censorship by the French government, encountered interruptions and at one time lively protests.

Paul Deshanel, president of the chamber, was obliged to request the deputies to respect freedom of speech before the premier could resume his address.

BATTLE LASTED SIX HOURS

Turks Report Defeat of British Relief Column.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—The British force going to the relief of the troops surrounded by Turks at Kut-El-Amara attacked the Turkish positions near Menlari Jan. 21, but were repulsed after an engagement lasting six hours, according to an official report issued by the Turkish headquarters staff.

Macedonians Join the Bulgars.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—Press dispatches from Sofia state that Macedonians are volunteering in great numbers for service in the Bulgarian army. The number of those who desire to serve is so large that many applications have been declined.

Norseman Not Sunk.

WILL CONSIDER REVENUE PLANS

Ways and Means Committee of House to Meet.

FOUR SUBJECTS PROPOSED

First Gathering Will Discuss Income Tax, Inheritance Tax, Taxation of War Munitions and Creation of Tariff Board—Caucus to Pass on Preparedness Measures.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Steps toward consideration of revenue legislation were taken by Democratic leaders of the house A meeting of the ways and means committee Democrats was called for next week. They will make a preliminary survey of the revenue situation Prominent members say this initial meeting will consider four revenue subjects:

Revision of the income tax.

Inheritance tax plans.

Taxation of war munitions.

Creation of a tariff commission.

While no revenue legislation, except possibly a bill for a tariff board, probably will be reported for several months, the meeting will be to begin work on the chief revenue problems of the season. The time for launching a resolution continuing present sugar duties may also be considered at next week's meeting.

The majority in the house will caucus on all revenue matters, including a tariff commission bill being prepared by the ways and means committee, House Leader Kitchin said.

Preparedness measures will be submitted to the caucus procedure with attempted exaction of solid Democratic support.

The proposed taxation of war munitions, leaders stated, will be in the form of an excise tax, if at all. It is opposed chiefly as uncertain and unstable, because cessation of war would stop both sales and taxes. Opposition has developed against lowering the income tax exemption limits. Leaders and rank and file, however, are unanimous in planning increase of surtaxes on larger incomes. But many are opposed to taxing smaller incomes than those now reached.

WANT BERLIN TO CONFESS LIABILITY

Washington, Jan. 27.—Secretary Lansing had an engagement to again confer with Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, over the controversy growing out of the sinking of the liner Lusitania.

Germany's last proposal in the Lusitania negotiations has failed to satisfy President Wilson and Secretary Lansing. The ambassador, it is said, will submit another tentative proposal for settlement, embodying the requirements of the United States.

The United States, it is said authoritatively, will insist on holding the German government to "a strict accountability for the loss of American lives," and desires that the Berlin government admit, in effect, it is liable according to law for lives of neutrals lost in the commission of an act against a vessel of the enemy.

EXAMINE ALIENS ON SHIPS

Companies Offer to Provide Better Facilities Aboard Liners.

New York, Jan. 27.—The department of labor's suspension of the order that all second class steamship passengers must be examined at Ellis Island before admission to the United States was extended upon an offer by Transatlantic steam companies to provide better facilities for the medical examination of aliens on steamships and piers.

INTIMATE OF KAISER DEAD

General Viktor von Podbielski Succumbs at Berlin.

Amsterdam, Jan. 27.—General Viktor von Podbielski, former postmaster general and a close friend of Emperor William, is dead in Berlin at the age of seventy-one years.

General von Podbielski was to have officiated as presiding general at the Olympic games which were to have been held in Berlin this summer.

Japan Renews Demands.

London, Jan. 27.—The Japanese government has delivered to the Chinese minister in Tokio, for transmission to his government, a note embodying seven demands which were included in the Japanese program of last spring, the Manchester Guardian learns from Far Eastern sources.

No New River Projects.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The rivers and harbors committee voted to include no new projects in its forthcoming bill, but to confine appropriations solely to projects already authorized, thus limiting the total to approximately $24,000,000.

School Notes

Less than a dozen non-resident children are enrolled in the grades, and these come from territory quite close to the city.

The Junior high school was partly reorganized on Monday, the beginning of the second semester. A group of students enrolled therein during the past semester had failed in two or more subjects. The change was made in order to assist the backward ones in their studies.

The Short Course opened on Monday with Miss Sophie Boe in charge. The enrollment is seventeen and more will enter next week. Miss Boe is an experienced teacher from Wisconsin.

A physical culture class for ladies has been organized by H. Miller and meets in the gym every Tuesday and Thursday evening. Some thirty are now enrolled.

An exhibition of pictures will be given at the Lincoln on the evenings of February 2, 3, 4 and 5. These pictures are circulated by the Elson Art Co., of Massachusetts and comprise hundreds of copies and originals. The schools give entertainments in turn at these exhibits, for which a charge is made. All money taken in will be used for the purchase of pictures for the rooms.

Afternoon meetings will be held the first four days of next week in neighboring schools. Prof. Dichinson of the School of Agriculture at Crookston and Mr. Werner will have charge. The former is a dairy expert and comes highly recommended.

A stock judging team from the Agriculture class will compete at Crookston next week against similar teams from the Valley.

The new program for the second semester in the Senior high school was placed in operation this week. Considering the large enrollment in the various classes during the last semester, the failures were few.

The noon lunches for children from a distance are being served regularly and without difficulty. A cup of hot soup or beverage costs a child a penny and practically all who stay buy the cup.

Velma Price and Phonsie O'Neill won the declamatory honors Wednesday evening last. Velma will represent the school against visitors from neighboring towns at the Lincoln Friday afternoon at two. The winner there goes to Crookston next week to the finals in the district. Two boys were among the contestants Wednesday and of these Gynther Tessum made a particularly strong showing.

A Number Have Already Signed Up For The Trip And Only 25 More Names Are Needed.

Sunday, January 30h, the Thief River Falls Hockey team plays a return game with the Crookston team in Crookston and a special train will be chartered to go to Crookston, providing that a sufficient number of hockey fans will pledge themselves to make the trip. At the present time the following have agreed to go but it is necessary that at least 25 more pledge themselves to go and agree to pay the sum of $2.50 toward the payment of the special train: W. W. Prichard, Jr., H. L. Anderson, W. H. Akre, Mrs. Akre, A. F. LaBudde, Mrs. G. Howard Smith, C. L. Hansen, P. Mayhew, J. E. Dickey, C. A. Pitkin, Miss Hazel Cutter, A. F. Hankins, H. F. Miller, H. L. Crookston came up to Thief River Falls with a special and we certainly cannot allow them to put one over on us and have this matter fall down for the lack of twenty-five Thief River Falls boosters and anyone desiring to help make this trip a success, will sign the list in the hands of G. Haword Smith, Fred Haug, David Backus or Ernest Mayhew. A trip of this kind is not only a pleasure trip but of great advertising value to the city of Thief River Falls, as the press of the entire State is following the hockey season very closely and announcements of all games and reports of their features are written up in the Twin City, Duluth, Grand Forks and all papers of the larger cities of the State of Minnesota.

HAZEL FARMERS HAVE STRONG ORGANIZATION

Articles of Incorporation Will Soon Be Filed By The Club Hall Association.

The success of the Farmers' club of Hazel, has been marked by one progressive step after another, the organization from the outset being one of the strongest in the county. The finest Farmers' club hall in northern Minnesota is owned by the Hazel farmers and plans are now complete for filing with the Secretary of State "Articles of Incorporation of the Hazel Farmers' Club Hall Association." This will be done the latter part of this week and the organization of ohe of the best Farmers' clubs in the northwest will then be complete.

The club has a large membership and meetings are held at the hall regularly by the farmers. Matters of importance to the farmers and the entire community are discussed and a spirit of co-operation is ever in evidence, which means success to the farmers of that vicinity.

The hall is not used alone for club meetings as it is an ideal place for social gatherings and the people of Hazel and vicinity use it frequently for various events, all of which is important in promoting the very best of a community spirit.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BIG TIME PROMISED AT VALLEY MEETING

Development Association To Hold Annual Event At Crookston Februrary 7- 12.

Over $ 5,000 in premiums are offered in prizes by the Minnesota Red River Valley Development association for exhibitors at the fifth annual show to be held at Crookston on Feb. 7 to 12, inclusive. The prizes in the sweepstakes event amount to $1300, including $100 in gold given by Congressmen Steenerson, the sweepstakes prize for wheat.

The major portion of the premiums were donated by the Twin City and Duluth firms, with contributions from many large manufacturers in the East who recognize what a splendid work is being accomplished by the Annual Farm Crops Show held here, which last year was the biggest exclusive farm crops show held in the entire United States, and this year promises to be even larger.

A special Saturday, the last day, will be a complimentary dinner to the Red River Valley Editors, and press representatives from city newspapers and Farm Journals in the Commercial Club rooms, with at least two good speakers and general shop talk.

Red Lake Falls Defeated.

Last Thursday afternoon and evening the local bowling team won two straight games from the Red Lake Falls team. In the first game the visitors were defeated by 318 pins and in the second by 294. Immediately after the conclusion of these games, a team composed of barbers challenged the Thief River Boosters and were also defeated by 179 points.

The next contest will be staged at Red Lake Falls, when the local team will journey to that place for a return game.

BASKETBALL FIVE MEETS WITH DEFEAT

In One of The Hardest Fought Games of The Season Locals Lose By Score of 37 to 23.

In a game replete of sensational plays the Thief River Falls high school basket ball team went down to defeat for the first time of the season last Friday evening, when they clashed with the McIntosh five at that place, by a score of 37 to 23.

The opposing team showed excellent form and their speedy team work and accurate basket shooting accounts for the total. The majority of their baskets were made through the following up of long passes. The local boys were successful in getting the "jump" on McIntosh and played a strong and aggressive game. At the end of the first half the score stood 17 to 14 in favor of Thief River Falls. During the second half the defense of the local quint broke down and McIntosh was allowed to score very frequently.

Brown and Fasel did the stellar work of the evening for the Thief River Falls team and outplayed their men at all times. For McIntosh, Manger and Lindly showed the best form.

The line-up:

T. R. Falls	Position	McIntosh
Brown	L. F.	Manger
Fasel	R. F.	Lindly
Linde	C.	Holton
Schmitt	R. G.	Alrich
Holzknecht	L. G.	Scheie

Field goals by McIntosh: Manger, 8; Lindly, 4; Holton, 1; Alrich, 3; Scheie, 1. Foul goals: Holton, 3.

THE FIRST MID-WINTER FAIR.

We are all agreed that it was a good idea and a great success. Being the first thing of its kind ever attempted by the Thief River Falls Commercial club it is but natural that certain matters should develop during the progress of the show that might with advantage have been done differently. But the farmers were here in large numbers, they saw as fine a display of home products as any similiar community in the state would have been able to present and were treated to a day of entertainment that certainly was enjoyable and should prove profitable. The merchants and manufacturers put their best wares forth on display at the Auditorium and there is no doubt but what the visitors were duly impressed with the fact that the merchandising houses here are amply able to supply any reasonable want, while to many the extent of our manufacturers must have proved a surprise.

In looking back at the event, however, many of our people seem to think that one mistake was made. According to these citizens—and they are numerous and of every station—it would have been better had no admission price been demanded. To charge a man for coming miles to see a display of the goods you afterwards hope to sell him does not seem like good advertising judgment to many of those who had more or less to do with the exhibition. It was not a money-making scheme—or should not have been. People living away from town were invited with a view to having them become better acquainted with our merchants and manufacturers and to be convinced that sending away for goods that can be had at home is a serious mistake and an unpatriotic proceeding. When, however, they were asked to pay an admission for the privilege of getting acquainted and making an inspection it strikes to many as if the real purpose of the show was lost sight of and that it took on the appearance of a Commercial transaction calculated to bring a profit to someone. The Times knows that such was not the idea, but the impression nevertheless prevails in many quarters.

But this is a small matter and will be corrected—if it shall be found to need correction. The main thing is that the outsiders came to town, learned many things concerning its industries that they did not know before, and went away satisfied. All other matters are of minor importance, and there will be ample time to smoothen things out before the date for the second Mid-Winter exhibit rolls around.

SHOULD RETAIN PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

If the members of the Commercial club wish to do the obviously sensible and proper thing they will re-elect George G. Johnson as president at the annual meeting this evening. The fact that this gentleman has declared that he will not be a candidate for re-election does not matter—he should be unanimously chosen and then made to take the office.

During the year that Mr. Johnson has served as the head of the Commercial club the organization has made greater forward strides and accomplished more of real value than during all of its previous existence. This is naturally not all due to the effort or personality of President Johnson, but these have been decided factors in bringing about the excellent condition that not prevails within the club and among the members. He has served only long enough to see the beginning of many of the things for which he has stood as sponsor or champion, and to retire before these have gotten fairly under way is almost out of the question. Being president of a Commercial club is perhaps not the most enviable situation in the world, and not everyone could acceptably fill the requirements. Such officer must be something of a diplomat, a warrior, and above all, a hardheaded business man. He must be honest and fearless enough to realize and deplore the shortcomings of his community as well as sufficiently wide-awake to recognize its advantages and opportunities. He must give freely of his time and energy toward the public weal, and must expect his reward very often to be misunderstanding, often abuse. He must be big enough to withstand all this and keep on plugging away for the good of his fellow citizens. Men who fill the bill are not plentiful and when one is found he should be retained.

Other men in the community would no doubt make acceptable Commercial club presidents, but we are not so sure of it as we are in the case of Mr. Johnson.

A TAX ON BUSINESS MEN.

The people of Thief River Falls own the Auditorium building. Their money built it and their taxes maintain it. They never expected it to be employed directly as a money-making institution, believing that the returns incidental to having such an edifice in the city would more than offset any tax increase that its maintenance made necessary. It is because they feel this way about it that the proposition to charge for the use of the structure when it is occupied as a meeting place for conventions or gatherings of a like nature is most emphatically objected to. Anything that will bring people into town, if only for a day or two, must help that town, and is worth maintaining by the taxpayers. Cities bid against one another for conventions and the like, realizing that the expense involved in securing them is but a bagetele when compared with the amounts expended by those attending. It was to secure its share of these meetings that Thief River Falls built the beautiful Auditorium building, and anything started now that will in even the slightest degree throw obstacles in the way of securing them will be objected to most strenuously.

There is some expense to the upkeep of a building such as the Auditorium, it is true. When, however, we take into consideration the fact that during the teachers convention here last summer one firm alone increased its business by $1,500 during the three days of the meeting, we begin to see where the real value of the structure lies. At any time that one firm increases its business to this extent it is certain that other firms and other lines are to some extent benefitted. And this is only one instance.

Charging a rental for the use of the Auditorium in cases of this kind would amount to a direct tax on the business men of the city. Buildings in other localities can be had free and the delegates made more than welcome. The Times does not believe that this short-sighted proposition will ever get far, but it is well enough to sound a warning.

Northeastern Minnesota has the best water in the whole world, and the people there are making the most of the fact in advertising the advantages of their section. That it is proving a strong drawing card in the settlement of that region there is no gainsaying. The towns and villages of St. Louis, Itasca, Aitkin and Koochiching counties are steadily holding forth on the great value of this one particular thing, and they are justified in so doing. With more natural advantages than any of these, Thief River Falls drops behind them in this one particular. And it is hurting the city. Traveling men say that the water here is so bad that it is not fit to take a bath in, and this kind of report can do untold damage. There is only one way to fix it, and that is to provide pure water. Everybody realizes this, but just how to go about it is the question. The matter will undoubtedly soon come up for discussion by the council and the members should have the united support of all our people in an attempt to reach a solution. Any movement started to prevent the city authorities from carrying to a successful conclusion any effort in the direction of pure water, on account of the expense entailed, should be chocked at the outset because where the public health and general welfare is concerned the cost cannot be allowed to count.

THE CITY'S OPPORTUNITY.

Something in the nature of a park or recreation ground must before long be provided for the people of Thief River Falls if the city is to maintain its position as the livest and most progressive municipality in this part of the country. This has long been apparent to people who have given the matter any consideration, and now that an opportunity offers to secure a location for such park, they are anxious that the city should take advantage of it.

A short distance to the southeast of the Soo depot is situated a strip of land known as the Elder tract. The four acres of this strip is along the river for a considerable distance and offers an ideal spot for a recreation ground and bathing beach. This land can now be secured at a very low figure—so low, in fact, that the city will have to be up and doing at once if it wishes to acquire it. There are but few such tracts left of which possession can be had so easily, and none with the natural advantages offered by the Elder property. The park is practically ready to hand. A little clearing of brush, the grading of paths and the erection of bath houses would place it in condition to be the resting and recreation place of our people. The river sweeps along its entire length and adds considerable in scenic beauty to the other natural advantages of the place.

There is also another reason why the city should secure this tract. It will be but a short time until another bridge across the river will be necessary, and the spot most feasible for its erection is at the foot of Third street. This street terminates in the Elder tract, and the city would thus be procuring the land necessary for one approach to the bridge. It is certain that another opportunity such as this will not be presented again, and our people will always regret the oversight if they do not take the steps necessary to secure the property.

The Times believes that the sentiment of the country is strongly in favor of preparedness. The administration's program may not be the best, but that something of the kind is needed is no longer quentioned by thinking people. Former Secretary of War Stimson, Senator Root and other prominent Republicans have come out with strong endorsements of President Wilson's recommendations, and this is the best indication that the matter is considered larger than party lines and that something in the shape of law looking to a solution may be expected. Ex-President Roosevelt says that the measure does not go far enough, but the general impression seems to be that it is about the best that can be secured at this time. The colonel never was famous for agreeing with anyone else, anyway. In this case, at any rate, we believe that the people will be safer in following his former secretary of state, Senator Root, and the secretary of war in President Taft's cabinet, Mr. Stimson—both of whom see something bigger and more important than mere politics in this matter.

Just why anyone should take it for granted that Governor Burnquist will make such a muddle of things that it will be necessary for the Republicans of the state to look to another to carry aloft the standard of the pary is not very apparent. He starts out well and his performances show him a capable and level-heded citizen. He certainly is the logical man for the job, and this does not in the least detract from the availability of Sam Iverson and others who are pining to serve the state. If the Republicans get into a jangle such as that of two years ago the voters may solve the problem for them by voting as they did at that time. While it is a practical certainty that the next governor of Minnesota will be a Republican, the party leaders themselves may do much to place his chances in jeopardy by attempting to retire the present incumbent before he has had even an opportunity to prove that he can make good.

Red Lake county is to hold an option election on the 28th of February. Our neighbor is now the only wet county in this section of Minnesota and the result there will be watched with much interest. There is no question but what the liquor people will put forth every effort to keep that particular locality in the damp column, as it has become a shipping point of considerable importance. It is doubtful, however, if this influence will be sufficient to overcome the strong no-license sentiment prevailing. The people of Red Lake do not like being pointed to as the only ones permitting liquor to exist in their midst and will probably take this opportunity to rid themselves of the stigma. And they may as well. The traffic is doomed anyway and everyone will be the better for its passing.

Ormsby McHarg, formerly of North Dakota, states that Colonel Roosevelt cannot be elected, should the nomination go to him. McHarg, it will be remembered, predicted that Roosevelt would be nominated at Chicago and that he would thereafter be elected. In view of his success as a prognosticator four years ago, McHarg's predictions at this time are not striking fear into the ranks of the colonel's supporters, and the latter continues to loom large as a possibility. In this section of the country, however, he is not considered as even a good second choice after Cummins.

Minnesota Politics

Many Anxious To Ride With Burnquist—Great Scramble To Get Aboard Governors Bandwagon—Second Place In Big Demand.

By "The County Chairman"

St. Paul—(Special)—The scramble to get aboard the Burnquist bandwagon has almost assumed the proportions of a riot, but like every movement of its kind the danger of overloading already is apparent. For instance, "Our Side," the saloon organ of Minneapolis and St. Paul and the state at large. Harkening back to the past, and the trouncing this one phase of the political question has received in Minnesota, you would think those in charge of the liquor end of the game would know better, but it seems not. Permit me to quote from this particular publication: "Iverson and Lindbergh announce that they are going to stay in the gubernatorial field. If either should withdraw Julius Schmahl might file. The best thing for Julius to do is to stick to his present job. Present indications are that Burnquist will stay where he is for some time, unless he makes bad breaks, and the chances are that he will make none, as he is a careful, decent fellow. It is the opinion of this journal (Our Side) that no straws be laid in the way of the new governor of Minnesota. Governor Burnquist's friends assure us he has no drastic notions in his noodle and is disposed to do the right thing by everybody. This is all we ask." Nothing is without its cost, and the nice things said by the saloon organ quoted is probably one of the exactions, but it does not look well in print. As the old saw runs, "What the people don't know doesn't hurt them." Both press and individual are wishing the new executive success and in the case of the former the nice things said of the new governor make yards of printed copy. This was helped out by the long headed friends who immediately on receipt of Governor Hammond's death saw to it that every paper in the state was supplied with a picture of Governor Burnquist. As I pointed out Governor Burnquist is being unusually favored, but if a little advice is acceptable muzzle that saloon paper and at once.

✢ ✢ ✢

Since the death of Governor Hammond the state Democracy has been pretty much in the background, but this fact has not detracted from a bit of excitement within its own ranks over a report that Fred B. Lynch, national committeeman, and D. W. Lawler have formed an alliance. And from all accounts it is true—at least Dan does not deny it. As past knowledge runs Dan and the Democratic national committeeman were anything but friends, and the public was made aware of the fact in more than one outburst on the part of the former mayor of St. Paul. He was always making trouble. Inasmuch as Mr. Lynch has been having considerable trouble of late in holding his leadership it is needless to say that Dan's tender of help will be more than welcome by the Democratic committeeman.

✢ ✢ ✢

The name of President Wilson will go on the Minnesota presidential preference ballot. A petition with 500 names was filed with Secretary of State Schmahl by Minneapolis parties and it is sufficient. The petition was filed by an anti-Lynch crowd, but this fact is not going to prevent the regulars from supplementing it with a number of petitions of their own. Speaking of the new act under which presidents and their supporters will be named this year, the story was that an attack on its constitutionality was in the making, but so far it has not materialized. The opinion is that the law will not be disturbed.

✢ ✢ ✢

The future of the county option law is now in the hands of the state supreme court. An attack was made on the law in that tribunal and its stability threatened. As a test International Falls, which is in dry territory, voted to license the sale of liquor and was promptly enjoined by Attorney General Smith. This brought the whole matter into the supreme court, where those representing International Falls declared that their home rule charter was a constitutional given right and could not be disturbed by legislative action. To tell the truth the attorneys representing the town made a good showing and my opinion is that the court has more than a problem on its hands in reaching a solution.

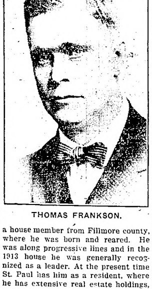
In a previous letter I made note of the unusual number of prospective candidates for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor. This week I am able to give the names of three who have parted with the necessary $50 each to entitle them to a place on the primary ballot, and if the gossips have it right the list may be supplemented by two more candidates in the very near future. The three who made good are Thomas Frankson, a former member of the house from Fillmore county; James A. Peterson of Minneapolis, who early in the game hankered for the job of governor, and Dr. J. A. Gates of Kenyon. W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow is now mentioned as another possibility for this office, and also Senator Frank Clague of Redwood county.

A comparative unknown as far as the big game is concerned, Thomas Frankson, whose filing for the lieutenant governorship brought James A. Peterson to St. Paul in a hurry, looms up in this particular contest as a candidate likely to put a decided crimp in the plans of several of the big fellows who have been industriously scheming to grab the job for their favorite. I gather from the talk that they are going to have their hands full in Mr. Frankson's candidacy. They tell me he is a hustler and that his opponents will have to go some to distance him. Mr. Frankson first loomed up on the political horizon as a house member from Fillmore county, where he was born and reared. He was along progressive lines and in the 1913 house he was generally recognized as a leader. At the present time St. Paul has him as a resident, where he has extensive real estate holdings, but his business activity is principally confined to the country, where his large land and farm holdings necessitate the maintenance of a number of agencies. Yes, Mr. Frankson's candidacy does spell trouble for Jim Peterson, et al.



THOMAS FRANKSON.

Mention of the remarkable activity in the lieutenant governorship contest would not be complete without some comment on the candidacy of Dr. J. A. Gates of Kenyon, who has once more broken into the big game after a lengthy retirement. Dr. Gates was a member of the lower house of the legislature at one time, his connection dating back to 1905 and 1909, and his colleagues of those dates have no reason to forget him, for, as I remember the Goodhue representative, he was some hustler. Following his legislative activities and while the old convention system had the boards the Kenyon physician essayed a fling at the lieutenant governorship, but a backfire in the shape of a home county rival put him out of business. At that time he made trouble for the crowd engaged in cornering the job and the chances are excellent that he will be a live one in the present contest. As I remarked in a previous letter he is well located geographically.

✢ ✢ ✢

Theodore Roosevelt petitions will not be filed in Minnesota, at least not with the colonel's request. A. A. D. Rahn of Minneapolis has received a letter from Mr. Roosevelt asking him not to permit the use of his name in the Minnesota primaries. Petitions which Mr. Rahn has put in circulation, and which have been freely signed, will be recalled. "The letter is positive in its language," said Mr. Rahn, "and of course Colonel Roosevelt's wishes will be respected. He is not a candidate for the nomination."

✢ ✢ ✢

That I. A. Caswell, who is managing the Cummins presidential boom, does not do thing by halves is evidenced by a perfect deluge of petitions which are being circulated throughout Minnesota in the interest of the Iowa man. Several thousand school, town and district officers, not to speak of hundreds of private citizens, have been made the custodians of the blanks and signatures are being sought without reserve.

Prohibition forces have selected a steering committee to prepare for the national Prohibition convention which is to be held in the Twin Cities during the week of July 19. Charles A. Fowble is temporary chairman and other members are George F. Wells, W. G. Calderwood, J. D. Engle, Frank P. Vrooman, W. A. Stromme and J. K. Murray.

Little is heard of either Charles A. Lindbergh or Samuel G. Iverson, gubernatorial candidates whose chances, general opinion insists, have been greatly minimized by the advancement of Governor Burnquist, but this must not be taken as meaning that they have accepted the so called inevitable. Far from it. Both are very busy.

The Times this week presents the annual financial statement of Pennington county. A perusal will prove both interesting and instructive, as the figures show not only the nature and purpose of expeditures made, but gives the source of all moneys received. The statement is one of the most thorough ever issued by the county and Auditor Anderson deserves credit for the clearness with which he has set forth every transaction.

Chief of the fire department, Paul Medderigh, who sustained serious injuries last week when he slipped and fell on an icy step in front of the Soo Cafe while on his way to the jail with suppers for two prisoners, has now improved sufficiently to be up. Although the chief is in somewhat of a weakened condition, he is able to perambulate around with the aid of a walking cane. It will probably be some time before Mr. Medderigh has fully recovered from the effects of the fall.

The building formerly occupied by the Eagles Nest saloon, which has been undergoing the "razing process" for the past three weeks, is now gives the new quarters a very neat apbuilding remains standing and it will also be torn down or moved away in a few days. The building was one of the old land marks of the city, having stood the wear and tear of the weather for many "moons." It is not expected that the site will remain vacant for any length of time as it is too valuable a business location.

C., where he will visit the national capitol and witness the law making body of the United States in session. From Washington he will journey to New York City, Bosaon and several other of the large eastern cities. Mr. Hansen expects to be gone about four weeks, and the trip will undoubtedly be a most enjoyable one.

B. L. Lieberman of Grand Rapids, Minn.. was a business visitor here two days this week looking after affairs connected with the firm of Lieberman Bros., of which he is a member. Mr. Lieberman informs us that the stores, both here and at the Itasca county town, have experienced a very successful season and that the indications are excellent for a continuation of this desirable state of affairs. He was accompanied on his trip by J. M. Stackhouse, a Grand Rapids business man. They returned to their home Wednesday.

The Lady Maccabees held a home talent entertainment Tuesday evening at the lodge rooms in the Masonic hall and was very largely attended. All those present enjoyed a very pleasant evening. After the program lunch was served and was partaken of by all present. The aim of the Lady Maccabees is to please all and they did, without a doubt, carry out their motto. Especial thanks is due to Mrs. F. B. Newell, who furnished the music during the evening. Mrs. J. Wiley and Miss Mable ——— are also deserving of thanks for the success of the event, for the excellent manner in which the entertainment was prepared.

All trains entering the city yesterday were behind schedule time owing to ese severe blizzard that raged. The Wheatline train, running between here and Kenmare was forced to turn around at Adams, and arrived at the depot about ninety minutes late. A rather peculiar incident was observed when the same train came in last Saturday evening. The "markers" or tail lights of the rear coach had been knocked off when the cars were passing through one of the large cuts, which was filled with snow. On Friday morning the rotary snowplow was taken in at the round-house for necessary repairs and was sent out immediately again after the repair work was completed.

A visit to the manual training department of the high school will reveal many interesting things that are being daily taught to the "young Americas." Instructor Schmitt now has the seventh grade boys busily engaged in making cement moulds, and these molds will probably be used to form the cement cakes for the hallway of the Central school, when it will be remodeled next summer. Mr. Schmitt says that he would desire that more parents visit the manual training institution and observe the zeal and interest their boys take in the work. Many useful articles are being turned out by the young boys as well as the older ones, such as wall pockets, picture frames, book racks, waste paper baskets and many other things.

Wold & Company's announcement on the third page of this issue will be found to contain information that will prove of interest to every housewife in Thief River Falls and neighboring country. Mr. Wold finds that in order to make room for the spring goods that are due to arrive shortly he must dispose of his stock of ladies' coats. In order to do this with the least possible delay he has decided to keep reducing the price on these goods until they will simply have to go. Instead of making one reduction, he will make a series of them, beginning at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning and reducing the price of the garments fifty cents every hour during the two days of the sale. The garments offered are the Princess and Wooltex brand, regarded by everyone as the best to be had anywhere. The announcement also contains many other things of interest to the economical housewife.

Thief Riverites who had their alarm clocks set for 1:55 last Thursday morning—and there were a few—witnessed a partial eclipse of the moon. The eclipse, the first of the year, was caused by the moon passing through the northerly edge of the earth's shadow and was visible to the naked eye. The shadow which was seen at the same instant from any point of the hemisphere turned toward the moon, was of no scientific value, according to well-known astronomers. It was pointed out however, that to watch the shadow coming along at a specified time impresses one with the accuracy of astronomical calculations and the control of planetary movements. The shadow was seen at 1:55 o'clock and appeared like a circular notch, cut in the lower edge, a little to the left of the extreme part of the moon. The notch deepened at 2:40 a. m. and at 3:24 a. m. the shadow had passed off entirely. Another eclipse for the early part of this year is that of the sun, which is due on February 3. It will be total in a strip of about fifty miles from a point in the Pacific ocean, running southeasterly a short distance, and then curving, running to the northeast through Columbia and Venezuela, over the Atlantic to England. It will be total over no part of North America.

RELATIVES OF S. E. SWENSON SOUGHT

Died Sunday Morning At Chippewa Falls, Wis.—Claimed To Have Lived Near Tihs City.

Local authorities have been asked to aid in finding relatives of a man by the name of S. E. Swenson who died at a hospital in Chippewa Falls, Wis., Sunday morning. Nothing could be found on his person or among his effects to aid the authorities of Chippewa Falls in determining where he came from or where his home is, the only clue they have being that he told one of the attendants at the hospital that he was brought up near Thief River Falls. Thus far the local authorities have been unable to find any information that will aid in identifying the man.

The letter from Chippewa Falls follows:

Chippewa Falls, Wis.,
Jan. 24, 1916.

"A man who registered as S. E. Swenson at the Stanley House in Stanley was brought to the hospital in this city. He died Sunday morning. Appears to be about 30 years of age. He was working in the woods at Chas. Stone's camp, northeast of Stanley in Taylor county. I think the boys in camp called him Sam. His bunk mate did not know where he came from or anything about him. He was at that camp about two months. There is nothing among his effects that throws any light as to where he belongs. He told someone at the hospital that he was brought up near your city. Can you give any information regarding this man or any relatives of his."

Exhibit Goes To Chicago.

The seed exhibit at the Mid-Winter fair held last week at the Auditorium so impressed W. L. Martin, vice president of the Soo line, that he requested John Bordewick and John Connor, in charge of the exhibit, to select the best of the display for the Soo line. The seed exhibit was boxed and shipped the first of the week to Minneapolis, from whence it will be taken to Chicago and put on exhibition at the big Land and Products Show.

Blasting Starts.

The sub-committee on drainage met with D. P. O'Neill, chairman of the drainage committee, on Monday at the Commercial club to devise plans to erect a grade on one side of the Red Lake river to prevent the farmers' lands in Hickory township from being inundated by spring floods. A quantity of dynamite was taken out and the dynamiting of a ridge was commenced. This dirt will be used to erect the grade and the work is being rushed.

Splendid Features At Lyceum.

Augustus Thomas' most famous play, "Colorado," a story of the mountain country, produced in five reels, will be the Broadway attraction at the Lyceum theatre next Tuesday evening. Hobart Bosworth, the eminent screen star, plays the principal role. In it are a dozen exciting scenes, one being a flood scene, in which thousands of gallons of water are let loose in one great torrent, endangering the life of Albert MacQuarrie who enacts the role of Staples in the play, the flood bearing down upon him and carries him down a gully in the midst of rolling logs and bushes torn from the hillsides. The feature last week was witnessed by large audiences and met with the approval of all, and this week's production promises to be equally as good. A Broadway Universal Movie ticket, such as are being distributed by the leading merchants in this city, will be given with each ticket purchased on this evening. Admission 5c and 10c.

On Thursday evening of each week, beginning Feb. 3rd, lovers of high-class attractions will be given an opportunity of witnessing productions far superior to anything ever shown in this city, booked through the Fox Film Corporation, on of the most noted agencies in the east. "The Devil's Daughter," starring Theda Bara, the Vampire woman, one of the most beautiful women in America, will be the first attraction. Following are a few of the others: "The Nigger," with William Farnum, well known to the Lyceum theatre patrons, who played the leading role in "The Spoilers," and the "Plunderer;" "Anna Karenine," with Betty Nansen, late from the Royal theatre in Copenhagen; "Wormwood," with Ethel Kauffman; "The Valley of the Missing," with Jane Miller; "Kreutzer Sonata," with Nance O'Neill and Theda Bara; "A Gilded Fool" with Wm. Farnum. Price of admission 5c and 10c.

CHAREST CASE MAY NOT GO TO JURY BEFORE SATURDAY

County Attorney, Kjomme Finished Prosecution For The State This Morning.

The January term of the district court opened Monday morning, the first case to be tried being the case of Dr. J. C. R. Charest, charged with causing the death of Mrs. Howard Gesell through the performance of an illegal operation. Monday was given aside to the setting of cases, and the work of selecting the jury was commenced on Tuesday morning. At 2:55 Tuesday afternoon the jury to try the case of Dr. Charest was completed: They are: Hans Solberg, Star; August Swenson, River Falls; Hans O. Sande, Numedal; John Lindblad, Hickory; Cornelius Oien, Rocksbury; H. T. Waale, Kratka; H. G. Homme, Hickory; Wm. Herron, Thief River Falls; Erick Gullingsrud, Thief River Falls; John Durbin, Thief River Falls; Edwin Everson, Wyandotte; A. E. Anderson, Rocksbury.

After a short recess proceedings were begun to try the first case of manslaughter ever held in the Pennington county court house. County Attorney Kjomme, assisted by Attorney E. O. Hagen from the attorney general's office, who represent the state, opened the trial and continued until this afternoon when the prosecution by the state was finished. Witnesses who appeared for the state were: Howard Gesell, Coroner Halverson, Josephine Peterson, Dr. H. W. Froehlich, Dr. F. H. Gambell, Dr. J. E. Douglass, Dr. H. G. Heiber and Miss Clara Wood.

Attorneys J. M. Bishop and Mike Daily of Perl, Minn., began the trial for the defense this afternoon, and are expected to consume tomorrow and part of Saturday before finishing. The case is expected to go to the jury on Saturday.

The next case on the calendar is that of James Vavoulis vs. George Christo and Tom Christo. This will be a jury trial. Following this will be the case of Timothy A. Johnson vs. Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railway company. Jury trial.

Orchestra At Evelyn.

Many of our citizens have of late found it both economical and convenient to take their Sunday dinners at the Hotel Evelyn, and Landlord Provencher has decided to make a feature of this meal hereafter. The menu for next Sunday will be found on another page of this issue and a glance through the list of good things to be provided is enough to make a man understand quite thoroughly why he should not allow his wife to cook dinner on Sunday, but should take her with him to the Evelyn. Music will be provided by Morck's orchestra, the following being the program: "March Martinez," W. White; Berceuse—"Tendre," Leo Ranederff; "Sandy River Rag," Thomas Allen; Celo Solo—Selected, C. Crandall; Overture—"Light Cavalry," J. V. Suppe; "Birthday Serenade," Paul Lincke; March—"Alice Parade," Paul Lincke.

Physicians' Hospital Notes.

Robert Iverson residing near Grygla, was operated upon for appendicitis Tuesday, and is improving as rapidly as can be expected.

Wm. Rude, who resides on a farm near Germantown, entered the hospital the first of the week for treatment.

Mildred Wahlin, the little two and a half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wahlin residing at Huss, Minn., was taken to the hospital the first of the week to have an infected foot treated. The infection was lanced and the little girl is improving.

Ole Vested of Lillo, Minn., is at the hospital receiving treatment for an infected hand. One finger has been removed, and it i sthought probable that no more will have to be taken off to insure his complete recovery.

Alvin Mandt, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Mandt of Oklee, was operated upon Tuesday for mastoid abscess. The boy's condition is much better and will return home shortly.

Masquerade Ball.

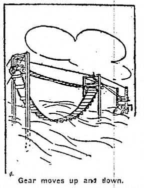
There will be a masquerade ball at Plummer, Minn., on Thursday evening, February 3rd. Music by the famous International Raggies. Given by base ball boys. Everybody welcome.—J27.

OUR BOYS and GIRLS

SEA DRIVES THIS MOTOR.

Movement of Tide Turns Endless Cable and Makes Power.

A new form of wave motor invented by a California man is shown in the illustration. Like practically all of these apparatuses it is designed to be operated by the movement of the tide. Two supports are erected near shore and near the top of each support a shaft is journaled with sprocket wheels at either end. Endless cables, with a deep sag to the lower portion, run over these wheels and a series of blades are spaced between the cables, like the blades of a paddle wheel or mill wheel. The movement of the tide drives the blades in whichever direction the tide is going and sets the wheels revolving, thereby generating power. The shaft on which the cable hang can be moved up or down on the supports, according to the height of the water, as the purpose of the apparatus would be defeated if both the upper and lower strands of the cables were acted on by the waves.



Gear moves up and down.

Tricks for Little People.

Can you place a pencil on the floor in such a way that no one can jump over it? Yes, if I place it close enough to the wall.

Can you push a chair through a finger ring? Yes, if I put the ring on a finger and push the chair with that finger.

Can you put yourself through a keyhole? Yes, by writing the word "yourself" on a piece of paper and pushing it through the keyhole.

Can you ask a question that cannot be answered with "No"? Yes; by asking "What does y-e-s spell?"

Can you walk out of the room on two legs and return with six? Yes, by bringing in a chair.

Can you place a newspaper on the floor in such a way that two persons can stand on it at the same time and not be able to touch each other with their hands? Yes, by putting the paper in a doorway, onehalf inside and the other half outside the room, and closing the door over it! Two persons can easily stand on it and be beyond each other's reach.

Can you put one hand where the other cannot touch it? Easily; put one hand on the elbow of the other arm.—Philadelphia Record.

Learning to Bat.

The way to learn to bat is to bat! There is no other way. But there are right and wrong ways of trying to bat. First of all, it is necessary to "stand to the plate." The player who gets three feet away and "reaches in" after balls is neither going to hit hard nor often. It is seldom that a batter is hit hard enough by a pitched ball to hurt him; if he is quick enough to bring his bat against the ball before it gets by, he should be quick enough to get out of the way of one which comes at him. Neither will it do to stand properly at the plate and yet "pull away" from it as the ball goes by. Even if you hit the ball, the very act of "pulling" will decrease the force of your blow, and if you are a right-hand hitter, "pulling" starts you away from first base instead of toward it. Lefthand hitters, too, must guard against "pulling away," since their eagerness to be off for first base often causes them to lean toward the base as the ball is delivered.—St. Nicholas.

An Example of Inertia.

Place a card on the first finger of your left hand, and on it put a quarter or half-dollar, being careful to balance both card and coin perfectly. Then give a quick fillip or snap to the card with the second finger of your right hand, and the card will fly away, leaving the coin standing balanced on the tip of the finger. A few trials will enable you to do this interesting little trick perfectly.

Why doesn't the coin go when the card goes, however? It is due to what they call in physics inertia—that is to say, the natural disposition of bodies to stick just as they are.

HEAT PRODUCING FLOWERS.

Generate Sufficient Heat to Melt Surrounding Snow.

The saldanella or snowbell of the Alps is a dainty little plant about three inches high, bearing two pendent-fringed white or violet bells on each flower stalk. They may often be found with the snow still firmly frozen round the stem, and the question naturally arises how did the blossoms, so much larger in circumference, make their way through? Botanists tell us that the plant forms its flower buds under the snow, and in the process of breathing evolves so much heat that the encircling snow is melted and trickles down the stalk, round which it frequently freezes again. Thus gradually a dome shaped cavity is formed round the blossom, and the process is continued till in many cases they succeed in reaching the surface.

A modified form of the same heat producing power may be noticed in the foxglove. On a comparatively cool day, when little wind is stirring, a thermometer inserted in the bell-like flowers of a plant growing in a shady place will frequently register a temperature one to two degrees higher than that of surrounding air, and even more startling results are obtained from plants in which a number of small flowers are congregated together within an outer sheath or spathe, as in the arums.

Against the Rummage Sale.

Medical men are inclined to make war on the rummage sale as a menace to health, it having been proved to be a conveyor of contagious diseases. A more unsanitary device was never imagined. The stuff sent to the rubbish; much of the wearing apparel has been resurrected from trash heaps or unused closets, and is of no real use to any one. The danger of lurking germs is very real, and it seems almost criminally reckless to expose innocent children to it. Women have become so sensible in their practice of good works that the rummage sale appears like an anachronism.

Significance of Play.

Play distinguishes the higher from the lower animals, and it signifies possibility of education. Fishes do not play at all; the lower mammals can hardly be taught to play, and birds are entirely devoid of the instinct. But the kitten and the lamb are essentially playing animals. The human young, however, are the true players, and in reality it is play that develops them into manhood. "Children," says Dr. Hutchinson, "are born litttle amorphous bundles of possibilities and are played into shape."

Palace of King of Siam.

One of the most remarkable buildings in the world is the palace of the King of Siam. It is enclosed in dazzling white walls over a mile in circumference. Within these walls are temples, public offices, seraglios, stable for the sacred elephant, accommodation for one thousand troops, cavalry, war elephants, and an arsenal. There is also a very fine theater, where English, French and German companies frequently perform before the Royal household. The King himself is extremely fond of theatricals.

Peat That Burns Like Coal.

Osmon is the new peat success. It is manufactured in Switzerland. The peat is dried under the influence of the electric current and then further treated so that under the action of electric cosmose a new compound is formed. Recent tests indicate that it burns as well as coal, without giving off odor or smoke. The percentage of ash is said to be slight and no trace of sulphur is found in the fuel. It is said to be free from all corrosive influences on the boilers and furnaces in which it is burned.

Courtship in Tibet.

Courtship, as conducted in Tibet, would scarcely arouse the enthusiasm of the modern-minded maid. Bargaining between the suitor and the father of the girl goes on for weeks, without any reference to the wishes of the woman. The requisite price having been paid, she is led to the house of her husband, where she is subjected to a severe beating, in order properly to humble her spirit, and made to run round the village loudly proclaiming the merits and valor of her husband.

Where Women Rule.

A remnant of the Sevis tribe of Indians inhabits the island of Tiburon, in the Gulf of California, and is ruled entirely by the women. Formerly the tribe numbered about five thousand, but is now shrunk to a few hundred, living a life of almost complete isloation, and refusing to intermarry with any of the Indians of the mainland. The woman is master of the household, and a council of matrons is at the head of public affairs.

A Botanical Clock.

A botanical clock, a very pretty flower, has been discovered in the Isthmus of Tehauntepec. In the morning, it is white, at noon it is red, and at night blue; and the changes of color are so regular that the time of day can be told from the tint of the flower.

Pray for Insects Swallowed.

The Tibetans offer daily prayers for the minute insects which they have swallowed inadvertently in their meat and drink, and the formula insures the rebirth of these microbes in heaven.

George Kootsikas and Jim Vavaulis, proprietors of the Olympia candy kitchen, had contemplated on opening the New Olympia on the corner of LaBree avenue and Second street in the building formerly occupied by the U & I saloon, Saturday evening but owing to the fact that necessary fixtures and other equipment have failed to reach this city the opening has been delayed until next week. The moving of the stock and fixtures from the M. Wold building was completed on Monday, and everything is practically in readiness, with the exception of the lacking fixtures. The door of the store has been set back from the sidewalk and on one side thereof is arranged a large display window, boxed in and covered over, and of such a size that good displays can be made therein. The interior has been very artistically finished. The ceiling and walls are covered with tin and painted white. Around the walls mirrors have been placed and lights are suspended along the sides. The interior of the store will present a very pretty appearance and in the new location Messrs. Kootsikas and Vavaulus will have one of the best confectionaries and ice cream parlors in the city.

Buy a Maxwell—Pay as You Ride

According to the Anderson plan, you can buy one of these famous, sturdy, powerful family cars on payment of a special sum and and pay the balance as you ride---on easy monthly payments.

A number of Thief Riverites have already taken advantage of this convenient method of car-owning. There's no reason why you should not.

The Maxwell is not only an easy car to buy---according to the Anderson plan, but it is economical to operate, the up-keep cost being fully 50 per cent less than on any other car selling at this price.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over an heirloom, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also, the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the girl, Esther, reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther. Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so does his companion and cousin, Blair Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley. In stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem.

Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventuress, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Esther's being received in Fairfax society. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen demented. Marmaduke Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning Arthur is a fugitive he seeks Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving for the west. Their train is robbed, Vivian losing the diamond, which a slain train robber drops in the desert. The $10,000 he stole is found by Arthur, now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment and Esther is in Richmond society. Abe Bloom, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman. Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich he buys Stanley hall, sold at auction, through Blake, and also provides for Hagar and Esther. Luke Lovell buys the diamond from the squaw, but loses it in a fight.

Vivian is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Esther to deliver to Arthur.

Blair joins Vivian in Los Angeles. Durand, "king of diamonds," a crook known to Vivian, goes to a saloon to try to discover the diamond. There he meets Luke Lovell. Esther and Arthur appear on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles in care of the physician-crook, Durand. Esther follows and is refused admittance to see him. In the meantime the diamond is found by two bill posters, one of whom murders the other for it. Arthur is "doped" by Durand, De Vaux and Vivian, although Blair, who has taken charge of Arthur's business affairs, protests.

Blair makes Arthur believe he suffered from hallucination in thinking he saw Esther. Luke is "railroaded" to prison by Blair. Arthur buys the diamond, and then later gives a costume ball at which Esther appears. Vivian insists that he choose between them. Blair, trying to take the diamond from Durand, who steals it from Arthur, hurls Durand from a window, killing him. Esther and Smythe return to Virginia, the girl rejoining Hagar at the sanitarium. The diamond is stolen by De Vaux, who assumes the name Langia, and hides with it. He is struck down and the diamond taken after Luke, aided by Quabba, escapes. Esther will not leave Hagar and takes her rightful place in society. Smythe examines a curious old parchment bearing Hagar's pedigree.

CHAPTERR LIII.

Again at Stanley Hall.

LUKE LOVELL, forgetting his recent hurts in the jail delivery, forgetting his limp which he had favored to further disguise himself, fled out of the Italian boarding house and through the deserted wine garden with the diamond from the sky. Even after she had brought another lamp to the so charming Signor Langia's room Signora Solari was in excitement. In fact she broke out into loud cries of "Assassins!" "Robbers!" and "Police!" and ere she could be restrained had rushed to the doorway overlooking her wine garden and made the night hideous with her cries.

Luke Lovell, pausing under a light in the empty street some distance off to reassure himself he had the diamond again, heard her screams and hid the baleful jewel once more beneath his rags and slipped off through the shadows.

In the opposite direction, two blocks away, Policeman McCarthy and Policeman Schultz, pausing to wait for their midnight relief, also heard the signora's cries. But when they reached the Solari establishment the signora had quieted at the counsels of her more composed daughter. They explained to the police that there had been a quarrel between two of the patrons, a quarrel that had greatly alarmed the signora and her daughter, since theirs, as the gentlemen of the police knew, was a most respectable place!

They were not regular patrons who had caused such an unseemly disturbance, the signora further explained. Assuredly the gentlemen of the police knew that the Cafe La Bella Napoli would not tolerate custom of this kind. The disturbers were gone. They had fled at the first coming of the so brave police when she had cried out, the signora added.

The Signora Solari Explained to the Police.

It was midnight, and their relief was waiting for them. The police were glad to escape from a morning in court with offenders and accepted the explanations.

It was fated that the ill starred jewel would lose two guests for the Cafe La Bella Napoli, for, roused to his danger were he caught and being irked at his confinement and feeling sure the evil repute of the diamond was well founded, De Vaux had hurriedly cast off the clothes he had been wearing in hiding for the last several weeks, and, donning his usual and more pleasing attire, the diamond thief, the last of "the pack," dropped from a back window of the lodging and made off down a deserted alley through the night and registered later at a hotel that pleased him better than the Cafe La Bella Napoli.

In his slumbers in the hayloft Quabba was aroused by the presence of Luke, and in the moonlight that streamed through the open window of the loft Luke showed him the diamond from the sky. Quabba crossed himself and made the sign that fends off the evil eye. He had come to believe the great diamond of the Stanleys was the amulet of the evil one, perhaps the evil eye itself. Who knows?

"You are to take it," said Luke. "Take it to Virginia to our mistress Hagar and our little mistress Esther. It belongs to them. I do not want it now; I only want revenge. When I have that I, too, will return to Virginia and serve Hagar faithfully again. Till then you take the diamond and be gone. You have money the English lawyer gave you for your return and the shipment of the pony back. Give me the price to ship back the pony, and while you are gone I can for awhile be a simple organ man with his monkey, as you were. And who will think to look for me as such?"

"We could not be parted, could we, Clarence, my son?"

"No, no!" shuddered Quabba. "I do not wish to have the evil diamond."

"It will not harm you," said Luke, as superstitious as the hunchback. "The diamond from the sky is only evil to those who think or do evil. Your heart is good. Take it!"

But Quabba was loath to do so. He was not so sure—poor fellow—that his heart was good. But Luke forced the great jewel upon him. Then Quabba had further objections to the plan proposed by Luke. "It is well what you say," he ventured—"all except Clarence. We could not be parted, could we, Clarence, my son? We were parted once for a short while and his little heart nearly broke by reason of it." And the monkey, as if he sensed his master's words, whimpered and clung to him.

"Well, take the monkey with you, then," said Luke. "It may be all the better, for the monkey is known as your other self, while as for the pony and the piano cart, what does it matter? One pony cart and one pony of the sort is much like another, but a monkey—there is something that people will remember!"

So at dawn Luke, in the guise of a limping itinerant musician, drove the pony and the street piano cart out from Los Angeles to a distant place, and in time shipped the outfit back by express to Quabba at Fairfax, near where was the gypsy rendezvous. Then Luke hid out in the wilds as a tramp workman, known to the confraternity as "a blanket stiff," and worked at such jobs as he could get, biding his time till the search for him as an escaped jailbird would have ended and he could return to Los Angeles for his revenge.

When Quabba took the train his being accompanied by Clarence, the monkey, necessitated his traveling in the smoking car. Fate takes us separate ways, yet sometimes we travel closely with those whose concerns are ours, and we never know. In the Pullman journeyed the dapper and furtive De Vaux. For the most part he kept his face behind a newspaper and hoped to be unseen, so he saw not. And for several thousand miles De Vaux, formerly accomplice and jackal to Durand, traveled in fear of the police and the vengeance of John Powell and the desperate Blair Stanley, and all the while the priceless diamond for which he and his dead master had risked so much traveled on the same train in the rags of a poor hunchback with a monkey!

So the months passed. To keep Arthur from thinking, to keep him engaged that they might further enmesh and despoil him, Blair and Vivian led the so called John Powell from one dissipation and wasteful luxury to another. He strove to overcome his addiction and the other dissipations more or less successfully. But his will had grown weak and his better self silenced, all of which was beheld by his loyal manservant, Parker, the one faithful friend remaining to him, with much misgiving and foreboding.

Hagar Pleaded With Esther.

At Stanley Hall, Lawyer Smythe gone about his affairs to England, Esther abode with Hagar. Hagar never fully recovered in health from Blair's murderous blow, though her mind was again clear and unclouded. She pleaded day by day with Esther that all Fairfax and all the world might know the truth at last. Fairfax shunned the two lone women at Stanley Hall. They were regarded as strangers and interlopers. Blair's mother had died after a paralytic stroke, and there was none now in that part of Virginia who even suspected the truth concerning Esther.

Mystery clung around Stanley Hall as some evil thing. The murder of Dr Lee after Esther had been his ward, the flight of Arthur Stanley, believed to be the old doctor's murderer, the disappearance of Blair Stanley—all these things made food for the gossips and caused the gentry of Fairfax to keep aloof.

Hagar realized that this was a cruel injustice to the fair young girl she so dearly loved. With Esther ostracized in a community where she should have been envied and sought after and with Arthur, the son for whom she had sacrificed and Esther had sacrificed, a profligate and a wastrel under another name not his own, the devoted Hagar reaped a harvest of heartaches, until she at last determined that Esther at least should be spared further ignominy.

CHAPTER LIV.

"Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee!"

AS Esther had steadfastly refused to permit Hagar to avow to all the world that the missing Arthur Stanley was but a gypsy changeling and that Esther was the true heir of Stanley Hall, Hagar determined to proclaim the truth and flee to her gypsy people. Once Esther's true status was known Hagar realized there could be no social communion for the gypsy and the mistress of Stanley Hall.

One night Hagar made the venture. Her things were secretly packed. Her silent gypsy help had prepared her for departure in the night. Esther slept, and Hagar crept silently by her bedside to pray and leave a note that would tell Esther of her determined resolve. But Esther stirred and woke and caught the weeping Hagar at the portals of the old mansion while yet her carriage waited. In loving struggle Esther bore Hagar back to the library that had seen the great tragedy of their lives.

"You shall not leave me! I will die, I will kill myself, if you do!" cried Esther, throwing herself into the arms of Hagar, while the tears welling from these two loving, steadfast hearts gave bitter savor to the parting. But Hagar was resolved.

The Mad Millionaire Is Now an Aviator!

"This dreadful lie, this living lie of twenty bitter years and more must die!" said Hagar resolutely. "Our ways lie different. The wrong of years I can undo at the breaking of my heart, my darling child!"

"And at the breaking of mine!" cried Esther. "What are the Stanleys to me? What have they done for me? What will they do for me? What will they do for you? I would rather beg my bread by your side throughout the world than dwell without you here or anywhere in every luxury that could be proffered me. I swear you shall not leave me!"

But Hagar sobbed, yet was resolute.

"You are my mother, in place of her who died when I was born. A tender mother through all the happy years we dwelt together before ambition and desire for things that are vain parted us and brought the sorrow to our hearts that now we feel," continued Esther. "I will not let you go, or if you go I shall go with you!"

Again she flung herself into the arms of Hagar, who, though her own tears blinded her and her own sobs choked her, endeavored to calm the shuddering, heartbroken girl.

In the struggle the Bible fell from the table beside them. Hagar picked it up as it fell open upon the floor.

"It shall be an omen and a portent," she whispered brokenly. And, lo, her hand was upon the book of Ruth and her finger at the sixteenth verse of the first chapter. With eyes scarce seeing, the twain chanted that old, sweet inspired message from one loyal woman's heart to another:

"'And Ruth said, Entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee, for whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people and thy God my God.'"

A deep hush fell upon them. Then Hagar spoke. "It is God's will," she said.

And so that night these two, never again to be parted in this life, closed the great door of the stately house behind them and journeyed on in a deep silent happiness to where the humble gypsy people awaited them.

"Strike camp!" was Hagar's command when the wild and happy clamor of the wandering folk at the return of their beloved queen and princess had calmed. She pointed westward. No further word was said, but day by day, month after month, the caravan moved ever westward, and Esther knew they journeyed to seek Arthur and to save his soul and bring him back from the living hell wherein he dwelt.

* * * * * * *

In far Los Angeles the mad millionaire John Powell has a new toy. It is an aeroplane of the latest, most complete and costliest type. Drink and drug crazed, the new toy fills the mad millionaire with wild, insensate delight. Speed! Speed! He drives it like a demon, flying like the lost soul he is at maddening pace adown the slopes of the wind.

"It will fall with him and break his neck some day," says Blair to Vivian philosophically. Blair is a true prophet, so far as that the machine will fall. He will take good heed that something breaks when all is ready with his other plans. Then he can announce and prove that John Powell, the mad millionaire, shattered to death by his aeroplane's fall, is Arthur Stanley, fugitive from justice in Virginia and sometime heir to the Stanley earldom in England and to the diamond from the sky. Arthur Stanley dead and out of the way, then he, Blair Stanley, possesses these honors as next of kin.

Blair keeps to Arthur's business affairs while John Powell keeps to his wild pleasures. Already Blair has diverted funds in secret that will mean the wreck of the Powell enterprises at the death of Powell. Blair only waits, as Vivian waits, for the reappearance of the diamond from the sky.

But where is the diamond?

Hagar could tell and Esther and Quabba. Better still, John Powell knows, for he has it safe and hidden The one cunning thing he does is to keep this secret, for it is more than all else the cause of his present more desperate evil courses. Quabba delivered it safely to Hagar and Esther in due time. But these two fell back from it as a thing accursed. They returned it sealed and carefully marked. With it Hagar transcribed and sent the prayer that Esther's dying mother had penned and placed within the locket—a mother's prayer that the Stanley "charm against harm" should be doubly so.

"Oh, child of my heart, not a diamond, but a loving mother's prayer is the true 'charm against harm!'"

Locked in the library, Arthur had read this message. Unmanned and weakling as he now was, he felt that the diamond was sanctioned by this prayer of a heartbroken mother of whom he was unworthy. Though Vivian had woven a spell around him, he felt in his secret soul it would be sacrilege to place the diamond around her fair white throat after it had been blessed by a prayer, even though he was lost too far to heed it.

It was then that the first wild idea of self destruction crossed Arthur's disordered mind. He secured a deadly and sudden poison and hid it in the safe in the library together with the diamond and its wrappings, and the message from the heart of his mother, the heart he knew he had broken. Knowing he had wronged Blair and kept him from his birthright, a deep regard for Blair, wicked as he knew him to be, had grown in Arthur's heart—like a weed where there should have been flowers. Dimly, loyally, he trusted Blair, trusted and loved him because he knew he wronged him and was not man enough to tell the truth now that the truth had grown a living lie through all the years.

Vivian, such times as she languished over him, endeavored to dissuade him that Blair was but her friend, their mutual companion. Blair, constrained, submitted to this scheme, though he little knew in his jealous heart how far the false Vivian carried it.

Vivian's Threat Was No Place For the Diamond Blessed by a Mother's Prayer, Arthur Thought.

* * * * * * *

And ever westward the gypsy caravan journeyed, bearing the two devoted hearts that sought to save Arthur's soul. The gypsies worshiped Esther, and the children, whom she petted, were her devoted followers. The caravan was within a few hundred miles of Los Angeles when matters came to a tragic crisis for the mad millionaire.

Vivian and Blair were motoring when John Powell's secretary came to his employer's mansion bearing with him the irrefutable proofs of Blair's treachery and showing beyond dispute, by the doctored accounts and canceled checks, how Blair by devious ways had the Powell properties on the point of ruin and that Blair had waxed rich in his own name.

Another friend brought more ill tidings, as is the wont of friends. Parker, Arthur's devoted man servant, viewing with deep concern the machinations of both Blair and Vivian, had won the confidence of Vivian's spinster maid. This mature female had cast longing eyes on the dignified and reserved Parker. She had hinted at a secret she held over her mistress' head. Parker, affecting to succumb to the wiles of the none too prepossessing femme de chambre of Vivian, had been given the secret. It was the marriage certificate of Vivian and Blair, dated in Richmond the year before.

This filled the cup of bitterness for John Powell, some time Arthur Stanley of Stanley Hall: False friend, false woman, and he a weakling, disowned and dishonored—a weakling who had betrayed the love of sweet Esther and broken the heart of his anguished mother.

Esther Petted the Gypsy Children.

He takes all these proofs of perfidy, his own and others'—his own being the diamond from the sky and his mother's message—and lays them out before him. He is locked in his library alone. The clock nears 12. At midnight he will drain a poisoned cup and drink a toast to death!

At this hour Hagar and Esther have drawn ahead of the gypsy caravan in Hagar's van to hasten on to the end of their journey. A storm breaks upon them, and Quabba, who drives the van, guides the horses beneath the shelter of a great live oak by the wayside. There is a blinding crash—a bolt of lightning hits the tree, and the van is in flames.

A hundred miles away Hagar's son raises his glass to drain the bitter cup of his life to the dregs and drinks his toast to death. The rain beats upon the window, the lightning flashes, and then the window opens, and from the lawn the drenched figure of Luke Lovell steps into the room.

"You gypsy renegade, look at me!" cries Luke. And then he bends low, his eyes glisten all the fiercer, and he reaches forth a coarse and brawny hand and grasps again, and for the last time, the diamond from the sky!

For Art's Sake.

Mere technical skill at the piano did not go very far with the late Rafael Joseffy. There is a story related by one of his pupils which touches on that point. She was playing, as she thought, very correctly, but the great instructor, so like a dynamo, seemed like a dynamo about to burst.

"Get out of here," he stormed, "and do not return until you have been in love!"

This particular pupil must have had "temperament." Anyway, she managed the order very expeditiously. Out she went into the hall and sat down for fifteen minutes and thought with concentration of her latest love affair. Then she returned to her lesson and sat down at the piano.

Joseffy did not speak until she had finished the nocturne. Then—

"Ah, that is it! Never play that nocturne again without the proper preparation."—New York Post.

Her Husband Was Not In.

"Husband in?" asked the gas collector cheerfully.

"No," answered the woman; "he isn't at home."

"Expecting him soon?" asked the collector.

"Well," the woman replied thoughtfully, "I don't know exactly. I've been looking for him seventeen years, and he hasn't turned up yet. You travel about a good deal, and if you see a man who looks as though he'd make a pretty good husband tell him I'm still waiting and send him along."

ANOTHER OPPORNUNITY

To Consult An Eminent Specialist

NEAR OUR HOMES

Since his last visit many inquiries as to when he is going to return have been received. On his last visit to Thief River Falls his rooms were thronged with patients as will no doubt be the case on his coming trip.

Under the law of the Great State of Minnesota, Dr. Doran is specially licensed by the Minnesota State Board of Medical Examiners to visit professionally the principal towns and cities of the state. Being so legally authoried gives his standing that gains the confidence of the people, saying nothing about the many satisfied patients he has in every part of the state, under his system of treatment without operation. (That which is too often resorted to).

Dr. Doran has been a resident of Minnesota for many years and has devoted nineteen years of his professional life in the study and practice of chronic ailments. With his vast experience in this line of work for these many years, enables him to combat chronic diseases of which he makes a specialty.

It is hardly necessary to state anything further regarding his standing and ability, but we will take the liberty to publish a few extracts from letters recently written by a few of his many patients.

Geo. Matasovsky, Lakefield, Minn., writes: Dear Dr. Doran—Our little boy is improving nicely; think it will take another month treatment to cure him. We feel very thankful to you. We tried two other doctors and no relief.

Mrs. Odin Oien, Wahpeton, N. Dak., in letter states she is getting along fine, felt better soon after beginning the treatment.

August Althoff, Thief River Falls, Minn., writes he is rapidly improving after a long standing ailment.

Mrs. Harry Clements, Clear Lake, S. Dak., writes, wanting to know when Dr. Doran is going to be in western Minnesota, as he helped Mr. Clements so much that she wants to consult him for her ailments.

E. M. Thorough, Rt. No. 2, Jasper, Minn., says his boy 12 years old is cured of bed-wetting. Mr. Thorough also took treatment. Write these people for further information.

Mrs. C. A. Wolf, Aitkin, Minn., writes: I am writing to tell you I am rejoiced to be able to say that two of my five sores are healed. Two more are healing over.

Andrew Hawkinson, Manchester, Minn., writes that he is getting better.

Frances Luedke, Chaska, Minn., writes, after the first dose she took, felt better and is getting well.

Simon Thompson, Rt. No. 2, Kindred, N. Dak., told Dr. Doran he was cured of appendicitis and also his son, Oscar, was cured.

Dr. Doran will be one day only at Thief River Falls, Hotel Evelyn, from nine in the morning until five in the evening, Friday, February 4. J27.

THIEF RIVER FALLS PEOPLE GET INSTANT ACTION.

Those who have used it in Thief River Falls are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. Because it acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL Adler-i-ka relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. F. G. Stebbins, druggist.

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS IN NEARBY TOWNS

OLDEST INDIAN DYING.

Ka-be-na-guay-yance, an Indian at Cass Lake, said to be 128 years old, is in a hospital, dying. He is known as Capt. John Smith—and he showed a modern trait in making out a will, and an Indian trait by refusing to lie on a bed at the hospital, insisting on having a blanket spread for him on the floor. He was found lying near the Great Northern tracks near the depot.—Pillager Herald.

YOUNG POTATO KING.

According to an announcement by the agricultural department of the Minnesota state university, the best potato grower in the state among the boys is Oscar Larson of Viking. This twelve-year-old boy raised 605 bushels of potatoes on one acre of ground, at a cost of only 12 cents per bushel. It is believed that this is the best record made by boys, not only in Minnesota, but also in the whole country. Allen Strand, of East Grand Forks, raised 360 bushels. Among the girls, thirteen-year-old Elizabeth Tofte, from Tofte, won the first prize, with a crop of 504 bushels per acre and Ruth Enstrom of Carlton, was next with 378 bushels.—Warren Sheaf.

PRAISE FOR THE FAIR.

The mid-winter fair at Thief River Falls was not as largely attended as it would have been if the weather had been more favorable, but there was some very good exhibits of farm products and some very nice exhibits made by the merchants of Thief River Falls. This was just a starter for mid-winter fairs, and as the people, especially the farmers begin to realize the benefits to be derived from an exhibit of this kind, they will take more interest in it, and as Professor Hay said, the mid-winter fair will grow in size, until the auditorium building will not be large enough to hold them. Great credit is due the Commercial club of Thief River Falls for their efforts to make the fair a success.—Sunbeam.

CASE DISMISSED— S'MORE TROUBLE.

The action brought by the residents of Clearbrook to restrain the Board of County Commissioners from purchasing the Bagley high school building for a court house which came up before Judge Stanton at Bemidji last Thursday was dismissed at the request of Attorney E. T. Evenson for the relator, Edward Rydeen of Clearbrook, on the ground that since he got his order to show cause the Commissioners have passed a resolution to act upon the school matter, Feb. 15th, which destroys the effect of his order. This however, does not mean that the people of Clearbrook have abandoned their fight against the proposition of purchasing the Bagley school. Another injunction will probably be filed before February 15.—Bagley Independent.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

Leo. A. Tracy, indicted by the Polk county grand jury, of manslaughter in the second degree, was arraigned before Judge Wm. Watts yesterday afternoon. He entered a plea of not guilty and his case was set for trial February 4. Tracy was arrested at East Grand Forks last July, following a saloon row there, in which M. F. Hall, of Austin, Minn., received injuries that a few days later caused his death. Tracy, it is alleged, struck the fatal blow. He however, admits that he hit Hall, but not before he had provocation for the act. He struck not to kill, but more to keep Hall away from him. The blow, he says, was put forth with no great force, and had not Hall been intoxicated at the time, it would have had no telling effect. It is likely that self-defense will be the plea offered at the trial.—Crookston Times.

MIDDLE RIVER TO BOND.

Contrary to the general supposition the bare majority of one given the bond proposition in the election on January 4th is sufficient to carry the proposition. Clerk Olson was so informed in a letter from the office of the state attorney general. The 65 per cent requirement does not apply in bonding to the state for a state loan. Hence the application for a state loan of $4,000.00 has been duly sent in and as soon as the legal formalities are transacted the loan will be received from the state board of investment.—Middle River Pioneer.

FORMER FOSSTON LADS ENLIST

At least two former residents of Fosston have enlisted for the great war now in progress in Europe. Clare Sutor, eldest son of Sam Sutor, who was engaged in the hotel business here for a number of years, enlisted in British Columbia and belongs to the British Red Cross ambulance corps. He crossed the Atlantic and arrived at Liverpool two weeks ago. He expects to drive an auto field hospital ambulance, probably in France.

Clifford Staples, also well known here formerly, lately resident of British Columbia, has joined the Canadian over-seas army and is in the 172nd regiment now stationed at Kamloops, according to a recent letter from his wife, Mrs. Edna (Clough) Staples. His regiment expects to leave for the old country early in the summer.—Fosston Thirteen Towns.

COUNTY HAS 294 "GASOLINE LIZARDS"

Total Number of Cars In State Is 95,000—Many People Acquired One In 1915.

According to the estimate made by Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, in his annual report on automobile licensing, there are about 95,000 automobiles in the state of Minnesota at the close of the year, December 31, 1915. Pennington county is credited with having 294.

There were almost 93,000 individual automobile licenses in the state, according to Mr. Schmahl's figures, and 2,000 more machines were in the hands of the 450 dealers of the state.

During 1915, 27,000 people acquired "benzine buggies."

Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties hold the record for the largest number of cars. Redwood county leads in the number of cars in proportion to the population.

The number of automobiles in each county of the state follows:

THIEF RIVER FALLS SECOND IN STATE

Efforts of Woman's Club Resulted In Six Seals Per Capita Being Sold Here.

The standing of the cities of the state in the Red Cross Seal campaign conducted prior to Christmas and New Years, has just been given out by the Minnesota Public Health association and the report shows that Thief River Falls is second on the list, which places this city in the front ranks of progressive communities. The local Woman's club conducted an enthusiastic and strenuous campaign in the sale of the Red Cross Seals and the record established must be a source of gratification to that organization.

A nurse was offered by the Minnesota Public Health association for one month to as many as five communities of above 3,000 population which would sell the most Red Cross Seals per capita.

Worthington lead all the other cities, having sold about 10 seals per capita. Thief River Falls came next, having sold about 6 seals per capita. Bemidji took third place in the race with about 5 seals per capita.

A number of other towns are so close for the other two places that more detailed information will have to be determined before it can be decided which will get the nurse; heading this group are Brainerd, Lake City, Fergus Falls, Fairmont, Willmar and Warren.

The visiting nurse may not be wanted in any of these towns however, until summer or fall, when their respective county sanatoria open. Then besides doing school work and other general work, the nurse can do a most important task, namely, round up the tuberculosis cases in the neighborhood needing sanatorium treatment and arranging for their admittance. It is one thing to build sanatoria, it is another thing to get the patients into them and keep them there. At present the visiting nurse can do this better than any other agency.

Formerly and especially in the larger cities it was customary to have one nurse specialize for tuberculosis cases, another for school work, etc. The work in all groups where a visiting nurse is needed, naturally overlaps. The tendancy is now, and a very sensible move it is, to have the one nurse do all the social and preventive work needed in a district and specialize by town or district, rather than by cases. At present nearly every city of above 5,000 population in the state has a visiting nurse. Dr. J. J. Murphy, Secretary of the Minnesota Public Health association thinks it practical however, to employ a visiting nurse in smaller communities, at least in communities of about 3,000 population. No doubt in a few years the entire state will be covered by visiting nurses, rural districts as well as cities.

POINTS THE WAY.

The Statement of This Pencer Resident Will Interest Our Readers.

Our neighboring town, Pencer, points the way in the words of one of its most respected residents:

Mrs. R. A. Hammond, Pencer, Minn., says: "For a long time, I was troubled by irregular action of my kidneys. I had a constant desire to pass the kidney secretions and had severe pains in my back and hips. I suffered from headaches and dizzy spells and felt miserable. One of my family had been benefited by Doan's Kidney Pills, so I tried them. They gave me relief at once. That was quite awhile ago and my health is now unusually good. I give all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hammond had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—J27-F3.

PRODUCE HOUSE TO LOCATE HERE

Peterson-Biddick Company of Wadena, Have Practically Decided to Establish Branch House at Thief River Falls

LOCAL CAPITAL TO ASSIST

The Concern is One of the Best Known in Central Minnesota--Handles Farm Produce of All Kinds--Location Here Means Much to Entire Section

There is every reason to believe that a produce company or large commission house will be established in Thief River Falls in the very near future. News to this effect was received by Secretary Fred Lincoln of the Commercial club the first of the week. The firm of Peterson-Biddick located at Wadena, Minn., state in a letter to the secretary that they have practically decided upon locating in this city and with the assistance of local parties contemplate on erecting a large commission house. This firm has been looking for a suitable location along the Soo line for some time past, and in their letter stated "we like your city very much."

The company when established will engage in the purchasing of potatoes, chickens, eggs and other farm produce.

The company's building, if erected, will also be designed to serve as a potato warehouse, and will be large enough to care for the potato crop of this section.

Wennerblom Makes Good On Checks.

"Stand-Up" Feb. 8.

The last club lunch during the fiscal year ending February 10, will be given Tuesday evening, February 8 at 6:15 p. m. Secretary Lincoln wishes to announce that an unusually good menu has been prepared; as also has a splendid program. The lunches so far have proven extremely popular, and it is hoped that the one to be given on the above date will exceed all previous ones.

DR. J. C. R. CHAREST ACQUITTED BY JURY

Decision is Reached After Considering For Sixteen Hours the Testimony in Pennington County's Most Famous Case

Trial Attracted Wide Attention and Was at Times Decidedly Sensational in Its Developments

"We find the defendant, Dr. J. C. R. Charest, not guilty." That was the verdict brought in by the twelve men, who composed the jury delegated to decide the fate of Dr. J. C. R. Charest, charged with having performed a criminal operation upon the person of Mrs. Haword Gesell, on the sixth of February of last year. The jury was out exactly sixteen and three-quarter hours. At one time it is reported, the twelve men stood 10 to 2 for conviction, but when morning dawned the ten men had changed their views to "not guilty."

County attorney H. O. Kjomme finished his plea to the jury for the state at exactly 3:39 p. m. Friday afternoon. His plea was a rather lengthy one and took every part of the case into careful consideration. Attorney Kjomme said, "as for Howard Gesell, I shall not say much, I know Mr. Daily will do justice to him." Several times Attorney Daily for the defense objected to statements made by Mr. Kjomme, but the judge ruled that it be left to the best recollections of the jury. After completing his plea a short recess was taken.

Attorney Daily opened his plea to the jury fifteen minutes later. Beginning from the very start of the case. His sentences were rounded out with force and the plea was white hot. Attorney Daily's justice to Howard Gesell, was as Attorney Kjomme had predicted and scored him heavily. At 5:45 Mr. Daily finished his plea, by saying to the jurymen, "I will probably never see you again sitting as a jury, and I wish to thank you for the attention you have given me during this trial."

Judge Grindeland then made his charge to the jury, and cited the important position they were filling. He also mentioned the seriousness of the crime, if such a one as was alleged, had been committed. The jury was then taken to supper by the sheriff and went into session immediately after. The first matter w asthe electing of a foreman, and resulted in the selection of H. O. Homme.

Saturday morning at 10:50 the jurymen filed into the court room and seated themselves by the railing, Dr. Charest, Dr. Pelon, accompanied by Attorney Bishop, came in five minutes before. The accused physician appeared to be cool and unconcerned. Silence prevailed when the judge asked, "have you gentlemen reached a verdict in this case?" The twelve men replied, "yes." The report of the jury was handed to Judge Grindeland, who read it and then handed it to deputy clerk of court, Fred Quale. The report was read aloud by the clerk. Dr. Charest seemed to be relieved of a great burden after its reading and arose to thank each man on the jury. The jury was then dismissed until the afternoon.

A shortage in revenue stamps is reported in the city, this being due to the fact that Collector Lynch's office at St. Paul was recently rifled for over one million dollars worth of the stamps by highwaymen. Mr. Lynch is thereby unable to supply them to this section until another shipment comes from Washington. The fact that it is a violation of the law to send certain articles without the necesary stamp, it is proving somewhat of an inconvience to many of the people to hold their articles.

NATIONAL ROAD LOOKS CERTAIN

Advantages of Building Highway so As to Include Thief River Falls Presented to State Commission by C. L. Hanson

SITUATION IS FAVORABLE

Road Has Been Tentatively Located From St. Paul Northward to Bemidji, and Most Feasible Route is Westward From That Point, Then North

That much discussed and heralded Jefferson Highway, which traverses the United States from north to south, from New Orleans, Louisiana, to Winnipeg, Canada, might pass through Thief River Falls was given a boost the first of the week. C. L. Hansen, notified Secretary Lincoln that he had appeared for the Commercial club before the State Highway Commission at St. Paul in endeavoring to secure the road to pass through here, and that the commission had discussed the plan very favorably.

The route selected for the highway by the commission to date is from St. Paul to Bemidji. The Jefferson Highway association designated the road leading from Albert Lea to St. Paul known as the Capital National Highway which passes through Owatonna, Fairbault, Northfield and Farmington. The association authorizes the Minnesota Highway commission to select the balance of the route through Minnesota. The route selected is through Osseo to Anoka, Hennepin county, to Elk River in Sherburne county, thence north on the east side of the Mississippi to Little Falls, thence northwest to Staples in Todd county, west and north through Wadena and Park Rapids to the source of the Mississippi in Itasca state park, thence northeast to Bemidji. At this point the selection of the route will be postponed until the engineers in charge have had a chance to pick out the best route from Bemidji to St. Vincent, where the highway will connect with the Canadian division.

George Cooley, state engineer of the highway commission expects that the road will be completed and in good shape by 1917. Mr. Cooley said, "automobile tourists passing over the Jefferson Highway will see some magnificent scenery and get a glimpse of the source of the Mississippi. The course of the road through the state will be 500 miles in length and will include the most beautiful portion of the highway."

CAPTURES MAN WANTED BY ALEXANDRIA POLICE

A. G. Wherman, Agent For Free Sewing Machine Company, Taken Off Train Yesterday by Sheriff LaBree

Acting upon orders wired to him by Sheriff Kent of Alexandria, Minn., in Douglass county, Sheriff W. J. LaBree yesterday prevented A. G. Wherman, who has been making this city his home for the past few months, acting as agent for the Free Sewing Machine company, from boarding the Great Northern passenger southbound and held the man until evening. Sheriff Kent came up from Alexandria on one of the local trains to take his man back with him, where he is charged with having appropriated funds. Wherman flatly denied the charge and left for that place on the Soo flyer in the custody of the sheriff.

GROUND HOG PREDICTS SIX MORE WINTRY WEEKS

Yesterday Was Date When Famous Predictor Came Out of Winter Quarters to Make His Annual Forecast

According to Honorable Mr. G. Hog, we are to have six more weeks of frigid weather. This was made known yesterday when Mr. Hog made his annual visit to the surface of the earth. Without a doubt he was able to see his shadow without the aid of spectacles, microscopes or even a periscope, and if there is any truth to the old Indian tradition, he ducked back to his winter hole to slumber for another six weeks.

Mr. Hog's predictions have not always panned out and have lost much of their weight. If there should be an early spring Mr. Hog might just as well throw up the sponge, because nobody in Thief River Falls will place any confidence in him.

HOCKEY TEAM IS WINNER OF TWO

Crack Universal Team of Duluth, Forfeits Game With Thief River Falls Through Failure to Put in An Appearance

BEAT TWO HARBORS ALSO

Reports Are to the Effect That This City is Represented by the Classiest-Looking Aggregation Present—Playing of Bennett Particularly Brilliant

The Universal Hockey Team of Duluth, forfeited their game to the local team yesterday on account of non-appearance. Pitted against the St. Paul Biulders Association team, they carried off the long end of the score by 4 to 1. St. Paul is reported to have played a sensational game. Thief River Falls also put up a wonderful exhibition, most of the playing taking place at the St. Paul end of the rink.

Rice and Hagen starred in this game. During the game Rice scored two times; Hagen, 1 and Devenny, 1. Bennett played a wonderful game at goal, stopping all shots directed for him.

In order to bring home the carnival trophy, Thief River Falls must win two more games, and prospects are very bright according to reports received here. The next game on the schedule is with the fast Bagley team of Duluth, to be played tomorrow afternoon. They are regarded as their most dangerous opponents. A return game will be played with Two Harbors tomorrow afternoon. The way the men lined up yesterday was: Bennett, goal; Durham, point; Devenny, coverpoint; Hagen, rover; Rice, center; Welsh, right wing; Backus, left wing.

The newly elected officers of the Commercial club will take charge next Thursday evening, February 10, at the annual meeting of the club. The report of Secretary Lincoln, for the year ending on this date, will also be read. Every club member should attend this meeting and learn fully what the club has accomplished during the past twelve months.

The old directors will meet for the last time on Monday evening, February 7, at 7:30 o'clock.

President Vincent Here Feb. 16.

The last number on the Lyceum Course arranged by the womans club, will occur Wednesday evening February 16, when President Vincent of the university of Minnesota will deliver an address.

FAMILY BARELY ESCAPES WHEN HOUSE IS BURNED

Members of J. C. Bird Household Trudge Barefooted to Neighbor's When Fire Destroys Home This Morning

Fire, believed to have originated from a defective chimney, completely destroyed the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bird, two blocks north of the Soo round-house, this morning shortly after five o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Bird, who were occupying one of the rooms down stairs, were awakened by the dense smoke. They had no time to gather their clothes together and were forced to walk barefooted and in their nightgowns to a neighboring house. Everything in the structure was completely destroyed. An alarm was sent in to the fire department but owing to the fact that the residence was out of the city limits very little assistance could be given by the department.

The flames spread throughout the house with a rapidity that was remarkable, devouring the building within twenty minutes.

Very little or no insurance was carried by Mr. Bird upon the household articles and it is a complete loss to him. F. S. Patten, employed at the Soo round-house nights, is also a heavy looser. Mr. patten, who stayed at the Bird residence, lost all his belongings on the second floor. The house is the property of Nels Knutson and the loss on the structure is covered by insurance.

Partial Eclipse of the Sun Today

Did you equip yourself with a smoked glass or some other kind of dark glass this morning to observe the partial eclipse of the sun, or were you too busy shoveling snow or trying to keep the stove going?

It was called a total eclipse of the sun, but the total phase could be seen only along a narrow and curved path less than a hundred miles wide, far to the south of us, which begins in the Pacific ocean, crosses the countries of Columbia and Venezuela and ends a little before reaching England.

The eclipse began at 9:15 a. m., by Central standard time, and could be seen through a smoked glass or some other dark piece of glass. The first contact of the eclipse was seen on the right hand edge of the sun, about half way between the lower point and the point farthest to the right or west. It was hardly visible at first, but after a few minutes appeared as a distinct black circular notch, increasing in size until 9:55 A. M. when it was at its greatest. It ended or passed off at 10:45 A. M. The duration was one and one half hours and the sun was in the southeast, with an exceptionally clear sky.

PIPES WERE FROZEN; RESULTS AS USUAL

Explosion of Cooking Range Nearly Demolishes the Kitchen in Residence of Nels Olson on Red Lake Boulevard

Man Hurled Across Room With Great Force But Was Only Slightly Injured—Property Loss Considerable

Starting a fire in his kitchen range and not knowing that the pipes connecting the range boiler were filled with frozen water, Nels Olson, residing near the Soo depot, was hurled across the room by the explosion that resulted, very, narrowly escaping death, yesterday morning at about 8:30.

Mr. Olson returned Tuesday evening from Spicer, Minn., where he had burried his wife and spent the night at the home of his son, O. N. Olson. In the morning he left for his residence on Red Lake Boulevard to start a fire in the kitchen range in order to warm the house up. Before leaving for Spicer, Mr. Olson had drained some of the water from the tank to prevent it from freezing. However, all the water had not been drained and some had frozen in the pipes connecting the tank to the range.

Mr. Olson started the fire in the range and it had been burning for about fifteen or twenty minutes before the explosion occured. All this time steam had been forming and, as there was no chance for it to escape, the explosion took place.

He was standing near the boiler, and was thrown across the room into the corner. A large piece of the stove struck the sink, chipped off the corner and then plunged through the wall. Another piece cut a hole in the ceiling about twelve inches square. Mr. Olson was struck by a piece on the chest but he had three coats on at the time and he says that is what probably saved him from serious injury. On landing in the corner in a dazed condition, he groped around to get hold of some object and accidentally got hold of the door leading into the dining room. He then crawled into the adjoining room and emerged from the smoke filled house. Dr. Froehlich, who passed the house at that instant, was notified by Olson of the explosion, and was told to go to the O. N. Olson home for help.

Dr. Froehlich left for the Olson residence to give the alarm and then proceeded on to his office, not knowing of the seriousness of the accident.

The accident was a most remarkable one and Mr. Olson considers himself extremely fortunate to have escaped without being fatally injured.

VELMA PRICE IS WINNER IN ORATORICAL CONTEST

Representative of Thief River Falls High School Carries Off Honors Against Red Lake and Warroad Contenders

Velma Price was declared the winner in the district declamation contest held last Friday afternoon at the Lincoln high school. Miss Price gave a reading entitled "His Father's Son," with a clear voice and visualized the character in a creditable manner. Her margin of points over two other contestants was large and the display of oratory was easily the best ever given in the city by a high school student.

Miss Price will represent this district at the Crookston Farm Crops Show and will compete with other orators for a silver loving cup. This contest will be held at Crookston on February 7.

Attractions at Lyceum.

The Broadway attraction at the Lyceum theatre for Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th, is entitled "My Old Dutch," presenting England's most distinguished character actor, Albert Chevalier, supported by famous Florence Turner. It is a beautiful story of a father's and mother's self sacrifice for an only son, spending their little savings that he might receive a college education and live like a gentleman, while he in turn is gambling away his inheritance among his society acquaintances. Times are hard and the shadows darken over that humble home. Bit by bit their saving go and when the truth is broken to them about their boy's behavior—the boy on whom they had lavished their all—their sorrow deepens. Heartbroken and through poverty they lose their home and only one thing remains, the last refuge of the poor—the workhouse. Together the couple totter to the union door. See the remainder of the story at the Lyceum Tuesday night. Admission 5c and 10c.

On Thursday evening, Feb. 10th, Manager Morgan will present another one of those splendid, world-renowned Fox Film Corporation attractions, entitled, "The Nigger," starring Wm. Farnum, who achieved great fame in "The Spoilers" and the "Plunderer," presented at the Lyceum theatre some time past. The price of admission for this evening will be 10c and 15c.

The vaudeville attraction for Saturday and Sunday evenings will be Smith and Davis in a novelty dancing act. They will also appear at the Saturday matinee. Price of admission to matinee is 5c and 10c. Evening prices will be 10c and 15c.

High School Notes

The various schools are presenting entertainments at the Lincoln each evening of this week, beginning Wednesday. The admission is 10c and 25c and the proceeds will be used for the purchase of pictures for the schools. The walls of the Lincoln halls and rooms are hung with handsome copies of famous pictures as well as pictures of well known buildings and ruins. The exhibit alone is worth the price of admission, to say nothing of the entertainments.

Warroad, Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls presented candidates at the declamatory contest last Friday. The local candidate, Velma Price, was declared the winner and will represent the school at Crookston next Monday evening. Five other candidates will take part in the contest for the honors of the valley.

By reason of the illness of the visiting specialist, the farm meetings scheduled for this week were canceled. They will be held later in the month.

The records in the high school show that about four per cent of the pupils fail in their work, though a few more than this fail in one or two subjects. Definite reasons can always be given parents for the red marks which appear on the report cards.

Mr. Werner's stock judging team will visit Crookston next Monday to uphold the reputation of the school agriculturists against other teams from various parts of the Red River Valley.

The basketball boys won from the North Star College at Warren last Saturday. They play Ada and Crookston at those towns this week.

The cold weather has little apparent effect on the attendance. The vans are maintaining their schedules and thus all the children are reaching school promptly. There is non-attendance only among those boys over whom parents have no control and who, in absence of a truant officer, are loafing about town.

The penny lunches for children from a distance are being served regularly and easily. The pennies with daily reports are turned in each Monday by the principals to the school office and from there reach the school treasurer.

toe, right there,—don't be afraid,—that's it —feel how smooth the skin is? Well, that's where the corn was. Well, that beats all!" That's the way "Gets-It" works on all corns, every corn, every time. It's the new, simple way of curing corns. You'll say good-bye to all foolish contraptions like bundling bandages, sticky tape, plasters, toe-eating salves, and grave-diggers such as knives, razors and scissors. "Gets-It" stops pain. Applied in 2 seconds. Never fails. Nothing to stick to, hurt or press on the corn.

Sold in Thief River Falls and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by J. P. Curtis and F. J. Stebbins.

VILLAGE OF ST. HILAIRE

Another Step Toward a Modern City.

On Tuesday evening our village stepped from darkness into light, when the electric lights were turned on in all parts of the village. In honor of the occasion a banquet was served by the ladies of the Civic club. During a little speech Mayor A. S. Wilson turned on the lights in the hall, where over two hundred people had gathered to celebrate the event. After a very delicious supper prepared and served by the ladies, William Brown, Manager of the Red River Power Co., of Grand Forks, gave a talk on "Electricity." Dr. C. Swanson also made a few remarks.

Our village band rendered several very fine selections during the evening. Several of our young ladies greeted the occasion by singing such songs as "St. Hilaire will Shine," etc.

After the supper and the excitement of the lights were over the tables and chairs were put away and both the young and old spent the remainder of the evening in dancing, the orchestra furnishing the music. A light luncheon was served at midnight to all who remained.

Our village now has lights that any village of its size can be proud to boast of. A large number of prominent farmers near St. Hilaire were present for the celebration to show that they also are interested in the welfare of our progressive little city.

Band Meeting.

At a special business meeting of the St. Hilaire band held last week it was decided that the band will make a tour to some of our northern towns with a select concert. Some of the towns already planned upon are Roseau, Greenbush, Badger and Middle River. The boys intend to make the tour about the first part of March and are now drilling upon spcial music for the occasion. From the above it appears that the boys believe in advertising for our village and now would not it be a fine time for the Commercial club and council to help improve the appearance of the home band by helping the boys to get band suits or at least jackets and caps.

Afternoon Party.

Mrs. Dan Patterson and her daughter, Miss Katherine, entertained several lady friends at their home on Water street last Tuesday afternoon. The guests present were the Mesdames A. J. Hed, C. Swanson, S. Hoff, M. Hoff, A. P. Hogstrom and B. E. Burkee. A dainty luncheon was served and a pleasant time was spent.

Otto Hallstrom Passes Away.

On Monday, January 31st, at the St. Mary's hospital in Minneapolis occurred the death of Otto Hallstrom, one of our prominent Black River farmers. Mr. Hallstrom had spent several weeks at the St. Mary's hospital and it has been known for some time that his case was serious, being a very severe case of cancer of the limb. The remains were brought to this village Tuesday, accompanied by Mrs. Hallstrom, who has been in Minneapolis with her hubsand for some time. Interment was made at the Black River cemetery Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Halstrom has been a resident of Black River for a great many years and is well known and has won the respect of all. The bereaved family has the heartfelt sympathy of the people of this vicinity.

North Bridge Proposition.

The village council let a contract to the Northern Construction company of Thief River Falls, for the reconstruction of the north bridge. As the contracts have not been signed by either parties concerned and as there has been some trouble in securing the timber for the work, there are rumors that nothing will be done to the bridge until next year. Some of our citizens do not believe in letting the bridge proposition hang fire for another year, but others believe it is a good thing to have something coming.

Death of Mrs. Lind.

Mrs. Mathilda Lind passed away at her home in Sanders Saturday, January 29, of tuberculosis. The funeral was held Wednesday at the Lind home. Mrs. Lind was fifty-five years of age and was a well known pioneer settler in Sanders. She leaves a family of grown up children to mourn her loss. The children have the sympathy of the entire community.

The "Parish Priest" shown here by the Stearns troupe last Tuesday night was very entertaining and in fact one of the best plays put on here for some time. The play was well attended, the crowd being a great deal larger than the crowd attending the band concent, and although this show was well worth attending, still we feel that it is the duty of the citizens of St. Hilaire and especially of the business men to patronize their home organizations and lend a hand to help anything that is for the good of the village. The band boys intend to give other concerts later on and we know from their first performance that we can look forward with pleasure to a concert in the near future. The boys need the money to keep the band in progress and it is hoped that the people will not be backward in patronizing them.

Mrs. Jack Bahan and Mrs. B. E. Burkee were callers at the schoolhouse last Wednesday, under the auspices of the Ladies' Civic Improvement society.

The Misses Edith Dahl, Olive Portêr and Mae Barragy were entertained at a six o'clock dinner at the C. Johnson home Sunday evening.

A number of the young girls spent Sunday afternoon visiting at the G. W. Hooper home.

Mrs. D. McAllister entertained a number of her friends at her home Saturday evening.

A great many of the young people of St. Hilaire are making preparations to attend the dance at Hazel Saturday evening, given by the St. Hilaire Peerless orchestra.

W. Olson was on the sick list last week, but is up and around again.

Mrs. B. E. Burkee and Mrs. J. Bahan, members of the committee to visit the sick, under the direction of the Ladies' Civic club, called on Miss Eva Johnson Wednesday afternoon.

Don't forget that the firemen's mask ball, February 18th, is to be the greatest event of the season, and special courtesy will be shown all out of town people. Good music, good supper, and an all around good time is assured to all.

The Ladies' Aid of the United Lutheran church were entertained by Mrs. A. Bilden last Thursday at her home on Water street.

Rev. Follensbee narrowly escaped being severely burned last Thursday afternoon by an explosion of his coal stove, and carried off several minor burns which might have proved more serious.

The Young Peoples' society of the United Lutheran church served lunch at the Imperial hall Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Burkee were guests at the Andrew Berkhall home Friday evening and spent a very pleasant evening playing Norwekian whist.

K. O. Gigstad was a Thief River Falls visitor Wednesday.

K. O. Gigstad's residence hos been guparanteed for measles. Two of the younger children hae a slight attack, and will, it is hoped, recover soon.

A COMMON-SENSE VIEW

(Editorial in Red Lake Falls Gazette).

The people of Red Lake county are confronted by a most unusual situation. This section of Minnesota has been gradually going dry until now Red Lake county alone remains with saloons in an area of country embracing much of Minnesota and all of North Dakota.

And now Red Lake county people are to have the opportunity on the 28th of February of determining whether or not Red Lake county shall remain the only wet spot in this vast area of country or "go dry."

This going dry business has often been referred to as a wave, but in Minnesota it has been more like a growth. A number of years ago numerous small cities in central and western Minnesota tried the experiment of voting no license. They were wet and dry alternate years, usually, and finally became permanently dry. The business men of those cities say that after a short period of readjustment the loss of license money became no financial burden to the cities, that more money was turned into the ordinary commercial channels and that the only disagreeable feature was the necessity of making illegal the liquor business. So it became not a financial problem but a question of whether or not people wanted saloons. People voted dry for various reasons—some for moral reasons, others because they wanted to remove any temptation the saloon might be to their boys, etc. These were, of course, good reasons for those who entertained them and similar reasons will no doubt control many votes in Red Lake county.

But in Red Lake county we have a situation quite unlike any that any other community has been compelled to face.

THE SITUATION.

In discussing this situation the writer will for the first time in nearly fifteen years of newspaper experience say what he has to say in the most personal way possible. I (there it goes)—I want to make what I have to say at this time as direct a statement as possible.

I am for a DRY RED LAKE COUNTY.

I want to say right now that in what is being said here there is not the slightest ill will toward any man engaged in the liquor business. In the nearly eight years that I have published the Gazette there has not been a line in the paper in criticism of the saloon keepers. The saloon business has been and still is a legalized business in Red Lake Falls and Red Lake county.

The problem that now confronts the people is one of far greater moment than any ordinary county option or prohibition issue.

I know this because I have been thinking, THINKING HARD for the past few weeks. I have HAD TO THINK. I, as a newspaper man, have subjected myself to the most rigid self-examination. I have said to myself, now put yourself in a neutral position on this option business and see where you get. The coming of the brewery people has brought you some extra business. Yes, that's right. Well, the people don't seem to be much concerned about it at present at least and—just let her slide. It's none of your business anyway. What! Baker, you're a grafter. Yes, sir, you, knowing what you know and believing what you believe, to take that position, you are a dirty grafter.

You see, there is no neutral ground in this situation. Occasionally a newspaper man finds himself in that position. A newspaper man has his code of honor just as does any other business or professional man. The cardinal principle is that he will not make deliberate misrepresentations to his readers on matters that vitally concern them no matter what the inducement or incentive. Occasionally it happens that to remain silent is the gravest of misrepresentations. The present is such a time.

So I am talking for a dry Red Lake county. There is no self-glorification in what I am saying or doing, nor any politics or selfish motive. If ever I did a square thing I am doing it now. If ever I did anything for Red Lake Falls I am doing it now. I am not boasting; I am humbling myself. I am just one humble voter talking to each other voter of the county who reads this. I wish you, sir, to consider this my personal appeal to you as a good citizen of the county.

I believe, and I HAVE TO SAY IT, that we are approaching a CRISIS in the history of Red Lake county and I wish each voter in the county to consider this a personal appeal to him to help save the situation. But why this seriousness you ask?

I will try to make it clear in a brief and simple statement and then ask you to think seriously about your duty as a good citizen.

Everybody knows about East Grand Forks—what East Grand Forks used to be. I ask the pardon of East Grand Forks people for saying this, but it has to be said.

But, you insist, nothing like that can happen to us—why, East Grand Forks is on the main line of railroad and Red Lake Falls in on a branch. But does being on a main line make a town good or bad. Oh, of course not. That can have nothing to do with it, can it?

What made East Grand Forks bad? Just this: the town was the dividing line between dry North Dakota and wet Minnesota.

East Grand Forks attracted more than other towns more remotely located, it is true, but remove all competition and leave only one wet town on a branch railroad and what have you got?

Now not only is all North Dakota dry but all of northwestern Minnesota as well.

And what is now the border line?

THE COUNTY LINE OF RED LAKE COUNTY.

That is something to think about, isn't it?

All of the border towns are now dry and here we are all alone—this little city and Red Lake county with its area of just twelve townships.

Looks like a serious proposition, doesn't it?

But, you say, Red Lake Falls is an orderly town. It certainly is and always has been.

Our situation is just in the making.

The toughs who infested the border towns have gone to warmer climes for the winter. They will be back in the spring.

If Red Lake county goes wet Feb. 28, the announcement of that result over the country will place our beautiful little city on the visiting list of those people who are properly described as the scum of the earth.

Was it Polk county people who filled the East Grand Forks jail and the county jail at Crookston to over flowing all summer? Certainly not.

Here is a situation that should command the thoughtful attention of every business man, every farmer, every thinking man in the county. The village of Plummer has no jail. Red Lake county has a nice little jail providing all jail facilities necessary under normal conditions, but that is all.

Shall the people of the county tax themselves to build a commodious jail and to pay the burden of expense in policing this little county against the ravages of the undesirables?

What for?—trouble and expense and—

For the privilege of falling heir to the conditions that brought the good names of East Grand Forks, Moorhead, Breckenridge and Barnesville into disrepute and from the odium of which those cities have been fortunate to have finally escaped.

How does it look to you, Mr. Farmer? Trouble and expense and nothing else, isn't it?

This is no ordinary prohibition election. It is a bigger proposition than that. Even the man opposed to prohibition under ordinary circumstances could with perfect consistency vote for a dry Red Lake County.

I wish to say that the liquor people are perfectly within their rights in ASKING that the people vote wet, but they should not expect the people to comply with the request.

If Red Lake county goes wet and conditions become bad, will I jump on the liquor people for that? Not on your life. They will not be to blame. In that case they will have complied with all requirements if they conduct orderly places. The responsibility will then belong to the public.

Between now and the 28th of February the situation is in the hands of the people of the county; after that no matter what happens it will be beyond their control for three years and a half.

I have not made this statement to precipitate a discussion. I believe that it is time for the people to be doing some thinking. I appeal to them to think seriously, to do their own thinking and their own voting. If ever there was a fight that is the people's fight this one in Red Lake county is it.

There is absolutely nothing personal in what I have had to say. The issue has been discussed as a public question and I hope the whole campaign may be free from personalities. I have no quarrel with the saloon and brewery people for seeking any advantage there may be for them. I only believe that the situation is such that it would be against the public interest to continue the licensing of saloons.

While I have not made this statement with the purpose of precipitating a discussion, it is only fair to say that those in charge of the "wet" campaign may, if they desire, have space in the paper for a signed communication in reply to this and they may have that same privilege of reply to any statement that may be made in the future. If there are any such communications they must be in the office early in the week so there may be ample time for composition and submission of proof sheets to the writers. Of course, everybody will understand that statements must be free from personalities or any other objectionable features.

Minnesota Politics

The Effect of the Primary Law Decision---Cummins and Wilson Are the Candidates of Republicans and Democrats, respectively, but all is not Harmony

By "The County Chairman"

St. Paul—(Special)—The much discussed Minnesota presidential preference primary law has been declared valid in a decision by the state supreme court, in which it disposed of a test case brought by Walter N. Carroll of Minneapolis. The opinion covers both the delegate and elector features of the law. Carroll recently sought to file as a Root candidate for delegate to the Republican national convention. Secretary of State Julius A. Schmahl refused to accept the filing on the ground that Root's name had not been filed as a candidate in Minnesota. The court upheld Schmahl, ruling that candidates for delegates cannot file until after Feb. 3, the last day on which the names of presidential candidates can be filed. Carroll then tried to file as a candidate for elector, with Root as his choice, and again was refused by Schmahl. The court again sustains Schmahl and points out that Mr. Carroll said in his electoral affidavit that Mr. Root was his choice for president. The court said no electoral candidate should attempt to add matters in his affidavit not required by law. The ruling of the court on what is said to be one of the most serious defects in the law seems to be in effect that the oath an elector is compelled to give that he will support the man nominated in the Minnesota primaries for president is not to be lived up to. That part of the affidavit is of doubtful application to an elector. But even if it does apply it means nothing more than what tradition demands of him while sitting in the electoral college after the general elections, says the court.

✣ ✣ ✣

While Senator Cummins of Iowa has a monopoly of the Republican presidential contest in Minnesota thus far, the fight for control on the Democratic side of the house is far more interesting. Among the unwashed it is a case of control, with several factions waging a bitter fight for the mastery. Though all are agreed on President Wilson, the rank and file are not satisfied with National Committeeman Fred B. Lynch, and his official goat is their principal aim. Showing the activity of the crowd who are opposing the Democratic leader an anti-Lynch bunch filed the first petition necessary to place the president's name on the ballot and followed it with numerous filings for district delegates and delegates at large. In every instance the candidate for delegate was an anti-Lynch man and several displayed their colors to the extent of so marking their filing papers. The regulars, who are the Lynch crowd, have their presidential petition in readiness, also a full set of delegates, and they will be filed shortly. Because of the unorganized condition of the opposition many predict a victory for the Lynch forces, but just the same the finish is going to be a close one. The fur is certain to fly.

✣ ✣ ✣

Should United States Senator Clapp seek a renewal of his Washington residency what party would he say he affiliated with last? An upstate paper asks that question, and it intimates that much depends upon the answer—for Senator Clapp. If it is not satisfactory this particular paper intimates the junior senator may have to explain to some one in authority. An idle threat undoubtedly to Senator Clapp and his friends, but perhaps they fail to appreciate the fact that all candidate filing papers where party is involved contain a blank line for the name of the party with which the candidate is affiliated and an affidavit to the effect that he supported and voted for a majority of its representatives at the last previous election. Inasmuch as the junior senator was an admitted "Bull Mooser" in the last campaign and made no concealment of the fact interest is naturally centered in how he will fill out this particular line in making out the required filing papers. I am betting that he writes in the word "Republican."

✣ ✣ ✣

Though I am still reluctant to accept the Eberhart senatorial withdrawal story, state capitol circles continue to peddle it out and Frank B. Kellogg senatorial stock is booming in consequence. Though without endorsement as far as Mr. Kellogg himself is concerned the senatorial candidacy of the St. Paul trust buster seems to be an accepted fact and quite a few of the country papers have tacked his flag to their masthead. Practically all the Twin City papers have endorsed him and taken the position that he will have to accept. Mr. Kellogg leaves shortly for an extended visit in the South and the progress of the campaign being waged in his interest by admiring friends will be watched with interest during his absence. No further statement is expected from Mr. Kellogg until his return.

✣ ✣ ✣

The rural press is sure kind to Governor Burnquist or else he has a press agent whose facilities for breaking into the country prints are beyond the ordinary. Though his excellency has done little in a copy making way since he assumed the reins of state the country press, irrespective of party affiliation or gubernatorial preference, has seen to it that all mention of him has been of the best and his every official act commended. From the standpoint of the opposition the governor's publicity campaign is being overplayed, but yours truly does not agree with them. Publicity is the life these days and there can not be too much of it, especially the kind the new governor is receiving.

✣ ✣ ✣

Because he is said to belong to a company which has aided in obtaining horses for the French government in Minnesota and elsewhere, Fred B. Lynch of St. Paul, national committeeman for Minnesota, has been asked to tender his resignation, according to a letter given out by C. A. Quist of Minneapolis, member of the presidential primary committee of Minnesota. Mr. Quist's letter asserts that supporters of President Wilson in all parts of the state have complained to him of Mr. Lynch's connection with the Western States' Trading company, holding that its action in aiding the French government to obtain horses is unneutral and directly in opposition to the president's proclamation of neutrality.

FRED B. LYNCH.

✣ ✣ ✣

Senator A. B. Cummins probably will deliver his only speech of the preconvention campaign in the Northwest on the evening of Feb. 12, when he will address a banquet of the Lincoln Republican club of St. Paul. Mr. Cummins has given up the idea of a campaign tour on account of the lack of a contest in Minnesota.

✣ ✣ ✣

Former Congressman Elmer J. Burkett of Lincoln, Neb., has extended his campaign for the Republican vice presidential nomination to Minnesota. He says that since twenty-two states west of the Mississippi river have never been represented on the national ticket, and yet in the main always have been Republican, it is time the West is given representation, preferably by nominating Elmer J. Burkett for vice president.

✣ ✣ ✣

Louis Loren Collins of Minneapolis, candidate for a day for the nomination for vice president of the United States on the Republican ticket, twenty-four hours after the petition had been filed asked Secretary of State Schmahl to keep his name off the ballot. A petition was filed by Guy V. Howard of Minneapolis as a joke.

✣ ✣ ✣

Two former congressmen may be factors in the Tenth congressional district this year. J. Adam Bede, who used to represent the Eighth district, and Frank M. Nye, who served the Fifth district for six years, both live in the Tenth now. Bede made a run for the congressional nomination two years ago that surprised the politicians, and is fond of demonstrating that he is not a dead one. Frank M. Nye has retired to a farm in Anoka county. He is now from the "country" end of the district, but one-half of its voters are in Hennepin county, his old constituency.

✣ ✣ ✣

There is a persistent rumor that the Republican gubernatorial lists will soon have another addition. James Manahan, who once tried to land the job of attorney general, is mentioned as the possibility. His filing would mean another Twin City candidate.

✣ ✣ ✣

Thomas Frankson, who lately entered the lists for lieutenant governor, has opened headquarters in the Pioneer building at St. Paul, with Sid Huntley, a pubilsher of Spring Valley, as manager. Frankson believes in publicity and if the voters of the state fail to find out who he is it will not be his fault.

✣ ✣ ✣

It is said that Charles Lindbergh of Little Falls, who has thrown his hat into the Republican gubernatorial ring, has put into circulation in the state 300,000 of his booklets entitled "Real Needs." Another edition is being printed.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dechane returned Monday morning to their home at Argyle, after having enjoyed a pleasant visit at the home of Mrs. Dechane's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cerney, 418 Markley avenue south.

Mrs. Henry Dunn and little child departed Tuesday evening for Minneapolis to make their future home. Mr. Dunn, who is employed in a cigar factory in that city, preceded them about two weeks ago in order to secure a residence.

Mrs. Edgar Bennett returned Tuesday evening from Eugalli, Wisconsin, where she had been visiting with friends and relatives since Christmas. She was joined at Minneapolis by Mr. Bennett, who had gone to that city to meet her.

C. O. Dosland, formerly employed as engineer by the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company, but now residing on a farm near Perley, Minn., spent Tuesday in the city attending the annual meeting of the stockholders of the above named firm.

H. W. Smith, who has been employed at the Charles Schwartz cigar factory for the past month, left last evening for Cloquet, Minn., to look that city over. Mr. Smith stated that he would probably open a cigar shop there if business prospects appeared bright.

Ernest Mayhew, employed in the mechanical department of the Times, left Monday evening for St. Paul to attend the Mid-Winter Sports Carnival. He will also be the guest of his brother, who is employed in one of the large department stores in Minneapolis.

George L. Austin, solicitor for the Minnesota Co-operative Dairy association of New York, was a business caller in the city on Tuesday. In the evening he was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Post. Mr. Austin and wife formerly resided at St. Hilaire, but are now living at Fergus Falls.

Dave Collins, who operated a photograph gallery here about sixteen years ago, but now located at Warroad, was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Burns the latter part of last week. Mr. Collins came down on Friday and returned Saturday morning.

The interior of the Dalquist millinery store, 211 Third street east, is undergoing a complete refinishing for the spring opening of the store. All the shelves and wood work are being painted white and the floor will be covered with linoleum. When completed, the store will present a very attractive appearance.

Miss Marie Caldwell, employed as stenographer at the office of the Thief River Valley Land company, left Friday afternoon for St. Cloud for a short visit with her sister, Calesta. She will later go to the Twin Cities, where she will be the guest of friends for a short time before returning to this city.

Ole Bakken, who has been visiting for the past two months at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Bakken, left Wednesday afternoon for Hinsdale, Montana, where he intends to file on some land. Previous to his arrival in this city he had been employed at Spokane, Washington for the past five years.

Edwin Alnes, a student in the high school, left last evening for Minneapolis on a pleasure trip. Later he will go to St. Cloud to visit the Smith farm, proceeding to Crookston to attend the Farm Crops show, where he and a number of other local high school boys have entered in the stock judging contest.

In order to make better time and owing to the heavy traffic, the morning flyer was run in two sections Monday. The first section was made up of Pullman sleepers, while the second train was composed of the regular day coaches. One of the oldest engineers on the Soo line occupied the cab of the latter train.

Miss Agnes Elg, who is attending the normal training department of the local high school, left Saturday morning for Goodridge and is teaching in one of the country schools near there this week. All students in the normal class are required to have at least one week of this practical training before they are permitted to graduate.

The following high school boys, who are members of Prof. Werner's class in animal husbandry, will leave Friday morning for St. Cloud to judge cattle on the famous Smith farm, then proceed to Crookston to be present at the stock judging contest to be held at the Farm Crops show: Herbert Hanson, Alfred Paulson, Rueben Teslow and Clarence Ringham.

The northbound passenger on the Great Northern was over five hours late Saturday, this being due to trains coming into Crookston behind time. The southbound passenger from Warroad came in on per schedule time, and was forced to run down the track and wait until the former train had unloaded and was ready to proceed northward.

Miss Agnes Aubol, who is a student in the normal department of the local high school, left Friday afternoon for her home near St. Hilaire to spend Saturday and Sunday visiting at the home of her parents. Miss Aubol is spending this week teaching in one of the country schools near that palace, it being compulsory this year that each normal student have one week of practical experience in some school.

H. W. Pratt, local agent for the Soo line, departed Saturday morning for an extended visit through the southern states. After spending a few days at Minneapolis and Chicago, he will proceed to Illinois, where he will be joined by his wife. From that point Mr. and Mrs. Pratt will journey to Florida to spend the winter. J. S. Collins is acting as agent during Mr. Pratt's absence.

Attorney J. J. Truax, 717-20 Plymouth building, Minneapolis, who spent the latter part of last week attending the session of the districe court, left Saturday afternoon for Roseau, where important legal matters demanded his attention. On Saturday Mr. Truax, who was attorney for H. E. Werner in a civil action against C. C. Elliot, was given judgment in the sum of $830 on the failure of the defendant to appear.

Fire Chief Paul Medderigh is in the receipt of an invitation from the Crookston fire department to attend a banquet to be given there for the old time members of the firemens tournament. There is a sum of $250 in the treasury of the old association at this time, and it has been decided upon to give a banquet to the old fire fighters in order to dispose of the money. The date for the event has not been set as yet.

John A. Carlson, bridge foreman of the Soo line on the Winnipeg division, left Tuesday evening for Gulfport, Mississippi and other southern points for a two weeks' vacation. While at Gulfport, Mr. Carlson will be a guest at the homes of Charles Evenson and Ben Christianson. On leaving, Mr. Carlson said: "I'm getting tired of this cold weather, so I think I'll go down where the cotton grows for a couple of weeks."

A. M. Arpin left Monday morning for Warroad after spending Sunday in the city with his family. Mr. Arpin is supervising the work of installing dredges to do the ditching work on No. 61. Two large dredges at Moose river are being transported across the country, a distance of forty miles, to a location just east of Salol. These two machines are the largest of their kind in Northern Minnesota and besides these several smaller machines will be used.

Street Commissioner Ostrem believes that snow is all right in its place, but that its place is not on the sidewalk, and has therefore had a large crew of men engaged in clearing the sidewalks throughout the city. In some places it was necessary to dig through several feet of snow before the cement walks were discovered. The improvement is well appreciated by pedistrians and adds greatly to the appearance of the city.

A monstrous "Russell" snow plow, the property of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway company, passed through here on Sunday afternoon bound for the snowed-in districts along the Wheatline. Two of these machines are now being used along this line but seem to relieve the situation very little. The only hope of opening the route, as expressed by railroad men, is in a thaw which will put a hard cover over the loose snow and thus prevent it from being blown into the large "cuts."

The high school basket ball team will leave Friday morning for Ada, where they will try conclusions in the evening with the high school quint of that city. The local boys are not over-confident as to the result, but express very little fear of suffering a defeat, even though they will play on a strange floor. Since Ada played here. Coach Johnson has put the boys through some strenuous practices, and no doubt will return with the long end of the score. On the return trip they will clash with the Crookston high school five Saturday evening.

Mrs. J. L. Rolland returned Friday morning from Erskine with her seven-year-old son, Lester, who was taken ill with an attack of pneumonia during a visit at the Hans Rolland home through the Christmas holidays. For a time the boy was considered seriously ill, and the news of his complete recovery will be gladly received by the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Rolland. Lester is a member of the first grade at the Central school, but will probably not be able to attend school before a week or two.

Rev. E. P. Savage, one of the district superintendents of the Children's Home society situated at St. Paul, spent last week in the city attending to business matters. While here Rev. Savage met one of the former inmates of the home, it being the first time since 1898. At that time he was a boy three years old, and was taken to the farm of John S. Nelson east of the city by Rev. Savage, where he has resided with his foster parents ever since. Rev. Savage stated that the Children's Home is doing some great work throughout the state of Minnesota and that there is plenty more to do.

In the first outside game of the season the Thief River Falls Booster bowling team was defeated by Red Lake Falls last Thursday evening. Red Lake Falls spilled 294 more maples than the locals and thereby won the contest. A large number of other followers of the game accompanied the team to furnish support. The Boosters are still in the lead by 412 pins, this being made possible when Red Lake Falls played here recently. Those on the team who made the trip are: R. Lyso, Jim Farr, Severt Brandon, Lewis Fensand, with W. Johnson and Glenn Farr as substitutes. Manager Roberts accompanied the local team.

Ole Lindblom, who resides on a farm west of St. Hilaire, was a business caller in the city on Monday. Mr. Lindblom has been generally known as the "strong man" in this county, but owing to recent illness and accidents his strength has decreased. Mr. Lindblom is reported to have "put one over" on a St. Hilaire implement dealer at one time when he came to town to purchase a wagon box. The implement dealer, who didn't know of his strength, said "If you carry that home it won't cost you anything." Lindblom retorted "that little thing?" and thereby picked the wagon box up and carried it to his farm about a half mile from the village. The dealer was out the wagon box.

A. L. Neurauter, who has been operating an electric supply house in East Grand Forks for the past two years, has decided to discontinue business there and has moved to this city, purchasing a half interest in the Electric Shop, forming a partnership with B. H. Michel. Mr. Neurauter is an experienced electrician and has attained much success in the electrical field. B. H. Michel, who came to this city some time ago, has also had much success along this line. The firm will be known as the Electric Shop, and will probably be located one door east of the postoffice in the building formerly occupied by Daniel Shaw and the Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway company. Mr. Neurauter's family will remain in East Grand Forks for the time being, but plan on moving to this city as soon as the new firm is established.

Having been aware of the short comings of medicine and surgery in treating diseases, I equipped my office years ago with the necessary apparatus for the carrying out of Nature Cure teachings in my practice, and below is a list of cases to show the results I have been able to obtain by so doing:

In the spring of 1913 I treated two cases (a man and a woman, both middle aged) for Chronic Articular Rheumatism of four and seven years standing, respectively, with complete relief in two and three weeks' treatments. In the early spring of 1913 I treated two young men and in the summer of 1914, another young man, all for Sciatic Rheumatism, for about two weeks each with complete relief and no signs of any return since in any of the cases.

I recall four cases of Pneumonia (two young men and two young ladies) where the disease was broken in 24 hours.

I have treated several cases of Eczema with curative results; but one case in particular that I treated in the fall of 1912 was that of a young lady with a very chronic type of the disease of several years standing, who after having tried all sorts of doctoring with no avail, was completely relieved under my care.

Several cases of Acute Rheumatism have been cured in the shortest possible time under my treatment. All sorts of skin and veneral diseases are\rapidly cured by Nature Cure Methods.

Any other disease, no matter of what nature, such as: Asthma, Bronchitis, Pulmonary Tuberculosis, Liver, Stomach, Bowel (including Appendicitis), Kidney, Nervous and generative organ troubles, as well as diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, etc., are best handled by Nature Cure Methods.

The most remarkable cure I have obtained is that of a young boy who, after, having been given up by two of the leading Thief River Falls physicians for Abdominal and Lung Tuberculosis, was cured by my methods four years ago and is well today. Since then I have relieved a girl for Tuberculosis of a Kidney by the same treatment and I have at present a boy under my care who was entirely crippled three years ago with Rheumatism and Hip and Ankle Tuberculosis in connection, but who is now progressing nicely toward recovery.

A Cut For A Cut

By ELLIS O. JONES.

EDWARD STACKHAM'S regret over starting home at the close of his brief vacation was sweetened by the thought that he was carrying with him the friendship, if not the incipient love, of Elizabeth Turner.

The last long stroll along the wide boardwalk the night before he left had assured him of that fact. Although it was late in the season, the night was comfortably warm. The girl at his side, the clear moon above, and the waves splashing almost at their very feet, made him think of stories he had read.

"Will you write to me?" he asked.

"Why, certainly," she replied, merrily. "At least, I'll promise to write," she added with a bewitching laugh, "but I'm not very good at writing letters. Mother is at me all the time to make me keep up my duty correspondence. But I love to get letters, and for that reason I always try to answer. Of course we'll be returning to the city soon ourselves, so there will not be much time to write letters."

"Most assuredly you may call. I shall feel dreadfully if you don't. You must come to see me often. It will be such fun to talk about the good times we've had."

Stackham reached the city just in time to get to the bank before it opened and take up his duties at the paying-teller's window. It was a hard day for him. "Blue Monday" is proclose of a vacation the blue deepens into indigo. Although he was sustained by the mental vision of Elizabeth Turner, he was not thereby assisted in his work, for certain times he caught himself dwelling, and in checking up at the close of the day's business he found that he had made a number of inexcusable errors.

After dinner he withdrew into the sanctity of his own boudoir to indite a long letter to her, which kept him up until long after midnight. In closing, he asked her to address him at the bank so that he would thus get it more quickly.

For several weeks, with perhaps lessening zeal, Stackham kept a close eye on the postman, but no answer came. Then one day he saw in the society column that she had returned to the city.

On the following evening he prepared his toilet withed, his toilet with great care and set out to call upon her. He approached the house with much trepidation. He had commenced by this time to feel uncertain in his mind as to whether or not she wanted to continue their acquaintance. But, when he came in front of the house, he saw upon the drawn shade the clear and unmistakable shadow of her profile cast by the lamp within.

Taking heart, he walked dignifiedly up the steps, rang the bell, asked the maid for Miss Turner, handed her his card, and sat down to wait in the reception-room, his heart beating a lively tattoo against his well-starched shirt-bosom.

When the maid returned and said that Miss Turner was not in, his spirits fell violently. He was deeply humiliated. His homeward journey was gloomy, but there was a sense of relief, for the growing certainty that it was, but a summer flirtation ofter all, was rapidly erasing the lingering vestiges of doubt.

He decided, under the circumstances, that he would not risk another call, but neverless he made it a point, in his stroll the following Sunday, to pass by her house.

As he was within a block of where she lived he saw her come down the steps and turn in his direction. He smoothed his gloves, adjusted his topcoat, straightened his tie, and tried to look unconcerned as the distance between them rapidly dimished.

He looked at her, and she looked directly at him. He waited for her, and she looked directly at him. He waited for her to speak, but she gave no sign or recognition. He passed on, rather more light-hearted than for many weeks, for all doubt had vanished. He dismissed the epiode from his mind, for Stackham was no mollycoddle.

The following week, while Stackham was busy counting out money at the paying-teller's window, he glanced up and his heart jumped to see Elizabeth Turner standing at the writing-desk. She was blotting a check which she had just endorsed.

In a flash the situation outlined it itself to him. She was not a customer of the bank, but through some irony of fate she had been given a check drawn on that particular institution, and she had come in to cash it. She had, perhaps, not thought of him at all. A diabolical idea entered his mind and hardened his heart. She stepped to the window and looked at him with a slight smile of recognition. He was not flattered. It was the patronizing smile of a superior to a subordinate, he thought. Accordingly the look that he returned, while courteous, gave no evidence that he had ever seen her before.

With a business air he took the check she handed him and examined it. "This check is all right, madam," he said, handing it back to her, "but you'll have to be identified. Do you know anyone in the bank?"

"Why, I——" she began, with a sickly attempt at a smile.

"Awfully sorry. One of our rules, you know," he added, as he turned attention to the next customer.

POULTRY

SHORT EGG SUPPLY.

Not Sufficient Care Taken In Weeding Out Hens.

If the subject were investigated I believe it would be found that the chief reason why on so many farms so few eggs are now produced is that not sufficient care has been taken in weeding out the old hens. These, though they may look well, will not lay in winter, and are unprofitable stock. There should on the farm be nothing but pullets and birds of last year; and these should not, if they exceed 50, be all kept together, but split up into different lots on different parts of the farm. Also give them their liberty; they are then more healthy, pick up a portion of their keep and save their owner's pocket. A sleeping-house, where they breathe pure air at night and are not overcrowded, is necessary for them; also some kind of shed or shelter where they can shelter on wet days. Fowls hate wet and wind and should always be provided with protection from them; but they do not always get it. A great many are out in wire runs in exposed fields at the winter with no shelter but an inadequate sleeping-house. Such birds catch colds, which often turn to roup, and very few winter eggs are produced by them. It is all very well to have a high standard of egg laying to aim at, but to say that fowls ought to produce 180 eggs each in a year is nonsense; when kept in lots of 40 or so the owner will be very lucky if he gets 140; and this is reckoning on a number of them laying from October and through the winter. Between what they ought to do, according to some writers, and what they really do there is a wide gulf, but it might be lessened if more care in selecting the birds and housing them were practiced.

Good to Know.

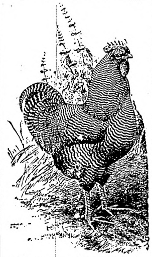
That hens will not lay if compelled to roost outdoors or, worse still, in damp and filthy houses, and that they must have good, wholesome food at regular hours, with fresh water and grit at all times.

That some kind of animal food is necessary for laying hens. If you cannot have ground green bone give bone meal or the refuse of slaughter houses, such as the livers, kidneys, blood, etc.

That roosting on high perches will cause the fowls to have bumble foot and that they are often permanently injured while being thus disabled.

That all good hens have already begun to lay, and that those which show no disposition to begin should be sent to the market at once.

A Popular Breed.



Farmous Barred Rock Winner.

Burn Sulphur.

There is no better way to purify the air of the poultry-house during hot weather than by burning sulphur.

It is usually better done during the afternoon, when the hens are no longer using the nests, and there is no danger of suffocating any of them.

Place a few tablespoonfuls of sulphur in an old pot or pan on the ground and set it on fire; close all the doors and windows, and let the fumes penetrate every crack and crevice.

Sulphur, kerosene and lime are the three most essential things to consider in keeping the surroundings in a healthy condition, and if they are persistently applied there will be but little chance for disease to get a start.

Handling Geese.

In handling geese they should always be taken by the neck, and when lifted from the ground the body should be turned with the back toward the person handling it. In that position it cannot strike, and will remain quiet and docile. The body can be partly supported by seizing the first joint of the wing with one hand. If the goose is held facing one, it will strike hard blows with its wings or scratch with its feet.

Don't let the drinking vessels in the poultry yard become foul. Clean every day.

Geese need pasture. Give them the run of a green field and they will thrive and make money for you.

The average price paid home patrons was 32.90.

The difference in price of high grade butter and the lower grades is getting wider every year. Therefore our aim ought to be, to better the quality of butter rather than to increase the quantity, and to do so it requires a better quality of cream.

HENRY HANSON, Secretary.

RARE COLLECTION OF ART WORK AT HIGH SCHOOL

Opening Held Yesterday Afternoon With Program in the Evening—Object is to Raise Funds to Buy Pictures

An exhibition of pictures is being held at the Lincoln high school for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of pictures for the walls of the public schools. The pictures were put on display for the first time yesterday afternoon and attracted large crowds. In the evening there was also a large attendance to view the pictures and listen to an excellent program rendered by the students of the high school.

This exhibition of pictures is one of more than ordinary interest. It consists of carbon photographs and engravings, loaned by the Elson Art Pub. Co., of Belmont, Mass. The collection is a large one and contains only the very best reproductions of the masterpieces of are of the different countries and periods. Nearly every gallery and country in the world would have to be visited to see the original pictures which are brought here together in one collection.

The collection comprises two hundred subjects which are brought here together in one collection.

The collection comprises two hundred subjects representing all the principal schools of art, including many reproductions of sculpture, architecture and important views from nature. The funds for purchasing such pictures, as well as an opportunity to make a selection from a very large number, is secured by means of the exhibition. NORTH STAR QUINT DEFEATED BY LOCALS

High School Team Beats Warren Collegians In Walk-Away Game-Score Is 31 To 11.

Picking up the thread of victory where they left off with the Ada game, the Thief River Falls high school basketball team strung another victory Saturday evening, when they took the North Star college five into camp, at Warren gym, 31 to 11.

The game was exceptionally fast, and the locals' teamwork was a complete surprise to the fans, considering the floor facilities. The local basket shooters lost no time in finding the wicker, and within a few seconds after the beginning of play, had counted a field basket, which sent them into the lead. They retained the lead throughout, and at no time did the Warren quint seriously threaten. When the first half ended the score stood 12 to 9 in favor of Thief River Falls.

The second half opened with the local team taking a more aggresive stand than ever, playing fast and furious. Warren succeeded in getting one basket during this half, while Thief River Falls scored nineteen.

For the locals Brown, Fasel and Conner were the luminaries of the evening. Philstrom starred for Warren.

The line-up:

T. R. Falls	Position	Warren
Brown	R. F.	Sinclair
Fasel	L. F.	Hennebry
Linde	C.	Philstrom
Schmitt	R. G.	Johnson
Conner	L. G.	Hodone

Substitutes—Hovie for Linde, second half; Stebbins for Schmitt, second half. Field baskets for Thief River Falls—Fasel, 4; Brown, 6; Linde, 2; Schmitt, 1; Conner, 1; Hovie, 1. Free throws—Fasel, 1. Field baskets for Warren—Philstrom, 4; Hennebry, 1. Free throws—Philstrom, 1.

His Testamentary Intent

Copyright Puck

"Realizing that all flesh is grass, and being possessed naturally of a mean disposition, the same having been considerably aggravated by the prods that, Fate, Luck and kin-folks have from time to time bestowed upon me," grimly grumped the Venerable Grouch. "I am contemplating making my will. I intend to build it piece by piece, adding, as they occur to me, such bits as promise to increase the complications of the document and augment the obfuscation of the beneficiaries. My first rough draft will probably read somewhat as follows:

" 'I, Timrod Totten, being of sound mind—in proof whereof I point with pride to the fact that, having noted with pain how such schemes usually work out, I have successfully resisted all attempts in the part of my loving relatives to bamboozle and cajole me into making over my property to them in return for the promise of a good nome and a tender coddling for the balance of my natural life—I give, bequeath, devise and fork over, to certain of my kinspeople, whose names I shall later fill into this document, whatever is left of my possessions after my various other bequests shall have been satisfied, and to their heirs, assign and-so-ons, to have, hold, grab and clutch, to use, squander, squabble and fight over, about and around, world without end, for all I care.

" 'To Mrs. Henrietta M. Peck, nee Medlicott, society leader, club-lady, and defender of the faith generally, who long ago firmly and thrice rejected my proposals of marrage, I bequeath the sum of three hundred dollars and my profoundest thanks; and to her husband, Henry Petty Peck, who cut me out, in return for which I then darkly thought of pushing him into a well, I give three hundred dollars and my warmest sympathy.

" 'To my second-cousin, Dorcas Stang, I leave the sum of two hundred dollars, providing that my funeral be held in and from her front-parlor, with the window-blinds flung wide open and the glad sunshine streaming in on the carpet, realizing the keeness of the long baffled yearn of the neighbors to invade the sanctity of that dank and clammy retreat, and believing that their pleasure will just about offset her pain.

" 'To the able editor of the Weekly Clarion I leave the sum of fifty dollars in consideration of the boon that he write as truthful an obituary of me as his long practice of journalism will permit, stating that I was not much better or worse than the average man, and on no account referring to me as 'the Hon.'

" 'I leave in trust the sum of fourteen hundred dollars, for the purpose of erecting on my lot, at the southwest corner of Main and Bayberry Streets, a stone monument, or shaft, sixteen feet tall, four feet square at the base, and of appropriate size at the top, and opposite to this monument and facing it, at a distance of twenty feet, another shaft of like material, height and dimensions, both as enduring expressions, of my sympathy for two of the most abused, even if mythical gentlemen that ever existed—who have been maligned, traduced, slandered and villified from antiquity clear down to now, and unmurmuringly endured it all.

"Erected to the Memory of John Doe, By his only Friend, Timrod Totten."

" 'As my executors I name my inveterate enemies, Laban Lattimer, Geo. W. Swank and Joel Judson, certain of their immovable honesty because of the fact that they have hated me as unswervingly for twenty-seven years as I have hated them. I select them as my executors because of the fun they will have with my heirs, and the fun I am now having in anticipation of the fun my heirs will have with my executors.'

"I intend to add from time to time other bequeaths and various codicils, with instructions to the lawyer to pepper them in where they will be the most effective, at the same time expressing my regret that I cannot be here to enjoy the sounds of deviltry by night which my last will and testament may be confidently expected to produce."

Tim P. Morgan.

THE LIMIT.

The car rushed merrily along through the country wilderness. The soft summer breezes tossed the clinging curls of the lovely maiden on the outside seat. Suddenly she bent her queenly head and her eyes fell for an instant on some passing object. She sat up, partly turned, and remarked with decided emphasis: "Well, that's the limit!"

At her words the young man seated close by looked about sharply. On his handsomely chiseled features there was a distinct expression of annoyance. Never had he heard his beautiful fiancee use any form of slang before.

"What limit?" he asked with just a touch of irony in his well-moulded voice.

"The fare limit," replied the beautiful girl. "It was so designated by a giant boulder which we passed but a short time since."

"Have your change ready," said the conductor. And the young man dug

FORMER THIEF RIVER BOY HOLD-UP VICTIM IN WEST

Raymond Hawkes, Jitney Bus Driver, is Badly Beaten by Highwaymen at Spokane, Washington

Thief River Falls people who are acquainted with Raymond Hawkes, who formerly made this city his home with his parents, will undoubtedly be interested in the following clipping from one of the Spokane, Washington, papers:

"After robbing the driver of a jitney bus two armed highwaymen disappeared with the vehicle at Jackson avenue and Belt street shortly after eight o'clock last night. The driver of the car, Raymond Hawkes, N2524 Cincinnati street, was left on the street with a bruise on the head, inflicted when he resisted robbery.

The highwaymen entered the car at Broadway and Cedar street. When at the end of the line they commanded Hawkes to throw up his hands. The blow was struck when he refused.

After being robbed of $1.50 Hawkes was forced to leave the car at the point of revolvers in the hands of both men and told to "beat it." He moved off a few paces. While a highwayman covered him with a weapon the other started the car. It was run westward on Jackson avenue and disappeared.

Hawkes entered another car, in which he was conveyed to Monroe street, where the police were informed. The other car was found at Lincoln street and Sinto avenue two hours later. A gold watch in Hawkes' pocket was overlooked by the highwaymen. The injury suffered by the driver is not serious."

Death of Mrs. Mary A. Smith.

The following taken from one of the Spokane, Wash., papers, relates the death of Mrs. Mary A. Smith, who left this city for the west about six years ago to make her home, and who was well known to many people here:

"The frequently expressed hope that she might attain the age of her mother was granted to Mrs. Mary A. Smith, who died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Hawkes, N2523 Cincinnati street. Her age was 84. Although frail of figure, she was active and retained all faculties up to the last."

"An enthusiast on temperance, she took part in the rally at the First Methodist Episcopal church three weeks ago Sunday. The next day she had a cold that developed into bronchitis, the tax of which her heart was unable to withstand."

"Mrs. Smith is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Hawkes and Mrs. Ellen Porter of this city, Mrs. Thomas Morton of Canada, Mrs. Luther Grasley of Michigan and Mrs. Frank Redmond of California; a son, George Emory, of St. Maries, Idaho, 31 grandchildren and 32 great-grandchildren. Coming from England when 11, she spent the greater part of her life in Canada, North Dakota, Minnesota and California, the last eight years in this city. She had been a member of the Methodist Episcapal church since 15. The body is at the home"

GOVERNMENT ISSUES NEW RULES TO AID TOURISTS

Clerk of Court H. E. Ives Receives Instructions For Guidance of Travelers in Foreign Parts

New instructions regarding the issuance of passports to persons contemplating journeys to beligerent countries have been received by Clerk of Court H. E. Ives. Extracts are as follows:

"In view of the regulations now in force in European countries, it is advisable that wives, children over nine years of age, and servants, should have separate passports, applied for in the same way as a passport for the head of the family.

"American citizens going direct to France from the United States are required to bear passports visaed by French diplomatic or consular officers in the United States. An application for a visa should be made to the French consulate in this country within the jurisdiction of which the applicant resides. The application should be made within three days before it is necessary to obtain a visa. An American citizen, who does not go direct to France, but sojourns in some other foreign country before visiting in France, should inquire of the American or French diplomatic representatives in such foreign countries concerning the special formalities which it will be necessary for him to fulfill before entering French territory.

"All persons entering the United Kingdom are required to register with the appropriate local authorities within twenty-eight days after arrival.

"The department has also been informed that rigid restrictions have been placed upon all travel between England and the continent of Europe. Admission to Belgium from Holland is understood to be practically forbidden to travelers from England.

"Russian regulations require that the passports must state definitely the names of the places in Russia which the holder expects to visit, and the object of his visit thereto.

"For further and more authentic information concerning restrictions upon travel in foreign countries, it is necessary to apply to diplomatic or consular representatives of those countries.

"The department of state cannot undertake to advise Americans as to the routes which they should follow in traveling abroad.

"Each application must be in the hands of the department of state, or its agent, at least five days before departure from the United States. (To comply with this rule, applications must be made at the Clerk of Court's office at least two weeks before departure.)

"The application must also be accompanied by three photographs of the applicant, on thin paper, unmounted, and not larger in size than three by three inches.

"A person born in the United States will be required to submit a birth certificate with his application.

"A naturalized citizen must tranmit his certificate of naturalization or a duly certified copy of the record thereof, with his application."

STATE GAME LAWS MAY STOP KILLING OF BEARS

Claim is Made That Animals Are in Danger of Extinction and That Steps For Protection Should be Taken

Fins, Feathers and Fur, the official organ of the Minnesota state game and fish commission has the following to say regarding the preservance of "old Bruin:"

"Although bears in Minnesota have heretofore always been classed as predatory animals, and the killing of them allowed at any time during the year, it is believed that they have now become so scarce that unless some measure is taken to protect them, they will eventually become entirely extinct. While it is charged in a number of the western states that bears are destructive to domestic stock, it is believed such cases are the exception and that as a rule these animals do not commit depredations on stock. This is concluded from the fact that depredations are as often committed in localities where these animals are scarce, as in localities where they are comparatively plentiful. In order to prevent these animals from becoming extinct, it is believed that a law should be passed prohibiting the hunting of bear except from September 15 to May 31. The number which any person may kill during any one season should be limited to two, provided that they may be killed at any time and in any number when they are committing depredations on domestic stock. With these restrictions bear will no doubt be able to hold their own, and there will at least be no danger of their becoming extinct."

Unclaimed Letters.

The following is a list of the unclaimed letters at the post office of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, for the week ending January 29, 1916. MORE MEN THAN WOMEN HAVE APPENDICITIS.

Surgeons state men are slightly more subject to appendicitis than women. Thief River Falls people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is surprising.—F. G. STEBBINS, Druggist.

TRAIN KILLS WOLVES.

The Soo line west bound passenger train ran over and killed two wolves Friday morning, about two miles east of this city. Several young men from this city walked out to the scene of the accident and brought the carcasses in and collected $15 in bounty from the county. The killing by the Soo netted the boys a neat sum of money.—Warren Sheaf.

It is inconvenient, at least, to haul hay continually from the stack to the barn during the winter months

The Silo saves a great amount of labor. You also have a most nutritious food, neatly and compactly stored close at hand, not mentioning the immense saving of feed.

A contrivance which pays for itself within a year by the amount of hay saved. Besides, by materially increasing the production of milk and beef, it proves its own worthiness.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over an heirloom, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the girl, Esther, reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther. Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so does his companion and cousin, Blair Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley. In stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem.

Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventuress, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Esther's being received in Fairfax society. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen demented. Marmaduke Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning Arthur is a fugitive, he seeks Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving for the west. Their train is robbed, Vivian losing the diamond, which a slain train robber drops in the desert. The $100,000 he stole is found by Arthur, now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment, and Esther is in Richmond society. Abe Bloom, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman. Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich, he buys Stanley Hall, sold at auction, through Blake, and also provides for Hagar and Esther. Luke Lovell buys the diamond, but loses it in a fight.

Vivian is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Esther to deliver to Arthur.

Blair joins Vivian in Los Angeles. Durand, "king of diamonds," a crook known to Vivian, goes to a saloon to try to discover the diamond. There he meets Luke Lovell. Esther and Arthur appear on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles in care of the physician-crook, Durand. Esther follows and is refused admittance to see him. In the meantime the diamond is found by two billposters, one of whom murders the other for it. Arthur is "doped" by Durand, De Vaux and Vivian.

Blair makes Arthur believe he suffered from hallucination in thinking he saw Esther. Luke is "railroaded" to prison by Blair. Arthur buys the diamond. Blair, trying to take the gem from Durand, who steals it from Arthur, hurls Durand from a window, killing him. Esther and Smythe return to Virginia, the girl rejoining Hagar at the sanitarium. The diamond is stolen by De Vaux, who assumes the name Lancia and hides with it. He is struck down and the diamond taken after Luke, aided by Quabba, escapes. Esther will not leave Hagar and takes her rightful place in society. Smythe examines an old parchment bearing Hagar's pedigree. The diamond is given by Luke to Esther, who will not keep it, but sends it back to Arthur. Hagar and Esther, rejoining the gypsies, travel westward. Arthur, repentant and informed of the treachery of Vivian and Blair, is about to take poison just as Luke breaks into his room.

CHAPTER LV.

A Romany Rye.

STRANGE irony of fate! The gem desired, the great jewel that from "a charm against harm" had come to be a curse, was grasped again by Luke Lovell's gypsy hands that, strong as they were, were never to hold it!

John Powell, sometime Arthur Stanley of Stanley Hall, born son of Hagar Harding, sat collapsed in his chair.

As Luke Lovell grasped the diamond the prayer of Hagar fluttered to the table. Luke growled and tore it from Arthur's resisting grasp, glanced at it and tossed it back in scorn.

"You live soft!" he sneered. "Live soft in your luxury while I have wandered like a hunted wolf in the wilds. But now I shall live soft, and you shall be my servant and my banker. First, you shall feed me!"

And Luke, placing the diamond again in his rags, sat down and bolted the food that had been brought the master of the house hours ago, but which that soul shattered wretch had not the heart to taste.

As in a daze, as in a dream, Arthur stood without hope and without fear. Without hope and without fear! Yes, he had reached the end of everything. The prayer of his mother had come home as a curse in this hour of his shame and humiliation.

He had been the sorrow and sacrifice of her young motherhood and the heartbreak of her maturity. Esther, whom he had despoiled of birthright and patrimony, her steadfast faith outraged at last, had left him in scorn and contempt.

Blair, for whose sake he had borne undeservedly the brand of Cain and by his flight from Virginia had accepted the onus of Blair's guilt for the murder of Dr. Lee—Blair, too, had been false and faithless to every trust!

Vivian? The scales had dropped from his eyes. She, too, was false, as she had always been.

Without fear and without hope! Crushed, dazed, the so called John Powell gazed at the poisoned glass of brandy with which he had stood to pledge a toast to death when Luke had burst in upon him.

Then his eyes turned upon Luke bolting his food like a ravenous animal.

"I look strange to you, huh?" said Luke, answering the look and speaking with a mouth full.

"They shaved me and they clipped me in the pen, where you and Blair Stanley sent me. The express slip was all the proof that was needed against the poor, ignorant gypsy.

"They shut me up like a rat in a trap from the light and air in a rotten prison for stealing the money that you stole, the money from the train robbery! Oh, I went back over all our tracks and I found the dead horse, and I found the empty cache. There were clews plain enough, when I got out of prison and went back.

"That stolen money you found in the desert was the start of your fortune, Mr. John Powell. The money was secretly repaid by you, but when they caught one of the poor robbers—as they thought—in me, they sent me to the pen.

"I don't look like I used to, do I? That's prison pallor that even the sun of the desert couldn't wholly take away.

"I'm thinner, too, but I'll fatten on you. I'll spare your life, for you are Hagar's son, but if I go to prison again you will go with me, for I have the proofs you found and used the stolen money, and I know you left Virginia as Arthur Stanley, accused of murder!

"Where is your so called cousin, your pal and fellow crook, Blair Stanley? Out with the fair lady, I suppose? He shall feed and clothe me and be my banker too.

"Durand, who helped you two railroad me to prison is dead, I hear. All fine gentlemen, eh, the whole of you! Well, I shall be a gentleman, too, a regular Romany Rye. You know what that means—it means gypsy gentleman. And now that I have fed, come and clothe me. Your flunkies are asleep, so you shall be my flunky! One Romany Rye as valet to another!"

Arthur Stood Without Hope and Without Fear.

And Luke rose from where he had gorged, and Arthur followed him without a word to his suit of rooms and wardrobe upstairs.

* * * * * * * *

The storm had passed; a few heavy drops fell from the leafage of the live oak and hissed as they died on the embers of the smoking ruins of Hagar's van.

Upon the ground Esther knelt, holding the head of the dying Hagar, for Hagar was dying, slowly dying.

Since their journey westward she had failed and faded, slowly but surely. Nothing but her deep love for Esther and her strong faith that she could reach her son in time and save him had held Hagar to life.

A harvest of heartaches through the years, sorrows and sacrifice had sapped her spirit and her physical strength. Only a sweet, complacent faith had sustained her.

But now the shock of the lightning stroke, the burning of the van and the exposure to the storm had hastened the passing of Hagar.

In their long journey westward, slowly but surely moving onward, they had reached within some twenty miles of Los Angeles and the end of their quest for Arthur.

Resolute in this great sorrow and calamity, Esther whispered to the ever helpful and loyal Quabba to mount one of the van horses and hurry back to the slower moving cavalcade of gypsies and bid them hasten. This Quabba did.

The caravan was not far behind them, for nearing Los Angeles Hagar had given orders to move through the night that they might camp the next day on the outskirts of the city that was their journey's end. Hearing Quabba's cries, the gypsies lashed their tired horses, and soon Hagar was in the loving care of the women of her tribe, with Esther always beside her, holding her hand and comforting the dying woman with a communion of silence.

On the outskirts of the town, driven from their open roadster to the shelter of a roadhouse by the rain, Blair and Vivian drank and reveled, little knowing John Powell waited opportunity in the departure of Luke to drink his toast to Death at his mansion in Los Angeles.

They drank and reveled while a score of miles away Hagar and Esther, hand in hand, waited for the end of time and the beginning of eternity for the elder of the twain.

Up the steps of the roadhouse piazza, scattering the last raindrops from his apparel, came Dick Jones. With him was a lady whom he addressed as Gert.

It was not the first roadhouse these late arrived joy riders had stopped at. Mr. Jones was thick of speech, flushed of face and unsteady of gait. The lady he called Gert was more seasoned. She was voicing the remark that she was as dry as a fish and hungry as a wolf.

At the sight of Blair Stanley Mr. Jones was somewhat abashed. But some recollection came to him that steadied him, and he greeted Blair with an assumed indifference. Blair gave the newcomers a surly, supercilious stare.

"Who are they?" asked Vivian.

"I don't know the blond female with him," replied Blair carelessly, "but the boozy gentleman is Dick Jones, who was our shipping clerk at the Good Hope Oil company offices—until I fired him for coming to work after being out the night before, as you see him now."

"You didn't fire yourself for that offense, or John Powell, the boss, I assume?" remarked Vivian sarcastically.

"No matter what I do the night before, my head is clear and my hands steady the next day," Blair answered.

"As for John Powell—my boss, as you call him—since he has taken to dope and flying machines we do not see him at the office. And that reminds me, I am sick of this whole business.

"I have got the money in my own name. I am tired of hanging on like a parasite to the poor boob until he dopes himself to death. When do we make a getaway?"

"When we get the diamond from the sky," replied Vivian. "I have set my heart and soul on having it. It must turn up again."

Nothing ever happens and everything happens. While Blair drank in gloomy silence and made no answer to Vivian's last remark, Jones, the tipsy ex-shipping clerk at the next table talked with the lady he called Gert.

Upon her ample bosom there hung a flashy lavalliere, suspended by a heavy chain. "Pretty nifty piece of junk, Gert!" said Jones. "But you should have seen the big diamond that John Powell got by express. It came in a sealed package, and our head clerk sent me up to Mr. Powell's house with it. He opened the package and nearly threw a fit, for there inside was a case and in that case was a letter that stung him hard, and with it was a chain and locket about 1,000 years old. And in that locket was a diamond as big as an English walnut.

"I think it was the same diamond that the circus guy gave the lady lion tamer. Then the lion killed the lady, and her husband, the clown, killed the circus guy and then shot himself.

"John Powell bought the diamond at the auction of the busted circus; then some gink stole it from him, and Powell got it back by express, just as I'm telling you. They say John Powell is crazy. He sure acted crazy when he read the note that came with the big sparkler. He give me $50 to keep my mouth shut about it.

"But I don't have to keep my mouth shut about anything for anybody, for all I got for the way I worked in his office was to be thrown out! Wait till I see Powell; I'll get my job back all right, and nobody won't stop me!"

BLAIR and Vivian had sat up as though electrified at the first words about the diamond they overheard. Now that the tipsy clerk had ceased speaking Blair stood beside him.

"You'll get your job back all right, Jones!" he said hoarsely. "Here's $50 from me. Tell me again about the diamond coming by express."

And the clerk repeated his story. Even while he was speaking Vivian had called the waiter to bring the bill and their auto wraps. Once in their great roadster Blair put on full speed through the night and cursed fervently.

"The cunning dope!" he cried. "Arthur has had the diamond safe and hidden from us right under our noses for six months!"

"How will we get it?" asked Vivian eagerly. "Don't pull any more rough stuff, Blair. There has been too much of that. It gets us nothing, not even the diamond."

"Leave that to me!" said Blair fiercely. "The time is ripe. We've got his money; Durand is dead; De Vaux was evidently paid his price and sent the diamond back. He has skipped far away and need not be reckoned with.

"John Powell is no good to himself or any one else; he is better dead. When he is dead I can tell who he really was, and the earldom in England will be mine. You will be a peeress, Vi."

"Get me the diamond from the sky first," answered Vivian.

With unerring judgment of value—
With a rush that swallowed up a record production in jig time—
The public took more than 50,000 of the $750 Overlands in six months.

In six months we've absorbed all the overhead; absorbed all the development expense; realized on all the experimental cost that is usually spread over a year.

We covered our material requirements at before-the-war prices—saved three and a half million dollars on aluminum and another million on steel.

We have increased our production capacity of 300 cars per day last June to 1,000 cars per day.

So again we have broken all records.

Again we have planned and bought material for a bigger production program.

And again we are setting a new and supreme standard of value—

You can now buy the big, roomy, comfortable, thirty-five horsepower Overland for $695.

Here is the value which has clearly dominated the automobile market for the last six months—now made even more clearly dominant.

Here is the car with a performance record never even approached by any car of its size ever built—fifty thousand in every day service.

And though the price is reduced the car is improved.

It has an up-to-the-minute power plant, en bloc type, developing full thirty-five horsepower. It has abundant power and speed and an exceptionally quick get-away.

The value is pre-eminent—unapproached.

We guarantee that the price for this model will never be lower.

But this price reduction is made in the face of a rising material market—we cannot guarantee that it will not be higher.

See the Overland dealer now—anticipate your requirement if need be—but make sure of your delivery now.

that," remarked Blair. "The diamond is hid[illegible] the house, and we will find it [illegible] Arthur Stanley, alias John Powell, is dead!"

As he spoke he stopped the machine, for they had reached the aviation field and the hangar where John Powell, amateur aeronaut, kept his latest toy, his aeroplane. Blair took a tire iron from the tool box, wrenched the hasp from the door and entered the hanger. "A file was on the work bench beneath the electric light Blair switched on. Just a little tampering with the stay brace wires, but sufficient.

Vivian asked no questions. But she shuddered. For the man who was to die had been in her arms and her caresses had beguiled him. But she must choose, and as between the masterful Blair and the weakling doomed to die there was but one choice—for with Arthur Stanley dead and Blair Stanley come into his heritage all would be hers, she knew.

* * * * * * *

In the luxurious chambers of John Powell Luke Lovell, gypsy and escaped convict, stands attired, if not in purple and fine linen, at least in fine linen and tailored clothes of a cut and texture as only millionaires, or at least the rich, may have, and around his neck hangs the diamond from the sky!

Arthur stood dumbly by. He had handed Luke the apparel in servile silence, the clothes, the fine kid boots, the snowy shirt and even English walking gloves.

Luke laughed as he gazed at his gloved hands and from them to his entire reflection in the cheval glass. "And now I am the Romany Rye for sure," he cried. "But where is my ring and my watch and my scarfpin? Why, here they are on the bureau. You are a careless valet, Powell.

"Suppose some ex-convict would walk right through my library window and come upstairs and coolly take them."

And Luke threw back his head and laughed again, for as he spoke he had taken the costly ring from the hand of the unresisting John Powell, removed his glove and put on the ring and replaced the glove, all with the mock actions of a dandy, such as Luke had seen in cheap vaudeville at some time.

He took the gold repeater and its diamond studded chain from the dressing table. He stuck the costly star sapphire pin from the cushion into the gay necktie he had selected.

Finding Arthur's monogrammed wallet, well filled with banknotes and some private papers, in the upper drawer of the dressing case, Luke had also taken it and remarked: "I'll have a bank account soon, but just at present I'll use the ready cash. And now, if you don't mind, for it is getting toward morning, I will leave you.

"No; I won't go out the front door," he remarked as they walked from the room and down the grand staircase in the silent mansion. "I'll go out the way I came in. It's good luck."

In the library Arthur sank again into the easy chair. Not one word had he spoken. He was ready to part with the blackmailer as he was ready to part with life itself—without fear and without hope.

At the thought his eyes fell upon the brandy glass, the poisoned chalice with which he was to drink his toast to Death.

Luke's eyes followed his. "Why, I declare," he cried, with an air of clumsy playfulness, "I actually forgot to take my brandy with my coffee!" He picked up the glass. "At parting," he said, "the Romany Rye drinks your good health!"

Arthur stirred as though to stop him. But he was without fear and without hope. This was destiny. What man may read the book of his fate? It was gypsy kismet that Luke and not he was to pledge the toast to Death.

Luke drained the brandy at a gulp, then licked his lips. "Queer stuff that!" he said. "Why, curse it, it burns like acid!" He looked at Hagar's son, and plain as words he read what was in the dark eyes of the other.

"It was a trap!" he shrieked. "D—n your grinning, treacherous face, it was a trap! A gypsy trick! You have poisoned me!"

And, reeling and cursing and grasping at himself as though to stay the agony that burned at his vitals, Luke staggered through the window low to the lawn and across the grass plot to the driveway at the back of the mansion.

And then a great glare of light played upon him like a mighty beam of incandescence, and with a rasping shriek from the electric horn Blair's heavy roadster tore around the corner of the great mansion and in a flash had struck the poisoned man, crushing in his face and leaving him a huddled, quivering mass in the roadway.

John Powell clutched at his heart. In the agony of the moment his soul seemed to leap from him as he peered from behind the window shade at this last tragic toll taking of Death, the guardian of the diamond from the sky!

There was a shriek from Vivian as the swift auto struck the poisoned man. Then a grinding of the brakes, the car stopped with a jerk, and Blair ran back to the quivering figure in the roadway.

Luke Lovell Stands Attired In Fine Clothes.

One glance at the crushed, disfigured face and Blair, in merciful pity strange to him, placed his coat over it to hide the dreadful sight. He bent down.

There was every evidence in the attire as to who it was. The wallet had fallen from the breast coat pocket of the dead man. Blair knew it.

He called for Vivian, and as she ran toward him he tore from the breast of the dead man the diamond from the sky, while the halted auto throbbed and panted as though it gloated at what it and Blair had done!

* * * * * * *

"A gypsy trick!" the dying man had cried. There were other gypsy tricks. John Powell was dead; with him should Arthur Stanley pass! The now nameless man ran to his room and hastily donned a heavy dark suit of clothes.

The cries of Vivian and Blair had roused the house, and the nameless man heard the half dressed servants rushing down the stairs and out by the front door to the back of the house.

Unseen, he passed to the library, and then, as they bore the corpse of him they thought John Powell to the front and into his mansion for the last time, the man who had been Arthur Stanley and John Powell slipped from the window, stole across the lawn and made his way through the murk before dawn to the hangar.

Bringing out the great, birdlike machine, he rose with it and climbed up the stairway of the wind and rode upon the wings of the morning!

Out to sea, far out! This was a death to die! But the wings of the morning wafted exaltation to his soul. He cast aside the husk of his degradation and turned and wheeled his distant flight—clear of mind and clean of soul again!

On the wings of the morning, and far below a gypsy caravan.

"Esther!" he thought. "Esther, my beloved, and Hagar, my dear mother!"

And then, on the wings of the morning, something snapped. Down, down, he plunged. He saw in the bright light of day that now filled the earth the gypsies swarming out, and he could discern the slight figure of Esther.

Then he felt the air rise up on either side as he sank down like a plummet. And so he went down, down—seeing, he believed, the outstretched arms and upturned face of Esther—without fear and without hope.

* * * * * * *

At the mansion of the late John Powell a wreath of flowers is on the door. The newspapers screech sensationally of his death and the strange story Blair has disclosed that the mad millionaire, who took poison and threw himself in the way of an onrushing automobile, was not John Powell, but Arthur Stanley, fugitive from justice in Virginia and heir to an English earldom and the diamond from the sky!

The Supposed Death of Arthur Stanley.

A gypsy hunchback riding to the dead man's house on a travel tired horse is told all this. He turns sadly away. How shall he take such a message to a dying mother?

Hungry Man (to man behind the counter)—Bottle of milk and graham crackers.

"Yes, sir. Want a bowl with it?"

"No; cut a hole in the stopper and I'll drink through it."

"Yes, sir. Have a spoon with it?"

"Oh, no. I always eat milk with a knife."

"Yes, sir. Spoon's safer, though. You're liable to cut yourself with a knife."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Points The Way

The Statement of This Pencer Resident Will Interest Our Readers.

Our neighboring town, Pencer, points the way in the words of one of its most respected residents:

Mrs. R. A. Hammond, Pencer, Minn., says: "For a long time, I was troubled by irregular action of my kidneys. I had a constant desire to pass the kidney secretions and had severe pains in my back and hips. I suffered from headaches and dizzy spells and felt miserable. One of my family had been benefited by Doan's Kidney Pills, so I tried them. They gave me relief at once. That was quite awhile ago and my health is now unusually good. I give all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hammond had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—J27-F3.

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS IN NEARBY TOWNS

TABOR HAS BIG FIRE.

A. Palya & Company's big general merchandise store building at Tabor was with its contents, destroyed by fire on Friday afternoon. The fire started at the back part of the store and spread so rapidly that practically nothing in the store was saved. A small part of the stock was stored in a small warehouse adjoining the store and part of the stock in the room was saved. As soon as it became evident that the fire could not be gotten under control Mr. Palya and his clerks diverted their energies to saving the mail and postoffice records and supplies which were in the store, Mr. Palya being the postmaster. All of these were saved. The loss of building and stock is estimated at about $5,000 upon which there was insurance to the amount of about $6,000.

Mr. Palya states that the postoffice and part of the stock hasbeen removed into a small building and the business will be continued in these temporary quarters until spring when the store will be rebuilt. Tabor is a little trading center in the northwestern part of Polk county and on account of the richness of the farming country the Tabor store did a thriving business. The store was started nineteen years ago as a farmer's co-operative store but after running as such for two or three years was purchased by A. Palya & Company, who have conducted the business ever since.—Warren Sheaf.

INSTALL FIRE APPARATUS.

The village council has had the small pumping engine installed in the fire hall with connections arranged from it to the outdoor pump so that water can be pumped into the reservoir without any danger of cold weather interfering with the engine. It works satisfactory and has been in operation considerable in the past week.—Middle River Pioneer.

BASE BALL BUG BUSY.

Very significant this, is it not? Warren has organized for professional baseball the coming season. Most of the old players will be back again and several new ones have been added to the team. Jack Walker has engaged with them to play second base. The secretary is in correspondence with Halbert whom they expect to string for the season. Their star pitcher will be Ira Boley who pitched with Winnipeg in 1914.—Argyle Banner.

DRUG STORE FOR GOODRIDGE.

Dr. H. B. Newell of Thief River Falls, arrived here Tuesday with a complete line of drugs and will open up a first class drug store in the Stephenson building. The work of installing the fixtures is now underway and in a very short time the store will open up for business.—Eleven Towns.

YOUNG FARMER KILLED.

Martin Ross, a young farmer who lived a short distance from Alvarado, met an accidental death last Monday when hauling a load of oats to town, when for some reason the load tipped over into the ditch on top of Mr. Ross. Some time afterwards neighbors discovered the load in the ditch and upon further investigation found the body of Mr. Ross under it, cold in death. He was a young man about twenty years old, and had come from Illinois and was newly married two years ago.—Lancaster Herald.

EXTRA PAY FOR "COP."

The village marshall at Ada has received a commission from the government as a special officer to look after the tilting of the Indian lid. Exercising his prorogative last week he apprehended a couple of Ada citizens who were returning from Red Lake Falls in the middle of the night with a stock of wet goods. As a result the aforesaid citizens are now awaiting the action of the federal grand jury and one of them is out a horse and cutter with all of the accessories that go with such an outfit in the middle of the winter.—Mahnomen Pioneer.

Now, that the Bray Fire Insurance company has held its annual meeting, we have been looking for a report of its financial standing, or a statement of some sort. So far, we have not been able to find anything of that kind. Now, do not take this as a criticism of neglect of duty of any of its officers. We assure this is not our intention; but as there are quite a number of policy holders unable to attend the annual meeting; your correspondent being one of them, we thought that a friendly suggestion to publish a statement would be considered by the respective officers. We do not believe the cost of publishing it in one or even two of our local papers would exceed the financial ability of the company. Besides it would show that the company is in existence and doing business. It would perhaps have an awakening effect on some of the non-policy holders. Now, if the company has in any way issued a statement as suggested above, nothwithstanding the fact that we have not seen it, we most heartily apologize.

TWO ARRESTED FOR LID-TILTING

Arnt Aule, Bowling Alley Proprietor, And Louis Fensand Nabbed by Police on Charge of Bootlegging

BOUND OVER TO JUNE TERM

Same Witness Appears Against Both the Accused Men—Released by Judge Tarrant on Bonds of $200 and $500 Respectively

Arnt Aule, bowling alley proprietor, and Louis Fensand, painter, were arrested last Saturday morning on the charge of "bootlegging." At a preliminary hearing given them in the afternoon they were bound over to the grand jury of the June term of court. Aule's bail was fixed at $500 and Fensand at $200.

Olaf Johnson, "squealer" and witness for the state, was arrested Friday evening by Patrolman Alexander after a brawl in one of the pool rooms, in which Arthur Williams suffered a badly chewed up finger. Johnson was taken to the jail and when asked by Patrolman Alexander where he had obtained the liquor, he stated the parties mentioned above. On Saturday he was taken into polce headquarters and there told the complete story to County Attorney Kjomme, City Attorney Quale and Chief of Police Berge.

On February 3, Johnson stated that he had met Fensand and asked him for some "booze." Fensand said he had some with him, and if he would go down to the building formerly occupied by the Stockholm saloon he would give him the whiskey. The two entered the building and walked to the rear of the room, Fensand then gave Johnson two pints of whisky and Johnson handed him $1.50.

On February 4, according to Johnson's story, he was again feeling dry, and asked Arnt Aule, proprietor of a local pool room, if he couldn't get him some whisky. Aule thought he could, and after a few minutes absence returned with two pints, charging him $1.50.

The case of Johnson, who was charged with being drunk, was dismissed in Municipal court.

The local authorities are keeping a vigilant watch and intend to enforce the law to its full extent. Judge Tarrant says: "No mercy will be shown to lawbreakers in this court and all will be dealt with to the full extent of the law"

The following taken from Section 3169 of the general statutes of Minnesota for 1913, states the penalty:

"UNLICENSED PLACE—Every person who, directly, by himself or by combining with others, shall keep an unlicensed drinking place, or in any way aid or abet in keeping any such place, shall for the first and second offenses be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty ($50) dollars nor more than one hundred ($100) dollars or imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty (30) lays nor more than ninety (90) days; and shall for every succeeding offense be guilty of a gross misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not less than one hundred fifty ($150) dollars nor more than one thousand ($1,000) dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail for less than ninety (90) days or more than one year."

"COMMON AND HABITUAL SELLING—PENALTY—Any person who shall in any one county of this state have been adjudged of the offense of selling, bartering or disposing of in any manner any spirituous, vinous fermented, malt or intoxicating liquor in a less quantity than 5 gallons without first having obtained license therefor agreeable to the provisions of the laws of this state, three or more times within two years immediately preceeding the commencement of the proceedings against him, under the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of the crime of "common and habitual liquor selling without license" and upon conviction of such crime of "common and habitual liquor selling without license" shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not to exceed 3 years.

Falls Into River.

W. H. Wikel accidentally fell into the icy waters of the Red Lake River at Squaw Point last Thursday afternoon, when the pike pole with which he was pushing a cake of floating ice, slipped from its position. Mr. Wikel succeeded in climbing out and then ran to his residence about twelve blocks away, drenched to the skin and with the murcury registering below zero. When the man reached home he was in a serious condition, being stiffened and chilled. Considerable trouble was experienced in discarding the clothes from his body, for the fact that they were frozen stiff. Mr. Wikel, who is employed by Axel Anderson in cutting ice at the Point, is now back on the job, after a short confinement to his home due to the cold plunge.

Hockey Games Scheduled.

The Thief River Falls hockey team will play their next game Friday evening, February 18, at 8 p. m. according to the schedule arranged by Manager Smith. However unless a sufficient number of tickets are sold before the game to insure expenses, the contest will be cancelled, so if Thief River Falls people hereafter wish to have the team play in this city, the games will have to be well attended.

On Sunday, February 20, the team will clash with the Crookston septet. A special train will be run to that city if a sufficient number of fans desire it. The regular fare will be charged, providing that seventy-five people make the trip. All those contemplating on making the trip are requested to register with Secretary Lincoln at the Commercial club at their earliest convenience.

Other games arranged for the balance of the season are:

Feb. 22—Roseau at Roseau.

Feb. 23.—Warroad at Warroad.

March 3-5.—Roseau at Thief River Falls. 2 games.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR Y. M. C. A. HERE

Two Representatives Go to Faribault to Attend State Convention—Plan Endorsed by Business Men

As announced in the Times two weeks ago, local enthusiasts are after a Y. M. C. A. branch for Thief River Falls. The idea has been thoroughly discussed by various organizations and a number of plans proposed to bring the proposition to a head, with the result that considerable enthusiasm has been aroused. The Commercial club, local banks and numerous business men have endorsed the undertaking which means that Thief River Falls is going after a Y. M. C. A. in a manner that will assure its establishment.

E. W. Peck, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., in a letter to W. A. Reynolds, president of the Brotherhood, gave assurance that the state organization would assist in every possible way in establishing a Y. M. C. A. at Thief River Falls. He also urged that two representatives be sent from this city to the state Y. M. C. A. convention at Faribault, where much valuable information could be secured as to the most feasible plans to follow in bringing about the desired results. Accordingly, W. A. Reynolds and David Gustafson were delegated to attend the convention. They left for Faribault tonight. They took with them numerous letters from the Commercial club, bankers, business men and local educators, all of which contained information sufficient to convince the state organization that Thief River Falls will give hearty and liberal support to the establishment of a Y. M. C. A. here.

An institution of this kind is just what is needed here and the return of Messrs. Reynolds and Gustafson from the state convention will be anxiously awaited so that something definite may be decided upon and the movement started at once. When the citizens of Thief River Falls set out to do anything of this kind their efforts usually meet with success. This instance will be no exception and it is safe to predict that a Y. M. C. A. will be established here in the very near future.

PRESIDENT VINCENT WILL CLOSE LYCEUM SEASON

Last Event on Present Season's Program to Have Head of University as the Principal Attraction

President George E. Vincent of the University of Minnesota, will be the speaker at the last number of the Lyceum course on February 16. The subject of his discourse will be: "The Mind of the Mob," and anyone who has heard the energetic head of Minnesota's university knows that there is a treat in store. President Vincent is regarded as one of the foremost lecturers and public speakers of the country and his appearance is invariably greeted by large gatherings of people from every walk of life. His subject on this occassion is one that should appeal to everyone at this particular time when calm and unimpassioned thinking and reasoning should govern rather than impulsive action. There has never been a dull sentence in one of President Vincent's addresses and it is safe to predict that this will prove no exception.

BASKET BALL TEAM WINS TWO SPIRITED CONTESTS

Ada Defeated Last Friday by Score of 26 to 16—Crookston is Easy Victim by Store of 21 to 10

Two more fast Red River Valley basketball teams were trampled upon by the local high school basket tossers last Friday and Saturday evenings. Friday evening the local five clashed with the Ada quint, defeating them by a score of 26 to 16 in a game that was bitterly fought. Ada played to win and when all hope was lost, the players began roughing it. On Saturday evening the boys again won handily by defeating Crookston in a fast game, 26 to 10.

In the Ada game the boys were spurred on by the individual playing of Holzknecht, who shot five pretty field goals from difficult positions. Throughout both of the games the locals out played their opponents and cracked off play after play with a precision that was remarkable, netting them baskets very frequently.

Points made during the Ada game were: Brown, 4; Conner, 4; Linde, 2; Holzknecht, 10; Conner made 2 points by free throws.

Points made during the Crookston game: Brown, 6; Conner, 10; Holzknecht, 2; Hovie, 2; Conner scored 6 by free throws.

PAY-UP SEASON FEBRUARY 21-26

Nation-Wide Movement Having For Its Object the Squaring of All Accounts Before the 26th of February

HOW MANY WILL $5 PAY?

Mayor Gamble and Commerciat Club to Find Out by Starting a Bill of This Denomination on Its Mission of Squaring Accounts

The people of Thief River Falls pay their debts perhaps as promptly and as willingly as those of any other community on earth. It is a fact, however, that no matter how well-intentioned a person may be, there are certain small obligations that escape attention, are forgotten or neglected or postponed. It is to secure a general settlement of matters of this kind that "pay-up" week has been instituted. In another column Mayor Gambell sets forth the reasons for urging this "pay-up" week, and similar proclamations have been issued by the heads of nearly every municipality in the country. If the request is generally heeded it will mean such a squaring up of old accounts as has never been witnessed since the days when Moses laid down for the ancient Isrealites the rule that everyone should start the new year free from debt.

Mayor Gambell and Secretary Lincoln of the Commercial club are going to try to find out just how many times a five dollar bill will pay a debt when started out on a round of the city with this sole object in view. A perfectly good greenback of this denomination was paid out by Mr. Lincoln today to a party to whom the club was indebted. The person receiving it will in turn hand it to a creditor, and in like manner the money will travel among the people until next Thursday when the person holding it is requested to turn it back to Mr. Lincoln and receive another bill in its stead. Everyone receiving this particular piece of money while on its mission of squaring accounts will be asked to place his or her name on a list attached to it, these names forming a record of its wanderings. It should be understood that the sum owed and for which this bill is tendered in liquidation need not be exactly five dollars. Should the debt be greater the bill may form a part of the sum paid, while if smaller the recepient will no doubt be glad to return any change coming on the transaction.

If anyone is indebted to you it is more than likely that this bill will show up in payment before the end of the week. By applying yourself real hard to the task you may be able to think of someone to whom you owe a trifling sum and will thus be able to keep the money traveling on its mission. The only thing that can check the successful career of the legal tender note will be its falling into the hands of someone who does not owe a cent in town, and somehow the originators of the scheme do not seem to think it will come to dead stop for the first day or two on this account.

BUSINESS AT CREAMERY INCREASES $500 WEEKLY

This is Record Made by Thief River Co-Operative Association During Year 1915 According to Report

The Thief River Co-Operative Creamery increased its business at an average rate of $500 every week during the year 1915, according to the report of Secretary Henry Hanson, submitted at the annual meeting of the stockholders on Monday. The affairs of the association were shown to be in excellent condition, and the outlook for the future better than at any time since the organization was organized.

The report shows that there were received during the year a total of 1,074,550 pounds of cream, 128,689 pounds of whole milk, and 146,520 pounds of skim milk, producing a total of 305,716 pounds of butterfat, of which a total of 279,163 pounds were manufactured into butter and 26,552 pounds sold in milk and cream disposed of to patrons. Of the butter manufactured 251,175 pounds were shipped to outside markets, the receipts from this source amounting to $467,523.61, while the sales locally were 94,714 pounds for which $26,722.79 was received. Besides this there were 2,214 pounds of butter sold to patrons of the creamery, this bringing $620.37. The receipts for milk sold totaled $2,908.14; for cream $10,399.56, and for buttermilk $790.59.

Among the larger items of outlay shown by the report are the following: Paid patrons, $92,811.61; freight, cartage and commissions on butter, $7,233.20; express on cream, $2,093.93; buttermaker's salary, $1,350; employees at creamery, $2,143.08; packages, etc., $1,283.44. For permanent improvements and new machinery there was expended during the year $1,983.44. There was a balance on hand on January 1, of $1,053.05.

In closing his report Secretary Hanson calls attention to the fact that the difference in price between the higher and lower grades of butter is yearly growing wider, and urges the patrons of the creamery to strive more for quality and less for quantity of product. The average test of cream for the year was 27.99, and that of milk 3.8, and this, the secretary thinks, could be very much improved by weeding out the poorer cows and breeding toward a finer type of dairy animal.

Taken as a whole the report must prove highly satisfactory to the stockholders and patrons of the creamery. The result during the past year shows that fewer farmers are devoting their time to the manufacture of dairy butter, having rightly reached the conclusion that the most profitable and satisfactory way in which to handle the product from their cows is to take it to the creamery.

SECOND CONCERT VERY ENJOYABLE

Band Shows Steady Improvement Under Direction of New Leader—Songs and Instrumental Solos Features

A fair sized audience greeted the Thief River Falls Concert band at the second of its popular concerts given at the Auditorium on Friday evening. The entertainment was worthy of a much larger attendance, and it is to be ..oped that future affairs of this character will fare better in this respect. The band, under the leadership of Joe Greenfield, is showing steady improvement, and it is without question the best organization of its kind in this section of the state at this time. Every member is as enthusiastic as is the leader, and nothing but a lack of appreciation on the part of the people of the city can prevent a most successful future.

There were seven selections by the entire band, and all were well handled. The clarinet duet by Messrs. Loken and Nelson proved one of the most pleasing numbers on the program, while the trombone solo by Mr. Gaslin and the melophone trio by Messrs. Hermanson, Johnson and Smith were well rendered and received with much approval. A cello solo by C. B. Crandall, a member of the Princess orchestra, with piano accompaniment by Miss Strupp, was perhaps the most popular number on the program, the audience showing its unmistakable approval of the artistic rendition of the selection. Two vocal solos, "In Old Madrid," by J. Dickey, and "Perfect Day," by Chase Mix, the latter accompanied by Mr. Crandall and Miss Strupp, added variety to the excellent program and were in themselves features of the highest merit. The closing number was an overature, "Around the World," giving the national airs of the countries now at war in Europe, winding up with "The Star Spangled Banner," the entire audience remaining standing during the playing of this last air.

THIEF RIVER HOCKEY TEAM NORTHWEST CHAMPIONS

Locals Battled Through Rough and Fast Games and Entered Final Contest With Players in Bruised and Battered Condition

HARDEST GAME WAS WITH TWO HARBORS

Members of Team Were Guests of Honor at Commercial Club Supper Tuesday Night---Manager G. Howard Smith Tells of Games and Incidents During Eventful Trip

The Thief River Falls Hockey team landed the championship of the Northwest at the Mid-Winter Sports Carnival in St. Paul last week. Saturday afternoon the locals lined up against the fast Olympia aggregation with a badly bruised and battered team but the fighting spirit was still there and the "spirit" proved to be sufficient for when the spirited contest ended the score sheet showed that the elusive puck had been shot through the Olympia's goal five times while it never got past Bennett at the local's goal.

The first game that the Thief River Falls team drew was with the Universals of Duluth but the head of the lakes team failed to appear and the game was declared forfeited to Thief River Falls. The St. Paul Builders' association team came next and they went down to defeat by the score of 4 to 1. On the following day the fastest game of the series was played when the locals and Two Harbors clashed, Thief River Falls coming out of the battle with the long end of the score. In a like manner the Harrietts of Minneapolis were taken into camp and then came the final game with the Olympias that decided the championship.

It was a great victory, a great ad for Thief River Falls and Northwestern Minnesota. Hockey is a new sport in this city and few fans dared to hope that the local ice artists would return from St. Paul with the cup. All knew that the boys would play the game from start to finish but few would chance a bet that they would down team after team as they did. But few games have been played here this winter and it was hardly expected that a championship team could be rounded into shape in such a short time. The boys turned the trick though and now Thief River Falls can boast of being the home of the champion amatuer hockey players of the Northwest.

The following appeared in the St. Paul Daily News last Saturday after the locals had won the final game:

"Jan. 9, 1916, Thief River Falls saw its first hockey game and the Thief River Falls seven played its first contest. Before this the people of the little northern city were not crazy about the Canadian sport because they didn't know its thrills."

"Today Thief River Falls is wild about hockey, for their team has captured first honors in the Northwestern Hockey Tournament held at Harriet Island, over the best junior teams in the state. Playing four games in as many days and scoring 19 points to their opponents two they had little trouble in landing the carnival trophy and are now state champions."

Two Wins Stirs City.

"After the team had won a couple of contests from nearby towns the business men of the town decided to send them to the tournament but did not expect them to win high honors."

"On the first day they shut out the Builders' exchange seven and Thief River Falls folks thought it was an accident, but on the second day they beat the fast Two Harbors seven, which was expected to run away with the meat and Thief River Falls commenced to sit up and take notice."

"When they won from the Harriets of Minneapolis, 8 to 1, telegrams of congratulation began to pour into St. Paul, to Manager Howard Smith and members of the team, and their victory over the Olympias for the championship was the occasion of a celebration that will not be forgotten for a long time on the banks of Thief River."

"Monday the boys will return home to be met by a brass band, a parade and an address of welcome by the mayor."

"Howard Smith, manager, is an old St. Paul boy and former hockey star as is also Dave Backus, center. Smith is not playing, but has helped teach the fine points of the game."

In the following interesting article Manager G. Howard Smith tells of the games and a few interesting experiences:

The Final Games.

The game with the Minneapolis Harriets, a team that is composed of players that have played the game all the way from twelve to twenty-four years, was, although not the hardest game, the cleanest and displayed more classy hockey than any other contest. The Minneapolis team is composed of gentlemen and true sportsmen and although they believe in hard aggressive hockey, they are not exponents of dirty playing and it is a great pleasure to get on the ice with such a team. The Harriet team is noted for its speed and its combination playing and being met by real hockey, the prowess of the Thief River Falls team showed at its best and the back checking had deadly effect. The work of Bennett in the goal was uncanny and could not help but get on the nerves of the opposing players. It was a source of inspiring great confidence in his own men and no man is more responsible for the winning of the cup than Ralph Bennett.

The Thief River Falls scores were made as follows:

Hagen	3
Rice	2
Fljozdal	2
Backus	1

The Olympia game was won by Thief River Falls by a score of 5 to 0, the Thief River Falls team having scored 6 goals, one of them being disallowed. In entering this game Thief River Falls put on the ice a team that was badly battered, having gone through three grilling contests, Hagen going on the ice with a broken thumb and Rice with a large gash in his shoulder. The scores made were as follows:

Fljozdal	2
Hagen	1
Rice	1
Backus	1

Later Backus made another score and it was disallowed. In this game, as in all the others, Fljozdal played his position near the goal and made score after score on passes from Dave Backus. Backus and Henry Hagen were the principal forwarders. Dave Backus made dash after dash down at points. Rice at all times played a consistent and heady game and his shots were from very difficult angles that he played out of his regular position. The consistent play of Wm. Devenny, captain of the team, cannot be described because he put up a deadly defense and inspired the greatest confidence in his players. Although playing a consistent and deadly game of defense throughout the entire games of the series, Sabin Durham, after the dirty tactics of the Olympia team had laid out Devenny, caused additional injury to the shoulder of Rice, had its effect upon Fljozdal and put David Backus out of condition for fast work, for thirty minutes stopped rush after rush of the Olympia team, checking the forward line and taking away the punk and advancing it down the points. His work in holding down this fast team should never be forgotten by the Thief River Falls fans.

No individual star can be picked in this aggregation, as all were stars. Welch, who was compelled to return to Thief River Falls to answer a subpoena as witness, was sorely missed when the boys were badly battered, as he played a heady and consistent game while in St. Paul and deserves his share of the credit as he was with us at heart if not in person. Earl Campbell, the regular point, owing to the fact that he was sent to North Dakota by the Soo line and was unable to participate. He is one of the most disappointed persons in Thief River Falls and all the boys sympathize with him heartily, as we know that if he had been with us that he would have done his share. Earl should not be forgotten as his play helped us in winning former victories and placed the team where it was when it was recognized by the Mid-Winter Sports Carnival.

G. HOWARD SMITH,
Manager Thief River Falls
Hockey Team.

SCHOOL NOTES

Mr. Werner and his team of boys from the agricultural class, consisting of Herbert Hanson, Rueben Teslow, Alfred Paulson, Arthur Alnes and Clarence Ringham, succeeded in winning a handsome silver cup against competition from other high schools of the Valley at Crookston this week. The boys are deserving of great credit and are entitled to rank as competent judges of live stock in view of their experiences.

The basketball team defeated Ada last Friday evening and Crookston Saturday evening and will take on McIntosh on the home floor Friday evening of this week. The Ada crowd and management made anything but a sportsmanlike exhibition when they found they were doomed to defeat. The Friday evening game with McIntosh probably decides the district championship and will be worth going a long way to see.

The Elson Art exhibit of pictures was shipped to Bemidji last Monday. The following amounts were collected by the various schools at the entertainments last week: Washington, $44.05; Knox, $37.40; Central, $52.50; Lincoln, $35. These amounts, less a small expense, will be invested in pictures for the school buildings. The exhibit involved considerable work, but netted the schools a handsome return in art education and in school room adornment of a high character.

A teachers' meeting was held at the Lincoln Wednesday evening. Various matters of school administration were discussed.

Miss Schrepel has taken a leave of absence of one month in order to recuperate her health. Mrs. Doland is filling the vacancy temporarily until a permanent substitute can be secured.

An extra teacher is being secured to assist the Misses Sires and Paine in the Knox. The rooms taught by these young ladies enroll exactly 100 pupils, who are in attendance practically every day. The new teacher will not be given a room, as none can be secured on the East side, but will carry on classes on what is known as the Batavia plan. This is merely another indication of the extremely crowded condition of the local schools.

State Superintendent Schulz has called a conference of the county and some of the city superintendents of the northwestern and north central parts of the state at Bemidji next Wednesday.

Answer to "Times Correspondent" From R. F. D. No. 1.

In the last issue of the Times the correspondent from Route No. 1 states that the Bray Mutual Fire Insurance company has now held its annual meeting but so far he has not seen an announcement of the company's financial standing.

In reply to this I will say that the financial statement of the above company was printed in the St. Hilaire Spectator on the 13th of January, 1916. The company has always had its statement printed at the end of each year and if the correspondent sends his name to me I will cheerfully send him a copy of the statement such as we have to send to the state department at the end of each year, as we are anxious to have each and every member of the company know what we are doing.

The correspondent states that if the statement was published in a couple of papers it would serve to awaken the non-policy holders, and that is true enough, but we would like to know of something also that would wake up the actual policy-holders so that they would realize that they are members of a company that is growing very rapidly and needs their attention.

The company has an insured valuation of a million and three-quarters which is held by about 1,000 members.

Of these 1,000 members a mere handful attend the meeting each year, some are excused on account of the long ways they would have to travel in order to get to the meeting but that is not true in the majority of cases.

At every meeting there are things which are brought up for discussion which ought to interest every member but owing to the smallness of the crowd present it is hard to make any new by-laws or change of the old ones as it is often necessary to do. If larger crowds attended the meeting there would be more of a discussion concerning the different things brought before the meeting, different ideas would be given and the best could be retained, or enacted into bylaws.

We do not feel "sore" at the correspondent for his article in last issue, as he mentions something about apologizing. We are instead glad to see that he is interested enough to ask questions about matters which ought to interest him and others also. The correspondent's suggestion about giving the financial statement wider publicity may be adopted next year.

John O. Swanson,
Secretary.

Adams Still Snowbound.

The Wheatline passenger, running between this city and Kenmare, N. D., which has been compelled to turn around on reaching Adams, N. D., for some time past, owing to the heavy snowstorms, ventured out a trifle further Saturday morning. The train succeeded in reaching Ecklund and then turned around, coming into Thief River Falls early Sunday morning. Every effort to open up the road through to Kenmare has proven unsuccessful and citizens in that part of the state are in danger of starvation and freezing. Frantic appeals for aid have been sent out by the mayor. Two huge snow plows sent to open up a path are stuck in the drifts, and other cities are trying to adopt means to get aid to the snowbound villages.

Holiday Service.

Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12th, being a holiday, the general delivery and register windows will be open from 9 to 12 m. No money order or postal savings business will be transacted. City carriers will make one morning delivery. Rural and Star route patrons will be served as usual. All mails will be received and dispatched as usual. John Morgan, postmaster.

Abraham Lincoln said:

"Teach economy--that is one of the first and highest virtues. It begins with saving money."

Mr. Lincoln realized that for a country to become great, each individual must become thrifty. At no time has it been more true than at present.

This generation and the next must learn the value of economic handling of finances if our country is to remain THE GREAT, and to test by practice the value of check account as means of economizing, is your duty to yourself and to your country.

THIEF RIVER FALLS ASTONISHED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE.

Thief River Falls people are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL removes such surprising foul matter it relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. F. G. Stebbins, druggist.

CLEVER CROOK IS CAPTURED HERE

Posing as Crippled Beggar He Visits Office of Red Lake Elevator Company and Steals Fountain Pen

With instructions to arrest a short man with pit marks on his nose, who had been soliciting funds throughout the city last Thursday and who had stolen a valuable fountain pen at Joe Johnson's office at the Red Lake elevator, Captain of Police E. O. Erickson set out last Thursday evening in search of the man. He had been on the trail a very short time before he said, "Stop Thief."

While searching for the crook Erickson stepped into the Martin Benson grocery store on Main avenue and while there a man with a crippled hand entered the store. Upon close observation the policeman noticed the pit marks on his nose and other features as per description furnished him by Joe Johnson. The policeman went through all his pockets to find the lost pen but nothing could be found. By accidentally running his hand down the man's back, the captain struck something rather hard and upon investigation found the pen tied with a string to the man's underwear. He was then placed under arrest, giving his name as Geo. Clark, and spent the night in the Municipal rest room. In the morning he was told in good, plain police English to leave the city as fast as possible via the "cinder route," to avoid any expense upon the city, and he left immediately.

The man was aware of the rule governing solicitors and had appeared at the Commercial club on Thursday, applying for the right, which was granted to him.

Charles J. Krause, 707 Arnold avenue north, Thief River Falls, says: "I was bothered for quite awhile by pains in my back. When I lifted anything, a sharp twinge was sure to catch me across my loins and make it hard for me to straighten up. Mornings, my back was very painful and I knew well enough that the trouble was all due to my kidneys, as the kidney secretions were unnatural. I think it was the strain of heavy lifting that affected my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills removed the trouble and I haven't had a return of it."

Attorney A. A. Miller returned Friday afternoon to his home at Crookston, after having attended the district court. Mr. Miller was attorney for the defense in the case of F. D. Brandenburg vs. Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway company. While here he was the guest at the home of his son, Harold Miller.

The Winnipeg-Minneapolis flyer was delayed over four hours and twenty minutes on Monday morning, caused by a wrecked snow train at Glenwood. A large crew worked for several hours clearing the tracks before any trains could pass. The flyer is due here at 2:38 a. m. and arrived shortly before 7 o'clock.

Miss Mamie Wiener, who has been visiting at the home of her parents on a farm east of the city since Christmas, returned to Greenbush Saturday to resume her duties in the public schools. Miss Wiener graduated from the local high school with the class of 1915.

Morris Robbecke left Friday morning for Mahnomen to fill the position of warehouseman during the absence of the regular man. He came up from that village Saturday evening to spend Sunday at the home of his mother, Mrs. C. A. Robbecke, 237 Kendall avenue north.

Shoveling snow from the Soo yards onto flat cars and hauling it to the railroad bridge, where it was dumped onto the river, kept a large crew of men busy the first of the week. The heavy snow storms of late have completely filled the railroad yards and made switching a difficult task. Many train loads were hauled to clear the yards of the "beautiful."

H. W. Smith, who has been employed at the Charles Schwartz cigar factory for some time rolling the famous "Thief River Booster," left yesterday afternoon for Cloquet, where he will open a cigar shop. Mr. Smith made a trip to that city a short time ago and was very much impressed with its size and possibilities. He was accompanied by his wife to their new home.

A. J. Berg, bridge foreman on the Kenmare-Thief River Falls line, returned to the city last Saturday evening from Adams, N. D. Mr. Berg stated that his crew was "tied-up" at that station on account of the heavy snow. In some places the snow was four feet higher than the coaches, fully equaling the record set during the winter of 1907. The crew will resume their duties as soon as the line is re-opened.

The civics class of the high school, instructed by Miss Rilla Palmer, attended the district court the latter part of last week in a body. The class is just taking up the study of the steps in a trial and went there to see how it actually appeared instead of forming a conclusion from their imagination. Each student took down notes as the trial progressed and were required to write a story on the case.

Clifford Rice, a member of the champion hockey team, returned yesterday morning from Minneapolis, where he had been a guest at the home of his parents since Saturday, when the hockey tournament ended at St. Paul. Mr. Rice was injured during the last game by being struck with a skate on the shoulder and received a very severe gash. Nevertheless he continued to play after bandages and a hard leather covering were placed over the wound.

Messrs. C. W. McDaniel, John Bordewick, A. McGilvery and W. H. Fredericks have completed the removing of the grains and grasses from the fire department's room in the Auditorium to the Commercial club rooms, where they have been very neatly arranged on display. Besides making the room very attractive, considerable advertising will be obtained from the display for the fact that many strangers from different parts of the country visit the club rooms while in the city.

The senior class of the high school will present a class play at the Auditorium this year. The production has not been selected as yet, but the class officers state that the choice will be made soon and practice will begin. The class is also issuing an annual which has been named "The Prowler." This is the first class to graduate from the high school that has undertaken the task of publishing an annual and staging a play, and they will undoubtedly set a pace that will be hard to beat by succeeding classes.

Alex Welsh, who accompanied the hockey team to St. Paul last week and participated in two of the games played, was called back to this city last Friday, answering the summons of the district court to appear as witness in the Sterns—Olson case. Mr. Welsh had expected to return in the evening to St. Paul, to take part in the remainder of the games, but was prevented from doing so, for the fact that the case was continued over to Saturday. He stated that much enthusiasm was shown in the Winter-Sports Carnival at St. Paul and it was such a success that it was decided to make it an annual affair. The slogan was to make the Mid-Winter Sports Carnival to St. Paul what Madri Gras is to New Orleans. No celebration ever attempted in the state was met with such a volley of united co-operation as this ten day meet.

The fire department was called out shortly after eight o'clock Tuesday evening in response to a call sent in from the Philip Amon residence, 113 LaBree avenue south, where a lamp had exploded, setting the kitchen in flames. The department made a hurried run to the scene and succeeded in quenching the flames before a large amount of damage was done. The walls and floor of the kitchen were badly scorched and it would probably have resulted in a very serious fire if it had not been checked in due time. The loss is well covered by insurance.

R. J. McGinn, vice president of the Thief River Valley Land company, returned the latter part of last week from St. Paul, where he had spent a few days on a business mission. "Bob" was an enthusiastic rooter for the Thief River Falls hockey team on Saturday, when they carried off the Northwest championship at St. Paul. Mr. McGinn was accompanied on the return trip Saturday by Captain of the hockey team, Wm. Devenny, who was badly injured in the afternoon's game.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Estling of Greenbush, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Robertson the first of the week, being enroute to their home after a visit with relatives and friends at Lacquiparle, Minn. Mr. Estling, who resides on a farm near Greenbush, has procured two husky wolf hounds, which he will use in protecting his large herd of sheep against the wolves. He has succeeded in shooting several of the animals and expects to bag a larger number now with the aid of the hounds.

Miss Velma Price, who defeated representatives from Warroad and Red Lake Falls in a declamation contest held at the high school last week, left Monday afternoon for Crookston, where she participated in the declamation contest held at the Farm Crops show in the evening. Although she did not win the cup, she came very close. Miss Price was bothered somewhat during the reading of her story by a cough and the clearness of her voice was hampered. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. F. Price.

Contractor Isaak Helseth returned Saturday morning from Alexandria, where he was present at the opening of bids for bridge construction. The Northern Construction company, represented by Mr. Helseth, was awarded the contract for the building of the bridges, and the work is expected to begin soon. Mr. Helseth said that in reaching this city, he had spent two days more than necessary on the road, having failed to make connections at various points, this being due to trains being delayed by the heavy snowstorms and cold weather.

During the past week two marriages were performed at the parsonage of the Norwegian Lutheran church, Rev. I. T. Aastad, officiating. The first marriage was that of Otto Mayer of Clearwater county to Miss Inga Hill of Grand Forks. They were accompanied by Harry Wiesner and Miss Olga Steen. They will make their home at Bagley. The second marriage was that of Charles Dickens to Mable Skjorsvold. The contracting parties were accompanied by John and Lena Dicken. The newly married couple will reside in this city.

Olaf Neset, proprietor of the Neset jewelry store, came back from Minneapolis the latter part of last week after spending a few days there on business. He also was one of the Thief River Falls people to see the hockey team win the Northwest championship at St. Paul on Saturday. While in the cities Mr. Neset inspected the many lines of jewelry to be found there with the idea of keeping the stock in his store here in line with the best in the state. He made a number of purchases to replenish his stock and keep it in the strictly up-to-date condition that has always been a feature of the Neset jewelry store.

The first literary program, since the organization of the societies in the high school, was given Monday afternoon during the last period by the Philomathean society, being composed of Juniors and Seniors. The program was very entertaining from start to finish and was thoroughly enjoyed by the students. Those who took part in the entertainment were: Dorris Halverson, who rendered a piano solo; Fred Scanlan, paper on the "Attitude of the President in the Present Crisis;" Marian Bishop, reading "Mumps;" Willis Fasel, paper on the "Philippine Question;" Helen Weeks, original story; Rueben Aga, vocal solo.

Jack Frost is no respecter of persons, and so in touching things up last Saturday, he thought he would lay his hands on the Wheatline train, making a run from Eckman to Thief River Falls. Accordingly he trifled lightly with the door of the mail car, until when the train did arrive in the city, it was impossible to open it. It had frozen solid. The car inspector, brakeman, mail clerk, expressman and others tugged away tenaciously at the door, but without success. An "intelligent" onlooker suggested that they apply the usual remedy of rubbing it with snow. After laboring for fully ten minutes using a jimmy and bar to no advantage, they abandoned all operations and used the east door of the car.

OLD-TIMERS FROLIC WAS SOME BIG TIME

Second Annual Gathering of Pioneer Residents of Thief River Falls Held Last Evening

"Ould acquaintances" were revived and the "days of Auld Lang Syne" were recalled at the second annual reunion and party of the Old Timers of Thief River Falls, held in the Odd Fellows' hall last evening. The attendance was much larger than that of last year, and the hall was hardly large enough to accommodate those present, yet this congested condition added greatly to the fun and frolic of the evening. Although no careful count was made, it is estimated that over two hounded old time residents, or their kin were in attendance.

Those who had not attained proficiency in the terpsicorean art, or who had felt the touch of Time and could not frolic with the younger folks, enjoyed themselves at cards—"pedro," "penochle" and other old fashioned games—or sat about visiting and talking over the days of long ago. The hardships of the pioneer days, and there were many of them, were recounted to the children of those days, many of whom had brought their wives or husbands to the function that they might help the older folks make merry. And the dancing was a revelation to these younger folk. The "bunny hug," "turkey trot," "duck waddle," and even the one-step and three-step, were strictly tabooed. The old fashioned square dance, to the tune of "Turkey in the Straw," or "The Irish Wash Woman" and occasionally an antique waltz or two-step, furnished the motive upon which was builded an evening, unexcelled in its enjoyable pleasures.

The music was also of a nature to bring back the by-gone days. Violin and piano, occasionally assisted by an accordian, provided music that was amply adequate for its purpose. A. C. Hanson rendered several selections on the accordion, and Mrs. Anna Halda, who years ago furnished the music for the dances in her neighborhood on the East side, also "accordioned" for a waltz that was liberally encored.

"Laughing Ole" Peterson, who with his violin was a regular feature of the old-time balls, assisted with the music, and when he and Frank Effinger on violins, and B. G. Walker on the piano, started an old waltz, the present was forgotten and the dancers lived over again the days of old when those three were the popular musical organization of Thief River Falls. Others of the pioneers, whose musical talents were at one time considered par excellence and who still retain much of their skill despite lapsing memories or stiffening fingers, volunteered selections, "just to keep revine the past." An unique and somewhat unexpected feature of the evening was a whistling solo: "The End of a Perfect Day," rendered by Miss Alice Bourque. Miss Bourque has considerable talent in this respect, and she was liberally encored.

Shortly before midnight, a light lunch was served and the "veterans" were given an opportunity to "nurse them rheumatics and prepare for three more hours of solid fun." It was during the luncheon period that were recalled many of the anecdotes and incidents, at the time considered trivial, but which later became prominent through their connection with epoch marking periods in the history of the city. These included the sleighrides to the Paskley or Tarrant farm home north of the city, the trips to the Copp home, northeast of town, and the "grand balls" held in the Aos hall, the Great Northern hall or the Odd Fellows' hall. In this connection it was noted that the old-timers enjoyed themselves that evening in the same room where twenty years ago they were want to hold their dancing parties.

Among the "old timers" present last evening were Mrs. F. H. Kratka, M. C. Burns and W. . LaBree, who can rightfully claim the distinction of being the oldest residents of Thief River Falls. C. H. Porter, also another of those who helped build the foundation for this modern city, Phil Zeh, pioneer business man; H. E. Mussey, pioneer editor; Dennis Connelly, John Kivel, A. C. Hanson, Ole Peterson, and many others, joined in the fun and assisted in making the evening one to be long remembered.

It would be impossible to give a complete list of those present, but it is safe to say that there were but a very few of those "men and women of the early nineties," who were not among the guests. The several committees in charge of the affair are deserving of the sincere compliments they are receiving, for the "Old Timers' Party" was, without a doubt, the social feature of the season.

THIEF RIVER FACTORY PRODUCTS IN DEMAND

Office Fixtures and Furniture Manufactured Here Rapidly Gaining Favor in Sections Far From Home

The Thief River Falls Manufacturing company this week received a contract for the equipment that will go into the women's wear department of the Folmer Mercantile company at Breckenridge, one of the large merchandising houses in that section. These fixtures are practically counterparts of those installed in the Wold store in Thief River Falls, perhaps the finest in this section of the state. In fact, it was after an inspection of the Wold store that the Breckenridge concern decided that the local factory produced exactly what was wanted. This design was submitted in competition with those of some of the foremost manufacturers in the country and the management is naturally rather proud of having landed the contract.

Another job on which the artisans of this company are engaged at this time is the fixtures for the First National bank of Poplar, Montana. These are of mahogany throughout, beautifully finished and with the highest grade of workmanship of which the plant is capable displayed in every detail. Still another set of bank fixtures are being assembled, these being of quarter-sawed oak and destined for the bank at Menahga, Minn.

Attractions at the Lyceum.

The vaudeville attraction for Saturday matinee and evening and Sunday evening will be the Novelty Trio, versatile entertainers, who come here direct from Chicago, opening the Sullivan-Considine time. Matinee prices, 5c and 10c. Evening prices 10c and 15c.

The last and best number of the Midland Lyceum course, Sara Ruth Bates and company, will make their appearance at the Lyceum theatre on Monday, Feb. 14. Sara Ruth Bates needs no introduction to Lyceum patrons, being a reader and impersonator of great ability; Josephine Curtis, a violinist in the extraordinary class and Septimus E. Barbour, baritone, with a beautiful voice, comprises the company. For greater variety, if more were needed, a sketch written especially for these three, is to be put on and you may be sure it is a good one. In addition to this a good program of motion pictures will be shown. The price of admission will be 10c and 25c.

The Broadway attraction for Tuesday evening, Feb. 15th, is entitled "The Supreme Test," starring the famous Broadway dramatic star, Henrietta Crosman. The moving Picture Weekly says in part: "She's just the same, sweet, lovable Henrietta Crosman that a million or more people have been paying highest prices to see in those wonderful stage successes, "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," "Mistress Nell," "All of a Sudden Peggy" and literally scores of others. She knows how to make them laugh and cry all in one breath. She is known and loved from coast to coast. In "The Supreme Test," she is wealthy and interested in slum work. She gives a slum party at her own home and her high-brow friends are shocked. Then she loses her fortune and has to live with the poorest of the poor. That is the supreme test—making the best of things just as she preached when she was wealthy. A dozen other complications make this a great picture." The price of admission is 5c and 10c.

The Fox Film corporation attraction for Thursday evening, Feb. 17th, is entitled "Anna Karenine," featuring Betty Nansen, late from the Royal theatre in Copenhagen. These features are making a decided hit with local theatre-goers, last week's presentation of "The Devil's Daughter" being witnessed by large audiences regardless of the stormy weather, and was unanimously pronounced one of the best attractions ever presented in this city. Tonight's bill is entitled "The Nigger," starring famous Wm. Farnum, too well known here to require an introduction. The price of admission for these Fox features is 10c and 15c.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Mussey came down from their home at Grygla on Tuesday afternoon, having accepted an invitation to attend the meeting of the "old timers" held at the I. O. O. F. hall last evening. While in the city they were guests at the home of their son, Homer Mussey.

HOCKEY CHAMPS AT STAND-UP SUPPER

Commercial Club Rooms Packed in Honor of Returning Heroes—Given Most Enthusiastic Reception

Between ninety and one hundred enthusiastic Thief River Falls citizens were present at the "stand-up" lunch given Tuesday evening at the Commercial club rooms, in honor of the hockey team on capturing the Northwestern championship at St. Paul last Saturday.

The lunch was prepared by Julien Provencher and met with the approval of all those present. At 6:15 the rush began on the "eats" and lasted for fully twenty minutes.

A table in the center of the room had been reserved for the hockey team, all of whom were present with the exception of Clifford Rice and Alex Welsh. Loud rounds of applause greeted the players when they entered the room and were seated around the table. Later it was the scene of much spirited hand shaking. From the ceiling, over the heads of the honorary guests hung the sign, "Northwest Hockey Champions—We Put The Home Town on The Map." After everyone had partaken of the excellent menu, President Johnson called the gathering to order and stated the purpose of the lunch.

The first number on the program was a piano solo by Thomas Stauff, which was followed by a few short remarks by Mayor Gambell. Mayor Gambell said: "We are not only proud of what they have done but they have put Thief River Falls on the map," and then turning to the members of the team sitting a short distance from him, said: "I extend my most heartfelt thanks for what you have done."

Prof. J. H. Hay was then called upon and responded in his usual pleasing manner. He said: "they have done a grand thing for Thief River Falls and are to be highly commended." Mr. Hay also reminded the large audience present of the fact that another group of boys from this city, referring to the stock judging boys, were successful in securing a silver cup at the Farm Crops show at Crookston, but that it was not an athletic contest where both brains and strength are essential."

Judge Andrew Grindeland, who had been prevailed upon to deliver an address on "Citizenship," was then introduced and gave a very inspiring address. His talk throughout was punctuated with applause, Mr. Grindeland dealing with the subject thoroughly and in a very interesting manner.

The members of the team were then called upon for short talks as to how they carried off the honors by Manager G. Howard Smith: Captain "Bill" Devenny, who was injured in the last game of the tournament, arose with the aid of a crutch and thanked the Commercial club and citizens for their support. The other members of the victorious team, who gave short talks on how the cup was won were: "Stonewall" Bennett, L. Hagen, F. Flozsdahl and J. Durham.

President Johnson then called at random upon a number of the men for three minute talks, and all responded in a pleasing manner. Those who were called upon were: R. G. McGinn, Math Barzen, Albert Johnson, John Morgan, W. O. Braggins, Dr. O. F. Mellby, Chas. Nason, W. W. Prichadr, Thos. Stauff and John Wold.

Ed. Emerson, John Maraneson and Ole Peterson, members of the wolf hunting party that is scouring the country east of here, are gaining a considerable amount of fame. Yesterday the party returned with eight fine pelts.

Miss Annie Patterson, who is teaching in the public schools of this city, was an over night guest at the home of her parents in St. Hilaire Friday.

Big Game Tomorrow.

"It looks to me like a big night tomorrow night," remarked one of the high school basketball players today, and he undoubtedly has a good reason for saying so. Tomorrow evening (Friday) at the Lincoln gym the fast McIntosh team will try conclusions with the local five, this to decide the championship of the ninth district. Thief River Falls was defeated by McIntosh two weeks ago, but expect to turn the tables tomorrow evening and send the McIntosh team home sadder but wiser boys. Thief River Falls will enter the game to win and by a large score. For the past week Coach Johnson has put his men through some stiff practise in preparation for the clash, and there is every reason to believe that they will secure a win. Every fan in the city should turn out and help the boys win the championship.

FOR SALE—One large wolf hound 1½ years old, not broken. Also 5 large ewe sheep. Frank McCrum, R. 3.—F10-17.

The Ladies' Aid society of Trinity church will meet in the church parlors Tuesday, Feb. 14, at 3 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mr. and Mrs. John Morgan are the parents of a baby boy, born Saturday, Feb. 5.

New Grocery Store For City.

A new grocery store will open its doors to the public Saturday morning in the building formerly occupied by Pat Roark's saloon at 221 LaBree avenue north. The business will be conducted by Carl Christofferson, well known to Thief River Falls people, having been a partner of the firm of Howick & Christofferson for some time. Mr. Christofferson has been engaged in the grocery business for a number of years and understands it thoroughly.

The famous University and Monarch brands of groceries will be sold at his new stand. On the opening day arrangements have been made to serve lunch to all visitors at the store. In his new and splendid location Mr. Christofferson will no doubt, merit a large and substantial trade. His ad on another page of this issue will prove interesting.

Dr. Spofford, Optometrist, will be at Hotel Evelyn, Thief River Falls March 8.

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS IN NEARBY TOWNS

DAMAGE SUIT SETTLED.

Damage suits brought against the Crookston Lumber Co., and the City of Crookston, by Alex E. Arnold, Elizabeth C. Huggard, C. C. Hoch, E. O. Hagen, and Mary D. Phalen, were settled today in the district court. The action was brought on account of dynamite being used in the Red Lake river, Jerome's Addition, to blow out pilings that were submerged in the river there. The City of Crookston was found not responsible, and action was dismissed without cost.

Exact amounts that will be alloted to the property owners, have not as yet been decided, but it is understood that settlement will be made within a day or two by the lumber company.—Crookston Times.

ROYAL THEATRE RAZED.

Fire, caused by the explosion of a moving picture film which had caught in the machine, totally destroyed the Royal Theatre building on North Main street last night. A. Neumann, formerly of Bemidji, who purchased the place only a short time ago carried no insurance on the fixtures and his loss will be $2,000. The building, which was an old land mark, owned by Younke Brothers, of this city was insured. They estimate their loss at $5,000.

Thomas Wallace, who was operating the machine, received a number of burns on the head and hands while endeavoring to conquer the flames with fire extinguishers. Five thousand feet of film was also destroyed.—Crookston Times

AFTER THE PIGGERS.

The grand jury in Polk county turned eleven indictments for blindpigging this week, seven of them against East Grand Forkers. East Grand Forks has for many years been completely dominated by the liquor interests, that it would be expecting too much to hope for immediate acquiesence in and obedience to the mandate of the county option election in that county. But the case of that city is not by any means hopeless; in fact, there is reason to believe that within the next two years, when the city shall rid itself of the undesirables left over as an inheritance from the old regime, East Grand Forks will become as clean and law-abiding as the average town of its size —Warren Sheaf.

HALLOCK HAS BAND.

The Commercial club band under the direction of Emil Dahlof, held its first pratice meeting last Tuesday at the club rooms. A class of eleven beginners were present to receive their instruction, and before drill was over they were able to play several strains in good shape. The enrollment in this band is twenty-four, all told, over half of whom are experienced musicians, with reputations behind them. New music has been furnished the band by the club and the people of Hallock, and Kittson county may look forward to some agreeable music and entertainment by this aggregation of artists next spring and summer. We have long needed a good band here and everyone should give the boys all the help they possibly can. The enjoyment of good music will be your reward.—Hallock News.

HIGHWAYMEN FOUND GUILTY.

After the jury in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. Alexander Grey, had been out for six hours Saturday, a verdict of guilty of robbery in the first degree was returned. He will be sentenced later by Judge Watts. Grey was alleged to be a leader of a trio accused of holding up several harvest hands on an extra freight train east of Crookston, October 18. H. C. Meyers and Oscar Wessiel were the names given by the other two men. All pleaded not guilty, each saying at the time that they had nothing to say about the case pending against them.

Following the trial of Grey, the three men were of the opinion that there was not sufficient evidence against them to convict. When they heard that the jury was out from 9:30 until late in the afternoon, they looked for a disagreement, which meant their dismissal from custody.

On learning of Grey's fate, Wessiel and Meyers changed their pleas of not guilty, to guilty of robbery in the third degree. They will be sentenced the latter part of the week.—Crookston Times.

INCORPORATION WINS.

Tuesday was a red letter day for Newfolden. On that day she commenced to make history that will go on record. Heretofore it has existed as a part of Newfolden township and under the control of township authorities, but she has outgrown her parental clothes and has a desire to paddle her own canoe, not that township officers were incompetent to govern and control, but village interests and township interests differ considerable, hence our desire to promote the best interests of Newfolden, which was so admirably expressed at the late election.

There were forty-eight votes cast, forty in favor of incorporation, seven against and one ballot declared spoiled, although the voter's intention was to vote for incorporation. About ten citizens, all voters, did not cast their ballots at the election.

In due course of time proper papers will be sent to those at the helm calling for a special election for village officials. —Newfolden Review.

FOUND DEAD UNDER SNOW.

The body of Frank Funk, 57 years old, a cord wood cutter who lived in a shack two miles south of Blackduck, was found Monday under a foot of snow by a searching party that for several days ploughed the snow with cedar poles in the vicinity of where he had been working.

Funk had apparently been missing for about two weeks.

Beneath Two Heavy Snows.

Coroner Akerberg, who investigated believes that death was due to heart trouble and the body had evidently been lying in the woods before the last two snow falls.

Neighbors first noticed that Mr. Funk was not at home the latter part of last week and on investigating, found that he had not been at Blackduck and as the door of his shack was unlocked a search of the woods near where he had been working began, the body finally being found several feet from where his tools were found.—Bemidji Sentinel.

MIDDLE RIVER

Newfolden became an incorporated city at a recent election by a large majority of votes.

Harvey and Sam Leiran left Saturday afternoon forllag with a load of oil barrels for the Rood Construction Co. The trip took them four days as the roads are beyond discription, the snow being so deep at places that their horses simply wallowed in it.

The Middle River Whist club is a thing of the past. The last sitting was played last Friday night and the vanquished furnished a feed for the victors on Sunday evening. The event took place at the Rex Cafe, the eats being of the very best.

Dr. Louis Olson, who has for the past year been practising veterinary surgery here, left for McIntosh where he will locate. All his Middle River friends wish him good luck in his new position.

J. E. McMartin, of Arthur, N. D. visited here last week with his brother Rev. McMartin.

Jim Wilson, of Gatzke, returned Tuesday from Hankinson, N. D. where he has been visiting with his sister for the past two months. He visited in town until Saturday before taking the big drive out into the wilderness where he lives.

Angus McMillan of Strathcona was here on Wednesday of last week. He reports that he had to break road all the way down here from Strathcona.

A. N. Johnson is having a hard time to get his pulp wood into town on account of the deep snow and the toters loads tipping from this cause.

Most of the farmers that come to town now days come in a covered rig that has a stove in it. That is the only way to travel and there is no comparison between that and the open sleigh traveling.

There was a decided change in the temperature on Tuesday morning and no one seems to kick.

J. B. Grobey has the Northern Hotel nearly ready for occupancy and it is rumored that he has secured a renter to go in there in the spring.

Rev. McMartin had a rather strenuous ride last Sunday as he drove out to Rollis and held services there in the evening.

Sam Fillopola, one of the enterprising Fins living south of the town is going to have a sale. Sam thinks this country is to cold for him.

Bills are out announcing the auction sale of Hans Lewis, who lives at Rollis.

Arthur Grobey went to Thief River Falls Tuesday of last week to have some dental work done, he returned on Wednesday.

Dr. Walter is preparing to move into the lower story of the Grobey building with his drug stock, A. V. Saeterstrom having purchased the building he now occupies and is intending to move his butcher shop in there in the near future.

Conrad Wedmer sold his pool tables to Louis Stone of Strathcona, who will install them in his pool room at that place.

The dance at Rosewood last Friday evening was well attended. All reported a very good time.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over an heirloom, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the girl, Esther, reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther. Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so does his companion and cousin, Blair Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley. In stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem.

Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventuress, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Esther's being received in Fairfax society. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen demented. Marmaduke Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning Arthur is a fugitive, he seeks Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving for the west. Their train is robbed, Vivian losing the diamond, which a slain train robber drops in the desert. The $100,000 he stole is found by Arthur, now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment, and Esther is in Richmond society. Abe Bloom, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman. Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich, he buys Stanley Hall, sold at auction, through Blake, and also provides for Hagar and Esther.

Vivian is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Esther to deliver to Arthur.

Blair joins Vivian in Los Angeles. Durand, "king of diamonds," a crook known to Vivian, goes to a saloon to try to discover the diamond. Arthur appears on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles in care of the physician-crook, Durand. The diamond is found by two billposters, one of whom murders the other for it. Arthur is "doped" by Durand, De Vaux and Vivian.

Blair makes Arthur believe he suffered from hallucination in thinking he saw Esther. Luke is "railroaded" to prison by Blair. Arthur buys the diamond. Blair, trying to take the gem from Durand, who steals it from Arthur, hurls Durand from a window, killing him. Esther and Smythe return to Virginia, the girl rejoining Hagar at the sanitarium. The diamond is stolen by De Vaux. He is later struck down and the diamond taken after Luke, aided by Quabba, escapes. Esther will not leave Hagar and take her rightful place in society. Smythe examines an old parchment bearing Hagar's pedigree. The diamond is given by Luke to Esther, who will not keep it, but sends it back to Arthur. Hagar and Esther, rejoining the gypsies, travel westward. Arthur, repentant and informed of the treachery of Vivian and Blair, is about to take poison just as Luke breaks into his room, but Luke drinks it by mistake and is then killed by an auto driven by Blair. He has taken some of Arthur's clothing, and the auto disfigures him so that he is taken for Arthur. Blair removes the diamond from his body. Arthur, now nameless, flies in his aeroplane, with which Blair has tampered, and falls near Esther. Hagar is dying.

CHAPTER LVII.

The Passing of Hagar.

WE all deal with destiny, wittingly or not. He who had been Arthur Stanley and John Powell, alike wastrel and profligate and yet fondly beloved, had mounted the stairway of the wind and ridden upon the wings of the morning, without fear and without hope.

He had dealt with destiny and had won. By some miracle of the commonplace the falling aeroplane had struck a low, thick, sturdy tree, and the man plunging to death had been thrown up into the canvas wing of the bird machine, and so, save that he was stunned by the jar, had escaped unharmed.

The wondering gypsies chafed his hands and brow, one put a brandy flask to his lips and forced a few of its fiery drops between the clinched teeth.

All the while Esther held his head upon her lap and a great joy filled her being, for she knew he lived and had come back to her shed of the husk of sin and selfishness. And so when he opened his eyes he looked into Esther's, and they both read what their lips could not utter—forgiveness, love and happiness!

They bore Arthur back to the gypsy camp near by in wondering silence, and then Esther relieved the gypsy woman watching by the side of Hagar and whispered to the dying woman, "Can you bear a great happiness?"

A smile transfigured the wan face of Hagar. "I know the good news you bring," she murmured. "Arthur, my dear son, is here!"

"Arthur, my dear son, is here!" Hagar murmured.

Prescient in the face of death, Hagar also knew that the husk of evil had fallen from Arthur and that the wings of the morning had wafted clean strength to his soul.

He leaned his head against that loving, tired breast and knew—full, deep and satisfying—that a mother's prayer was indeed a charm against harm, above all diamonds!

In those few moments of deep rapture Hagar realized at last that all her sorrows and sacrifices had not been in vain. Her son, parted from her since his birth hour, was in her arms at last—the man she had always hoped that he would grow to be.

She laid Esther's hand in his and breathed a final blessing upon these two she loved above all else. And so this gentle, yet strong, heroic soul passed to its reward.

This was the news that Quabba came sadly back to find. This was the news that wrenched his faithful, humble soul. But Esther and Arthur did not weep. They felt that Hagar had passed in joy beyond comprehension, and Esther had no cause for tears, and Arthur had cause too deep for them.

They gazed upon the calm face of Hagar hand in hand while Arthur pledged his vows again to be whole of heart and body as the dead would wish.

After Hagar had been laid to rest the gypsies, led by Arthur, now calling himself by the name of Harding, journeyed on back to fair Virginia to their mountain rendezvous in the Blue Ridge.

The journey was long and slow and yet a happy one for the fond lovers. As if, in truth, the evil husk had fallen from him in the plunge from the clouds that Blair's treacherous tampering with the aeroplane had caused, Arthur had found the drug addiction and its desire pass from him.

If it was by a struggle with the flesh he did not show it. His eyes grew bright; his tanned face glowed with happiness, and ever through the sun and shade Esther, his beloved, rode by his side, her tender hand in his.

The Happy Lovers Journey Across a Nation's Breadth.

So, while these happy lovers journey across a nation's breadth with the simple gypsy folk, how fares it with the great of earth?

How fares it with Blair Stanley and his fair wife, who was Vivian Marston? Have they not everything their hearts have long desired?

They have the wealth of John Powell, for Blair was next of kin when it was proved the supposedly dead John Powell was Arthur Stanley, fugitive. They have the diamond from the sky and the Stanley earldom, for to these things long desired Blair also is heir as next of kin.

And Luke Lovell, with a face crushed beyond recognition, lies in a western graveyard with the name of Arthur Stanley on his tomb.

The physicians who examined the dead man knew nothing of the drug addictions of John Powell. They sought for no marks of these. The wounds and scars on Luke's body from his escape from prison and other hard knocks he had endured were believed to be the marks of injuries that Arthur Stanley, alias John Powell, had sustained in the brawl and riot at his mines that had for a while incapacitated him, such time as he had been under the care of the dead Durand, posing as his private physician. Blair and Vivian shunned proximity to the dead nor looked upon the crushed encoffined form again.

Then before Blake, the detective, or Abe Bloom, the Richmond gambler, the first deeming justice should be done and the latter desiring the diamond from the sky, could make a move Blair and Vivian had crossed the continent from Los Angeles and had sailed for London.

Blake waited cautiously to strike, and Abe Bloom had been in too many shady transactions to be in any position to make an open demand on Blair for the diamond, which had been promised him in the bargain for his silence.

So Blair and Vivian journeyed to London and were received, with some ill grace, by Marmaduke Smythe, for a lifetime solicitor and family lawyer to the earls of Stanley.

But Marmaduke Smythe did his duty as he saw it. He had all the credentials, and in due time Blair was inducted into the house of lords. This brief and somewhat bald ceremony was not at all satisfying to the luxury and display loving Vivian.

She had sat in the peeress' gallery in ordinary afternoon attire and had seen Blair introduced to the lord chancellor by a fat and stupid old baron of the realm, whom Smythe had secured to be Blair's sponsor.

The robes an earl wears at his introduction to the house of lords and at sittings of parliament are neither graceful nor becoming.

It was the first bitterness to Vivian, who had imagined an occasion of great splendor. Blair wore an ordinary morning suit under his robes, for it was the custom, Smythe had assured them, and when one is a peer one must do everything according to custom.

Then when Vivian and Blair were to be presented at court, which meant something more satisfying in costume and ceremony, King Edward VII. died and King George V. reigned in his stead. There was the usual period of mourning and no royal drawing room until after the coronation.

The coronation! That was worth the waiting, for it meant the only occasion a peer and his noble lady may wear their coronets and the more graceful and beautiful coronation robes.

Here, too, the diamond from the sky could be worn, literally, as the adventurer, Sir Arthur Stanley, who found it in a meteor three centuries before, had desired, "When a descendant of my body shall be called to the English earldom of the Stanleys!"

Esther and Arthur at the Portals of Stanley Hall.

So while Vivian and Blair are busy with court tailors and court dressmakers and are feverishly preparing for the glories they are to be part of, and while day by day the suspicion and distrust between them and Marmaduke Smythe grow in intensity, let us return to America and to the gypsy folk.

The gypsies had reached Virginia and the neighborhood of Fairfax. The caravan moved on under the leadership of Quabba.

Skirting around Fairfax, Arthur and Esther rode in the twilight and stood at the portals of Stanley Hall. The place was barred and bolted and fast falling to decay. Weeds rankled on the once well kept lawns and flower beds.

A weather stained, discolored sign, "For Rent," hung by rusty nails to one of the great pillars. A whippoorwill called mournfully from the shrubbery.

CHAPTER LVIII.

King Arthur Marries Queen Esther.

"MISTRESS of Stanley Hall, Esther, my wife to be, I salute you!" said Arthur in deep earnestness as he drew Esther to him. "Too long have you been cheated of your birthright. I am not guilty of any wrong except to you, and you have forgiven me. Blair Stanley is guilty of the death of Dr. Lee, and I feel sure that Blake has the proofs.

"The time has come when, for your sake, the truth must be known, and you must take your place in this stately home of your people, where I dwelt so long an impostor to foster the ambitions of the dead and to augment their feuds and hatreds."

Esther shuddered and threw herself into his arms. "No, Arthur!" she cried. "I have never been happy here! Let the dead and their secrets rest in the grave.

"Rich and of position, you know no happiness, nor would I. It was not your dying mother's wish, I know. Looking into the face of death, she saw clearly. All she desired was that we should be happy together.

"When last within this gloomy house with her I asked for a sign, and it was given to me. And I repeat this to you as we repeated it together that night:

"'Entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee, for whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge. Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God.'"

Vivian and Blair Make Merry In London.

And as the twilight turned to darkness these two rode away from Stanley hall to dwell unknown, obscure, among the simple gypsy people who loved them.

Here the astute Tom Blake of Richmond found them, and here he brought a copy of the proofs of Blair's guilt, the finger print markings from the murder scene, the library where Blair had slain the kind old doctor, Henry Lee, in his first attempt to gain the diamond from the sky.

Blake pleaded with Arthur to halt Blair in the hour of his supposed triumph, but Esther and Arthur refused. "Let Blair have the Powell millions; let him have Stanley Hall; let him have the earldom in England and the diamond from the sky," said Arthur. "We have more than all these things, for in casting them aside we have found love and happiness!"

"Your mother, Hagar Harding, was my best friend. She gave me my start in life," said Blake huskily. "I will abide by your wish. Abe Bloom suspects much, but knows little regarding Blair Stanley.

"Bloom dare not move unless I say so and I can hold him quiet. Even near Fairfax you will never be recognized in the gypsy, Arthur Harding, by the people who knew you as Arthur Stanley.

"The few short years have changed you, but it is different with Miss Esther Stanley here. Who could not tell her? You cannot keep the secret on this account, I know."

"This is a sheltered place which only the gypsies know the way to, only the gypsies, with the exception of yourself," replied Arthur. "You know the way because my mother taught you, and you know the Romany password that admits you past the outer vans.

"This is the old rendezvous of my mother. The gypsies own the very land. We will not be here long—only for our wedding, which will be a gypsy one. None but a Romany can be at the wedding—none but you, for you were adopted into the tribe as a boy, I am told."

"Yes, I was picked up by your mother a starved and wretched lad, a runaway from a miserable almshouse in the middle west," replied Blake softly. "I was adopted into Hagar's tribe, fed, clothed and educated by your mother.

"But I cannot come to the wedding. I think you are wrong, and I could not bear to see the mistress of Stanley hall wedded as a gypsy when she should be wedded as her mother was—the way her people have been.

"You will pardon me for speaking from my heart?"

Esther smiled. "You are too serious, Mr. Blake," she said. "It is the only way I would be wed. You may be an adopted gypsy, and Arthur may be a born one, but of us three I am the real Romany, and I will have the wedding of a gypsy queen and none other!"

But in the privacy of his sanctum in his Richmond agency the next day Blake smiled to himself as he said: "Blair Stanley, you destroyed one set of proofs when you struck down Hagar and wrested them from her. Arthur destroyed the set I took to him, but Tom Blake had the originals!"

Then he sighed and gazed at a portrait of Hagar that hung upon the wall of his sanctum. The picture was inscribed from Hagar to Blake. The eyes of the portrait seemed living ones in the earnest gaze of the detective.

"You are dead," he said, "but your spirit lives, I know. Whatever was the wish of your steadfast heart that thing shall be accomplished, and perhaps I yet shall be the instrument of it!"

He spoke prophetically. In far away London the sincerely faithful lawyer Smythe writhed in secret protest at the title having come to Blair and Vivian while the two dine and make merry in London's famous restaurants.

Smythe had seen Blair take his seat in the house of lords, and no word came from Blake, although he had cabled the Richmond detective to send proofs of Blair's guilt and secure a requisition.

Blake now went to this latter task. But, influential as he was, he found the Virginia jurists were averse to moving in the matter. After long delay he secured with all the secrecy possible a warrant for Blair and a requisition to return him to America, and this he sent to Smythe.

Meanwhile in the fastness of the Blue Ridge there is a royal wedding, the nuptials of royalty in Romany. King Arthur marries Queen Esther, and gypsies from all over the land have gathered for the event. There is a maypole, and there is music, and there are garlands.

The vans are garlanded; the little children strew flowers and the elder gypsies bear branches of blossoms to form a flower archway for the royal young couple. The goats and horses are garlanded. Quabba wears a garland and a big bridal favor and leads the gypsy musicians, who play all the while the merry Romany wedding strains.

Clarence, the monkey, has a wedding favor and wears a garland and is made to beat the triangle, though, in sooth, Clarence is cynically indifferent, being a bachelor by instinct.

And so the maypole ribbons are twined, and so the wedding dance goes on, and so at sunset the royal pair, King Arthur and Queen Esther, jump over the gypsy broomstick held by Quabba—and so they are married.

But because Esther is a Stanley of the blood a minister is brought from Richmond to marry them in the conventional manner also. And the minister comes and goes and wonders.

Then the happy, dancing gypsies light them to the royal van with flambeaux and return to dance and drink and sing beneath the moonlight by the maypole.

But the royal pair steal away unseen and clamber up the sheer hillside, and from a great rock pinnacle they sit embraced and watch the moon, like a shield of silver on the wall of heaven, hang over the dim vale below.

And So King Arthur Marries Queen Esther.

On such a night the dapper Count de Vaux, once "knave of clubs of the diamond pack," sits in his bachelor chambers in London and reads again the coronation story that tells that on the morrow George V. and Queen Mary shall be crowned with pomp in Westminster Abbey.

He reads that Blair, earl of Stanley, and his countess, who was Vivian Marston, will be among the privileged high born present.

The American earl, so says the London newspaper, will wear the famous Virginia jewel, the diamond from the sky, which, according to family tradition, was found in a fallen meteor by a colonial ancestor.

"The Earl and Countess of Stanley are residing in London at Stanley House, Mayfair," concludes the article.

And the dapper De Vaux lays aside the paper and goes out. He takes a cab and rides to the neighborhood of Stanley House, Mayfair. It fronts Regent's park and is a detached old edifice of Tudor architecture.

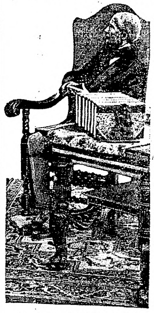
Dismissing the cab, De Vaux watches and loiters till late. He sees against a window shade of Milady Stanley's chamber the silhouetted reflection of his noble lord, the earl, clasping the diamond from the sky around the shapely throat of the Countess of Stanley!

The next day the earl and his lady are up early, attiring themselves in their coronation robes, for the crush will be great, and they must be in their state coach to the abbey in due time.

Lawyer Smythe in his Gothic chamber in the old house is not happy. He has received his conge from the noble earl, my lord Blair, and, besides, he has not heard from Blake, the Richmond detective.

"I long in my soul," muses the eccentric lawyer, "to have his lordship arrested in the very doorway of the abbey and dragged to Newgate in fetters! Though that would make the dead and gone earls of Stanley turn in their stately graves!"

As if in answer to his wishes a flunkey taps at his chamber door and announces that the postman is below with a registered package for him; and, taking his hat, without which he never stirs outdoors, Smythe descends to the portals of Stanley house.



Lawyer Smythe Is Not Happy.

Called to my lady's boudoir as he passes in the corridor, the lackey informs the questioning lord of the registered mail package for Smythe.

Fearful of some bitter disappointment, fearful of his criminal past in America, Blair, earl of Stanley, leaving the lackey to do some service for the Countess Vivian at her tiring, hurries down in the great Gothic stairway to intercept any ill omened message that may have come from America to Smythe.

On his breast there gleams the diamond from the sky that the American earl would wear into his earldom, as the ancestral finder had decreed.

The flunkeys usually loitering in the hall have been drawn by curiosity to follow the family lawyer out to the mail man waiting with receipt book and the registered package.

As Blair, ninth earl of Stanley, reaches the last landing of the Gothic stairway the armor of Sir Geoffrey Stanley of Agincourt is behind him. Then the mailed arm is silently uplifted and then it descends, bringing the battle mace it holds down with crushing force upon the yet uncoroneted head of the American earl.

Down the stricken man falls headlong. The clattering figure in armor treads down the steps and bends over the crumpled, bleeding figure in the robes of an earl and from the ermined breast of the prostrate Blair a mailed hand draws away the diamond from the sky!

What She Learned.

The Husband — Do you think, my dear, that all this so called education, these fads, these lectures and ethical and philosophical movements of yours really do you any good?

The Wife—Incalculable good. Why, every day I live I appreciate more and more fully what an insignificant creature man is!—London Tit-Bits.

An Early Finish.

"You are sentenced to be shot at sunrise," announced the villain of the melodrama. "Have you anything to say?"

"Very little," answered the comedian. "Sunrise is an early hour. I shall not dilate."

Lending a Helping Hand.

"Is he affectionate?" she asked archly. "Indeed he is. Here, Bruno! Come, good doggie and show Charley Smith how to kiss me."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Should Keep It Quiet.

Mr. Stuffer—I'm very fond of fried onions.

His Wife—That's nothing to brag of. If I loved fried onions as you do I'd never breathe it to a soul.—New York Globe.

VILLAGE OF ST. HILAIRE

Leap Year Dance.

On Friday, February fourth, the young ladies of St. Hilaire gave a leap year ball at the Imperial hall. The hall was very artistically decorated in red and white, hearts, cupids, and streamers. The stage was prettily furnished with couch, chairs, table, rugs and cushions to serve as a rest room, and was in great demand during the evening as leap year dances are unusual happenings and are rather trying ordeals for some of the young men who are not in the habit of dancing continually during an entire evening. A delicious buffet luncheon was served at twelve by the young ladies acting on the "lunch committee." The affair proved to be one of the most successful entertainments held here for some time and everyone spent a very pleasant evening, enjoying themselves to the fullest extent. Music was furnished by the St. Hilaire Peerless Orchestra for part of the evening, and Mrs. Lang and Miss Grace Hall for the remainder of the dances. The out-of-town guests were: Miss Alice Hoff of Adams, North Dakota; Miss Anna Patterson of Thief River Falls; Louis Olson of Middle River, and Joe McAndress of Thief River Falls.

The ladies entertaining were the Misses Katherine and Olive Patterson, Gertrude and Coral Hooper, Grace and Alice Hall, Vina and Lydia Kolstad, Dorothy Martz, Harriet Jackson, Mildred Fellman, Echo Olson, Mae Barragy, Louise Wilson, Olive Porter, Lillie Johnson, Olga Flicker and the Mesdames Lang, McAllister and Hall.

Annual Creamery Meeting.

The St. Hilaire Co-operative Creamery association held their annual meeting Tuesday, February 7th, in the village hall. Their records show a considerable increase in business for the past year. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Nels K. Anderson, secretary; John R. Larsen, treasurer; Anton Peterson, J. S. Roy, and O. L. Larson, directors. The only change in officers being that of treasurer. August Swenson, who has been a faithful treasurer for the past number of years, was succeeded by Mr. Larson.

The last sad rites over the remains of little Clarence Johnson, who was suddenly called from earth to the Great Beyond, were held at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Swan Johnson, Wednesday afternoon. Clarence was three years of age and leaves his mother and father and brothers and sisters to mourn his loss.

DAD AND THE BOYS WILL EAT

Get-Together Banquet For Fathers and Sons Will Take Place at Auditorium on Evening of March 14

TOPIC: Y. M. C. A. MATTERS

Speakers From State Headquarters of the Association Will Lend Their Aid in Getting Work Properly Started in Promising Field.

It is doubtful if anything ever attempted in Thief River Falls has met with so much of whole-hearted and enthusiastic approval as the establishment of a branch of the Y. M. C. A. in the city. The preliminary work already attended to has been noted in these columns, and the gentlemen who have been most prominent in looking after these necessary details now feel that they have progressed sufficiently far to make it advisable for them to do something that will center the attention of the men of the community on the organization's aims and ambitions.

To this end the cabinet committee having charge of the propaganda work has decided to give a banquet for the fathers of young men residing in the immediate neighborhood of Thief River Falls. The banquet will take place on Tuesday, March 14, at the Auditorium, and one of the conditions to be complied with is that all attending shall bring at least one son to the feast, it being provided that men without sons must borrow some youth for the occasion. The idea is to get the young men as well as those of more mature years together, while speakers of national prominence, who have made a study of the work and benefits of the Y. M. C. A., give both the benefits of their experience.

The committee in charge has secured Messrs. Coffin and Peck of Minneapolis, and Mr. Jewett of St. Paul, as speakers for the occasion. These gentlemen have assured the local committee that they are deeply interested in the effort to establish a branch of the organization here, and that they are anxious to do anything in their power to aid the work.

The details for the banquet have not yet been entirely worked out, but the committee assures The Times that everything will be done to insure a pleasant and profitable evening.

It is altogether likely that Thief River Falls will be chosen as the place for holding the state convention next winter. Delegates from this city present at the recent Faribault meeting received assurances from a large number of those present to the effect that the proposition would be most favorably considered. There are two conditions to be met by the city acting as host to the state gathering, but these are of such minor nature that there is not the slightest doubt but that Thief River Falls can easily meet them. To secure this convention during the first year of its organization would be an unusual achievement for any branch, but the delegates at Faribault were assured that Thief River Falls is noted for unusual accomplishments. As "The Convention City of Northern Minnesota," the place was already known to a large number of those present, and all expressed a desire to become better acquainted with its people.

Thus the organization has already accomplished something of real value. Make arrangements to be at the banquet on the 14th and help it accomplish more.

As it is the intention of the committee in charge to mail invitations to every man who in any way or to any extent might be interested in the Y. M. C. A. movement, the request is made that addresses of these be sent to Mr. W. A. Reynolds, Thief River Falls. Efforts will thus be made to reach practically the entire male population of the section and should result in a rousing meeting.

The Commercial club, officials of the Soo Line and practically all of the local business men have endorsed the proposition which means that it will have united support.

Band Dance—by Request

As the result of repeated requests, the management of the Thief River Falls Concert band, whose aim it is to please—has decided to give another band dance. The event will take place at the Auditorium, Friday evening, March 3. The last affair of this nature proved to be so popular with the trippers of the light fantastic that the management has been flooded with requests for a second appearance.

Important Meeting

The next meeting of the Commercial club will be held Thursday, February 24, at 8 o'clock and the directors are anxious to have a good attendance as plans for the coming year will be discussed. The club closed its fiscal year Feb. 10 and a number of projects, undertaken during the past winter are still unfinished. More active work on the part of the committees is insisted on and it is the idea of the directors that this can be best obtained by outlining some of the work suggested and a general discussion. The directors court suggestions and believe that the year before the club can be made as successful as the past, with co-operation on the part of members and everyone putting his shoulder to the wheel and working. Members are urged to be at the meeting next Thursday, Feb. 24, and come prepared to offer suggestions.

WAR CORRESPONDENT TO GIVE WAROLOGUE HERE

February 22 is the date for the appearance here of E. J. D. Larson, war correspondent of the Minneapolis Tribune, with his "Warologue" and great collection of pictures taken by himself in the horrible European struggle. While Mr. Larson seeks to avoid gruesomeness in his offering it is declared that no man, no matter how rabid a militarist he is, can hear his talk and see his pictures and ever be as keen an advocate of war again. Mr. Larson's appearance here will be an event of particular consequence. The privilege of visiting the trenches where the grim industry of modern warfare is carried on has been granted to few persons from private life, hence the opportunity of hearing what it is like from the mouth of one who has seen the trench fighting with his own eyes is an unusual one.

Especially at this time when preparedness is so live a topic in the United States does it behoove the public to gain as clear an idea of modern war as possible. But outside of its instructive value, persons who wish to keep abreast of the times and do not mind an occasional gentle thrill will find a great deal in Mr. Larson's warologue to keep them spellbound and breathlessly interested. Those who have read the Tribune writer's articles from the front know that he has a keen appreciation of what will most appeal to the average American mind and heart.

Mr. Larson returned to the United States in November. He is now touring the Northwest, bringing the lessons of the European horror to the American people, under the direction of the International Lyceum Bureau of Chicago.

CURTAINS OF SOFT DRINK PARLORS ORDERED DOWN

Beer Signs Also Ordered Removed From All Buildings in the City by Mayor F. H. Gambell

Acting under orders from Mayor F. H. Gambell, Chief of Police O. E. Berge this week notified the proprietors of all soft drink establishments in the city that curtains must be removed from the windows so that the interior is exposed to full view from the sidewalk at all times. At the same time the order went forth that all beer and liquor signs must be removed from the business buildings of the city. Practically all of the places notified have complied with the orders and now every trace of what once advertised the flourishing liquor business in this city has been removed.

PRODUCE HOUSE NOW CERTAINTY

Efforts of Commercial Club Successful and Deal is Closed by Company For Warehouse of Heileman Co.

BEGIN BUSINESS MARCH 15

Concern Will Do a General Commission Business, Handling Farm Produce of All Kinds--Will Confer With Farmers on 26th

D. C. Biddick, of the Peterson-Biddick company, commission merchants, with headquarters at Wadena and warehouses also at Deer Creek and Aldrich, Minn., was here the first of the week and made the final arrangements for the location of a branch house of their business at Thief River Falls. March 15 has been set as the opening time for the new enterprise and the location will be the Heileman Brewing company's building at the intersection of the Soo railway tracks and Davis avenue. The securing of this concern for Thief River Falls is due to the efforts of the Commercial club, which thus adds another noteworthy achievement to its long list.

On Monday Mr. Biddick met with the directors of the Commercial club and the inducements held out by them were of such nature that he at once decided that the establishment of a house here would not only prove a decidedly good business proposition for his firm, but would be an immediate and direct help to the farmers and consequently an aid in the development of this section.

The Peterson-Biddick company does a heavy business with eastern houses besides largely supplying the retail stores on the iron ranges of Minnesota. They deal principally in potatoes, but handle also large quantities of produce such as butter, eggs, hay and minor vegetables. Their business reputation is the highest and the Commercial club deserves credit for being able to add to our business institutions a house so well and favorably known.

Mr. Biddick will be here again on Feb. 26th, when he will personally meet the farmers who are expected in the city on that day for the purpose of taking steps toward forming a co-operative shipping association. He will then explain personally to them that his company stands ready to furnish growers with seed potatoes of the varieties most favored at cost, and they are advised to make their wants in this respect known at this time.

The company's branch here will employ seven or eight people and be in charge of a local man as manager. The concern will be known as the Thief River Falls Produce company. With the large and growing territory in this vicinity to draw from the enterprise should prove most successful from the outset.

FARMERS TO ORGANIZE SHIPPING ASSOCIATION

Proposition Will Be Discussed at Meeting in Commercial Club Rooms on Saturday, February 26

All farmers and others interested in the organization of a Farmers' Co-operative Shipping association, are urged to be present at the meeting Saturday, Feb. 26, at the Commercial club rooms at 2 p. m. This organization is what we need; make it a point to be there.

J. B. Conner.

This meeting is of interest to every farmer in Pennington county and it will undoubtedly be attended by a large crowd. The need of a co-perative shipping association has been felt for some time and Mr. Conner, who is a director of the Commercial club, has been urged by a number of the farmers to call a meeting in an effort to perfect an organization. The use of the Commercial club rooms was offered the farmers for their meeting and the club will do anything possible to aid the farmers in this progressive movement.

H. O. Loken, manager of Loken Brothers' Department store, returned this morning from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Chicago and Milwaukee. At Chicago, Mr. Loken purchased the spring and summer stock of goods for the big store and also was in attendance at the Fashion show.

DECIDE ON ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

Commissioners Will Spend $2,800 in Improving County Road No. 3 and For Work on Pembina Trail

GOODRIDGE ELECTION VOID

Irregularities in Papers Make New Election Necessary Before Village Can Incorporate--Will be Held on Tuesday, March 14

At the meeting of the board of county commissioners held this week a number of important matters came before the members. The road work for the year was outlined and when the work proposed by the commissioners is completed a number of the highways of the county will be greatly improved. $1,400 will be spent on county road No. 3. This highway extends west from Thief River Falls and it will be connected with the Pembina trail. Another $1,400 is to be spent in improving the Pembina trail. The Kratka and Smiley road will also be improved to the extent of $1,400. These expenditures will practically exhaust the funds available for road work this year as a large sum from the fund will go to pay for gravelling the road between this city and St. Hilaire, which work was completed this winter.

The commissioners voted to appropriate $2,000 from the road and bridge fund to aid in the erection of a new bridge at St. Hilaire to replace the one that is now considered unsafe. This is known as the north bridge at St. Hilaire.

Hearings were conducted on county ditches No. 63 and No. 64 at this meeting of the commissioners. Ditch No. 63 is located in the township of Goodridge and No. 64 in North township. The following were appointed viewers for the two ditches: Gus Napfin, R. M. Johnson and Walter McAndres. Glen Martz was appointed engineer. The excavation for ditch No. 62 in the townships of Wyandotte and River Falls was sold to Lloyd Crown.

Another matter that came before the commissioners was a petition from the freeholders of Goodridge for a special election to vote on the proposition to incorporate. This matter was voted on at Goodridge some time ago and it carried by a large majority but some irregularities were made in certain legal papers and it will be necessary to hold another election. The petition was granted and the election will be held Tuesday, March 14th.

Miss Cecil W. Yuergens and Carl E. Anderson, of Marshall county, were united in marriage Wednesday evening at the M. E. church parsonage, Rev. Parish officiating. They left here Thursday morning for Warren near which place they will make their home on a farm.

FIVE DOLLAR BILL STILL BUSY SETTLING ACCOUNTS

Legal Tender Note on Pay-Up Trip Has Not Yet Put in Appearance at Commercial Club Headquarters

The five dollar bill, started out by the Commercial club as a fore-runner of national pay-up week which comes February 21-26 and which was to have been returned to the Commercial club secretary today, up to press time had not been "reported in" and the supposition is that "Bill" is too busy liquidating debts to get in early today.

The bill was started out Monday morning and before noon had come back to the Commercial club secretary in the payment of dues and was again sent on its mission. It had at that time paid over $35.00 in debts and appeared to be in good health and fit for a lively week of endeavor. Secretary Lincoln asks that it be returned at once in order that its work may be summed up. It will be replaced by a bill of equal denominations, legal tender of Uncle Sam.

Cup Here Next Week

Manager G. Howard Smith received a letter yesterday from St. Paul stating that the trophy, which was won by the Thief River Falls hockey team at the Sports carnival, had arrived in that city and was now being engraved. The cup will be forwarded to this city some time next week. Ray C. Johns, connected with the awarding of the trophy, stated: "It certainly is a beauty and I feel sure it will do a great deal towards boosting the game in your town."

Early Morning Fire

The Roberts Bowling Alley was slightly damaged by fire and water early this morning, evidently the result of a lighted cigar or cigarette having been thrown in the east end of the building by pin setters. The fire was discovered shortly after six o'clock this morning by a girl employed in the W. A. Bishop confectionery, who immediately turned in an alarm. The blaze when first seen gave indications that it had started in one of the cushions in the pin pit, and had already gained a good headway when the firemen arrived. After a few minutes work the flames were subdued. Workmen immediately commenced the work of repairing the structure. The loss to the building is covered by insurance but Mr. Roberts carried no insurance on his fixtures.

WARROAD HOCKEY TEAM TO PLAY AT RINK FRIDAY

Special Train to Convey Players and Large Crowd of Rooters to Crookston For Game on Sunday

Friday evening at 7:15 at the Municipal rink, a hockey team representing Warroad, will clash with the Thief River Falls septet. The visitors come with a reputation of being a fast team, nevertheless it is expected that the home defense guard will best their opponents. All hockey fans are urged to attend the game as the patronage at this game will determine whether or not it will be possible to arrange future games on the home rink or whether they must all be played on strange ice. Its up to you, Mr. Hockey Fan.

For the past week Manager G. Howard Smith and his assistants have been busy securing signers to insure a special train to Crookston on Sunday, when the Northwest Champs will play a return game. On the team that is to oppose the Crookston septet are the same stars that won the Northwest Championship at St. Paul and the same "green" team that played Crookston the first of the season in a "practise" game when Crookston was defeated. Capt. Devenny will not be able to participate in the game, as the result of having his knee cap broken at St. Paul. "Stonewall" Bennett the chap who is cool and nonchalant under a fusillade of shots, stopping the puck with his feet, hands and stick with very little effort, will officiate at his old stand as goal tender. The balance of the line-up will be: point, Durham; cover point, Campbell; center, Backus; rover, R. Hagen; left wing, Rice; right wing, Welch or Flozsdahl.

The best and fastest game of the season is looked for. While the dope leans toward a Thief River Falls victory, Crookston is expected to put up a terrific struggle.

MISTAKE IN MEDICINE NEARLY PROVES FATAL

Miss Eva Golla Suffers For Two Hours Before Relatives Arrive Home--Unable to Call For Assistance

Mistaking a poisonous antiseptic for Epsom salts nearly caused the death of Miss Eva Golla last Saturday evening. The young lady had been to a motion picture theatre and returned to the home of her sister, Mrs. J. H. McKinney about 10:30. Mr. and Mrs. McKinney were out for the evening and Miss Golla was alone in the house. Before retiring she went to the medicine cabinet to get some medicine. She secured what she though to be Epsom salts and took a liberal portion after dissolving the powder in water. At the time she failed to notice her mistake and went to her room where she soon fell asleep. Some time after she awoke with a burning sensation throughout her entire system. She managed to get out of bed but was too weak to stand. On her hands and knees she crawled to the top of the stairs and then down to the living room where she managed to climb into a chair.

She was found in this condition by Mr. and Mrs. McKinney who returned home about 12:30. A physician was at once summoned and Mr. McKinney then carried the girl to her room. As they passed the medicine cabinet in the hall Miss Golla pointed to it and said: "salts." Besides the words, "awful sick" this was all she was able to say. An examination of the medicine cabinet showed that a poisonous antiseptic for external use only, had been mistaken by the girl for salts.

All day Sunday she remained in a semi-conscious condition but on Monday a decided improvement was noticeable and at the present time she is recovering from the effects of the deadly poison.

DOWN M'INTOSH IN GRAND FIGHT

Thief River Boys Play Fast, Snappy Game Which Places Them in Line For District Championship

WITNESSED BY BIG CROWD

Largest Attendance Recorded at Gym This Winter See Old-Time Antagonists Do Battle---Locals at Fosston Friday Night

With each man playing a star game the Thief River Falls high school basketball five trampled over the McIntosh quint last Friday evening at the Lincoln gym by a score of 21 to 13, when the red and blue team, taking advantage of McIntosh's loose playing, made nine baskets and three free throws. This victory is an important one but does not quite decide the championship of the ninth district.

Thief River Falls found the wicker after one minute of playing, which was followed shortly afterwards by a free throw. McIntosh came back and dropped one in immediately. From this point on both teams played vigorously and displayed remarkable teamwork and in several instances highly sensational baskets were made. At no stage of the game did McIntosh have a chance to win, but had many chances to shoot. Through their inability to find the hoop they lost many a fine opportunity to make scores.

Thief River Falls showed a versatility of attack that fairly swept the visitors off their feet at times and brought the ball in a steady series of rushes over the entire length of the gym floor. Just at the moment the player would reach the other end a quick pass to a man near the basket would invariably net the locals a basket. McIntosh showed brilliant flashes of speed and made wild shots for the hoop. The first half ended 10 to 6 in favor of Thief River Falls.

Schmitt, the star guard for the high school, was taken out of the game for fouls during the second half.

Brown at forward placed four field baskets; Linde, two; Holzknecht, three. The locals showed great defensive work, the two guards completely outplaying their men.

By winning the McIntosh game Thief River Falls feels still more confident of winning the ninth district championship, which will allow them to participate in the games at Northfield for the state title. The team goes to Fosston to play tomorrow evening and expects to face one of the hardest gruellings of the year. If they are successful in defeating the Fosston quint, and Fosston defeats McIntosh in their next game, the local team will have "cinched" the title in this district.

The line-up:

T. R. Falls	Pos.	McIntosh
Brown	L. F.	Lindly
Fasel	R. F.	Monger
Linde	C.	Holton
*Schmitt	L. G.	Alrich
Holzknecht	R. G.	Sheie

Baskets for McIntosh: Lindly, 1; Monger, 2; Holton, 1. Free throws for McIntosh: Holton, 1; Alrick, 4.

Referee: Engum of Erskine.

PETITION IS CIRCULATED FOR OPEN POOLROOMS

Over 300 Names Attached to Request Asking That Council Turn Down Proposed Closing Measure

At the last meeting of the city council an ordinance, requiring poolrooms to close at eleven o'clock every night and to remain closed all day Sunday, was given its first reading. This week a petition, asking the council to turn down the proposed ordinance, is being circulated among the business men and at the present time over three hundred have affixed their signature to the document.

Those interested in having the ordinance rejected claim that it singles out the pool rooms while bowling alleys are allowed to remain open and clubs or social organizations are permitted to operate their pool and billiard tables on Sunday. Another point advanced in the petition is that while the state legislature has passed a number of laws regulating pool rooms, the state solons have never seen fit or thought it advisable to close the places on Sundays.

The petition will be presented to the council at the regular meeting next Tuesday night.

The press throughout the state has had considerable to say in commendation of the idea innaugurated by Clerk of Court Ives of Pennington County, and employed for the first time by Judge Andrew Grindeland at the present term of court. It is the presentation of a small American flag to all newly naturalized citizens, accompanying the presentation with a short lecture on what the flag stands for among the nations of the world and the attitude toward it that should at all times be shown by one claiming its protection. In these days when so much is said about hyphenated Americanism the opportunity taken advantage of by Judge Grindeland to impress upon the new citizens the fact that their allegiance henceforth is first to this flag should stamp itself deeply upon the minds of his hearers and much good may result. It is likely that the plan will be taken up and followed generally.

An organization calling itself the Red Lake County Business Men's association, in charge of a campaign having for its purpose the continuation of saloons in that balliwik, points to Thief River Falls as one of the horrible examples resulting from a closing of the dram shops. In an article in the Red Lake Falls Gazette the secretary of this association says: "In dry Crookston, dry East Grand Forks and dry Thief River Falls drunken men are arrested every day and blind pigs which pay no taxes flourish and teach men to violate the law." We know nothing of conditions in the first-named towns, but can state that as far as Thief River Falls is concerned, the statement is absolutely untrue. But two men have been arrested for violation of the liquor-selling law since the prohibiting order went into effect in this city, and these were promptly bound over to the grand jury. Four men have been arrested for drunkenness during the same period, and these were proven to have secured their supplies elsewhere. Just what the advocates of a wet Red Lake county expect to gain by thus making statements so easily disproven is hard to see. If these same parties knew of law violations here they would not only call attention to the fact in a newspaper article, but at once proceed to see that the violaters were placed under arrest. They could secure no better argument for their cause than to show that liquor-selling and drunkenness existed in Thief River Falls in spite of the closing of the saloons. Whatever of illegal liquor vending may have been contemplated was so thoroughly discouraged by the authorities at the outset that there is but slight danger of any attempt in that direction. The officers of the law are doing their full duty, and where this is the case conditions such as pictured by the "Business Men's association" above referred to are impossible in a no-license community. If the people of Red Lake will take the advice of a large majority of those of Pennington they will vote their county dry.

The Times aims to supply its readers with the news—unbiased, uncolored and uncontrolled by any influence save common decency and the public welfare. Sensationalism in newspapers has run its day and will no longer be tolerated by intelligent and respectable readers. News, as such, is a newspaper's stock in trade, for the publication of which it receives money from its subscribers. To withhold this news would be equivalent to taking this money without fulfilling its part of the contract. In every community, however, things are continually transpiring which by no possible stretching of the term can be regarded as "news." For instance: An irreproachable young woman may, through none of her own choosing, become a witness in a law suit, the details of which are sensational. The Times in such case fails to see wherein it is "news" to refer to her in flaring headlines "Jen," or "Pol" or "Molly," as if she were some baggage with whom every barroom swamper in seven counties should be on terms of the closest intimacy. Divorce cases are another class of which this paper prefers to fight shy. The details in these do not ordinarily make the best family reading and no good purpose can possible be served by their publication. When devoid of objectional features of a character only too common, these affairs are generally the results of misunderstandings or regretable occurances, and their discussion by anyone not directly interested can only tend to aggravate the difficulty. Courts everywhere deplore this tendency on the part of sensational newspapers to influence public opinion in matters coming up for trial, and the better publications are careful to avoid bias in their discussion of them. Such things may be news, but the less prominence they are given the better for everyone concerned. The Times will print the news but prefers to leave editorial discussion of matters of this kind to those who seem to think that part of the functions of a newspaper is to act as judge and jury.

A business or professional man who takes up something he knows nothing about and conducts it as a side issue lays himself open to quite a lot of cussing from those of his neighbors who are engaged in supplying that particular line of goods. Most anyone can secure an agency for something or other. Wholesalers and manufacturers of no particular commercial standing or business reputation are always on the lookout for someone to handle their stuff on a commission or for a premium, and they are often able to find people gullible enough to take up their proposition. Such agent never finds the arrangement satisfactory and generally discovers that he has put in a lot of time foisting a worthless article onto his friends and neighbors, besides taking away legitimate business from properly accredited dealers. In some cases these agencies are taken with the object of securing at a low price or absolutely free the agent's outfit offered, the purpose being to drop the matter upon receipt of these and do nothing further, but some folks go into the work seriously, and these last named are always disappointed, while the former are dishonest. Lawyers are not equipped to become successful hardware merchants; ministers might better leave the peddling of soap to someone outside their calling, and dentists should not become agents for some unknown or untried make of automobile.

Young man—and young woman, too, for that matter—you with the regular pay day and who are under no particular necessity of spending all your earnings as soon as they are received, have you ever known the satisfaction that comes from having a bank account? No, but you are going to just as soon as your savings become big enough to warrant a bank in bothering with them. This means that you will perhaps never get started, because there never will come a time when you will be unable to find some kind of use for every cent you get hold of. Start today with a small amount and continue depositing a similar sum every pay day. Constitute it a sort of fixed charge the same as your board bill or room rent and you will be surprised at the headway you will make. Go tell the banker what your intentions are and he will be glad to receive your account and give you helpful advice. He knows that the small regular deposit is the steadily-increasing, long-time account, and these are the ones welcomed. He needs you in his business and you will need him if you are ever to have any business. The day you start your deposit will be the day you really begin building for the future.

The people of Crookston have every right to feel proud over the success of their first land show. The entire affair was admirably conducted throughout and much credit is due those having the work in charge for the thorough manner in which everything was looked after. Not only were farm crops displayed and discussed, but the more important matters of community life and home-making were given much intelligent attention by the speakers and audiences. The land show has given man[illegible] a better understanding of the great possibili[illegible] of this section from an agricultural standpoint, but better than this, the action of those attending in working for the things that will tend to make Northwestern Minnesota a better place in which to live will mark the meeting as one of the most helpful and important ever held in the state. The city of Crookston deserves great praise for the efficient manner in which every detail was attended to, and this is most ungrudgingly forthcoming from every part of the Red River Valley.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, over an heirloom, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the girl, Esther, reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document with the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther. Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so does his companion and cousin, Blair Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley. In stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem.

Arthur Stanley eludes his pursuers and joins Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventuress, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Esther's being received in Fairfax society. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen demented. Marmaduke Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning Arthur is a fugitive, he seeks Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving for the west. Their train is robbed, Vivian losing the diamond, which a slain train robber drops in the desert. The $100,000 he stole is found by Arthur, now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment, and Esther is in Richmond society. Abe Bloom, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman. Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich, he buys Stanley Hall, sold at auction, through Blake, and also provides for Hagar and Esther.

Vivian is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Esther to deliver to Arthur.

Blair joins Vivian in Los Angeles. Durand, "king of diamonds," a crook known to Vivian, goes to a saloon to try to discover the diamond. Arthur appears on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles in care of the physician-crook, Durand. The diamond is found by two billposters, one of whom murders the other for it. Arthur is "doped" by Durand, De Vaux and Vivian.

Blair makes Arthur believe he suffered from hallucination in thinking he saw Esther. Luke is "railroaded" to prison by Blair. Arthur buys the diamond. Blair kills Durand, and later Esther and Smythe return to Virginia, the girl rejoining Hagar at the sanitarium. The diamond is stolen by De Vaux. He is later struck down and the diamond taken after Luke, aided by Quabba, escapes. Esther will not leave Hagar and take her rightful place in society. Smythe examines an old parchment bearing Hagar's pedigree. The diamond is given by Luke to Esther, who will not keep it, but sends it back to Arthur. Hagar and Esther, rejoining the gypsies, travel westward. Arthur, repentant and informed of the treachery of Vivian and Blair, is about to take poison just as Luke breaks into his room, but Luke drinks it by mistake and is then killed by an auto driven by Blair. He has taken some of Arthur's clothing, and the auto disfigures him so that he is taken for Arthur. Blair removes the diamond from his body. Arthur, now nameless, flies in his aeroplane, with which Blair has tampered, and falls near Esther. Hagar dies, forgiving Arthur and clasping Esther's hand in his. The two, assuming rule over the gypsies, are married near Stanley Hall in Virginia. Blair, having Arthur's money and the diamond, obtains the earldom and is struck down by De Vaux, in armor, in the London house of the Stanleys.

CHAPTER LIX.

Arthur Stanley Harding.

BARRED out, Smythe and the lackeys of Stanley House hammered at the bolted door, while within they could hear the shrieks of Lady Vivian resounding through the somber old Tudor mansion.

Smythe, keener than the servants, though not renowned for quickness of wit, sensed that some murderous intruder, cause of the commotion within, had barred the great door.

The lawyer ran around to the back of the house just in time to see De Vaux, who had shed the armor he had concealed himself in, jump through the old Gothic window from the stair landing, the window turning back and snapping shut again.

Charging swiftly down upon the intruder, to him unknown, the lanky man of law made a perfect low tackle, although he was no exponent of football. In any case, he grabbed the hastening De Vaux below the knees and down went thief and barrister.

The diamond from the sky, which De Vaux still clutched, flew from his hand at the impact and, curving through the air, dropped unnoticed into the upturned hat that had fallen upon the ground from the lawyer's pate.

Meanwhile Vivian, in her coronation robes, was bending over the stricken form of Blair, in his court dress and peer's attire.

Instinctively Vivian realized what had happened. She hardly needed to place her hand upon the breast of Blair—the diamond from the sky was gone!

The lackey, who had been carrying out the tea tray from her boudoir when the sound of Blair's fall in the hallway below and the clanging down of the discarded armor told some tragedy had befallen the American earl, ran to the door past his countess and the bleeding earl prone in the hallway.

Vivian In Her Coronation Robes Held Blair's Stricken Form.

With trembling fingers the footman threw back the old bolt, and his frightened fellow servants, shoving and beating outside the door, fell in almost upon their noble master.

Blair by this time was recovering from the dreadful blow that had been dealt him by the mailed figure with the battle mace.

The blood trickled down his ghastly face and empurpled and smeared the snowy shirt front of his court attire and stained the ermine of his coronation robes. Vivian held his stricken form.

With a sickening pang at her heart Vivian realized there would be no pomp and ceremony for Blair, earl of Stanley, and Vivian, his fair countess, to grace this day. George, king of Great Britain, emperor of India and ruler of dominions beyond the seas, would be crowned today, surrounded by the nobles of his realm, but the American Earl of Stanley and his lady would not be there.

Something of this must have passed through Blair's dulled, aching consciousness. "Stop him! He struck me down! The diamond is gone!"

He gasped and fumbled at his blood stained finery as he spoke.

The Gothic window had closed back in place. Seemingly the armored assailant had vanished as if by magic. Only the heap of old mail accouterments and helmet on the floor told how the murderous intruder had hidden.

The servants stood open mouthed and helpless as Blair rose to his feet, assisted by Vivian, and then he roused to drive them out by his fierce commands and curses.

The struggle at the back of the house was strenuous, but brief. The doughty lawyer was no match for the younger and more muscular De Vaux.

Throwing Smythe aside and striking and kicking him viciously, De Vaux sprang to his feet and made off just as the servants, followed by the earl and his lady, came around upon the scene.

Suspicious and ever distrustful of Smythe, Blair refused to believe the lawyer had attempted to stay the mysterious assailant who had struck him down and borne away the diamond.

Forgetting his grievous wound and the blood that trickled down his livid face, Blair screamed hoarsely in his wild frenzy of anger and chagrin. "Pack your things!" he shrieked. "You were in the plot; you were an accomplice, and I'll have your life for it!"

Vivian paled; a chill went through her being. "Come, come!" she whispered tensely. "Come, dear; let us go into the house. You are badly hurt, and the diamond is gone. Never mind, we will recover it!

"Everything will be all right; yes, everything will be all right!" And for the first time in her wicked life that pity which is akin to love filled her heart with a deep affection.

After all, wicked as he was, Blair was a man who had fought his way, unscrupulously and desperately, it is true, but he had fought and never whimpered—and for her! And in this ill hour preceding more evil days to come Vivian felt a wild affection for the stricken man beside her which was never to falter nor weaken.

In faraway Virginia there are love and happiness, increased and greater, in the joyous hearts of Esther and Arthur in the sweet, dear year that has passed.

At the gypsy rendezvous, unvisited by the outside world, Arthur and Esther, man and wife, have seen the happy year speed by and in its course bring them their heart's desire—a child.

Again a joyous gypsy festival, the christening of the little gypsy prince. Again the stranger minister, who was brought to officiate at their wedding from distant Richmond, comes.

This time there is no such wild revelry as at the maypole wedding, which so amazed and interested the good man. But once again the gypsy musicians play, and once again Quabba is drunk with joy.

At the hillside fountain that gushes in a crystal stream into the hollow trough that is nature's own christening font the minister from Richmond dips his fingers and sprinkles the son of Esther and Arthur and says, "I christen thee Arthur Stanley Harding."

Then, after the christening feast and the strange gypsy rites by which a man child is taken into the tribe, the parson departs, wondering, as he has wondered before, what strange gypsies are these who are ruled in love and kindness by a young king and queen bearing every evidence in speech and action of education and refinement.

But that is their secret, and the good man respects it and goes as he has come and says no word to any one, as he has pledged himself to do.

When the pursuit of the murderous thief had halted and when Blair had been helped back to his chambers in Stanley House the still bewildered Smythe, dully smarting under the unjust accusation of Blair, had retrieved his hat and absentmindedly had placed it upon his head.

He winced as he felt a sharp, heavy object fall down within the crown and rap him smartly on the skull. He scratched his head and then in mild surprise felt his fingers entangled in a jeweled chain. He drew it down and gazed at it, dumfounded.

"My word," he said, "if it isn't the bally old diamond from the sky!"

Stupid, as Blair might think, yet wise as the serpent, as Blair might also think, Marmaduke Smythe took the great jewel and placed it carefully in the inside breast pocket of his frock coat and then buttoned that most respectable garment tightly around him.

One afternoon a few days later when Smythe returned to his room, half bedchamber, half old library and office, quarters sacred to him as family solicitor of the earls of Stanley for over thirty years, he found the present earl busied among the papers and documents.

The curious old parchment Hagar had given him—the gypsy family tree of the Hardings—had been tossed upon the floor contemptuously by Blair, who regarded it as some trumpery.

"Pack up your things and get," said Blair. "Your own things and nothing but your own things, remember."

Smythe answered dutifully, but crisply, "As your lordship wishes," and picked up the parchment of the Harding gypsy genesis from the floor.

His bags were already packed, and he now shouldered the gun he had carried in the wilds of America and was turning to remove the deer head, the cherished souvenir of his second visit to the Yankee jungles, when Blair's exclamation, "Leave that alone!" caused him to wheel around startled.

The gun went off, pointed back over Smythe's shoulder, and the heavy charge of shot struck the deer head fair between the eyes. The impact loosened whatever bound the deer head to the wooden mount.

CHAPTER LX.

Love and Peace Dwell at Stanley Hall.

THE deer head dropped forward, held at the lower part of the neck to the mount as though by a hinge. A little puff of dust marked the breakaway, and then from within the hollow neck a little package of yellow parchment, bound with faded tape, fell to the floor.

Smythe picked it up and saw it was annotated in ancient angular handwriting, the ink faded to rust color by age. The lawyer's eyes opened wide as he scanned the faded markings:

Herewithe Ye Marriage Lines Of My First Wyfe Rachel Harding, A Gypsie Mayde, Who Bore Me A Son, But Left Me In Dudgeon And Cast Off My Name, Returning To Her Own People With Ye Childe, Nor Would She See Me More.

(Signed) ARTHUR STANLEY.

Ye King's Province of Virginia, Novembre 6, 1626 A. D.

"What was that? Hand it here!" snarled the American earl.

The mild mannered Marmaduke was roused to revolt. "I jolly well will do nothing of the sort," he retorted.

"I bought that deer head at the auction at Stanley hall, Virginia, and carried it over the whole bally United States. It and all in it are mine."

Blair moved forward as if to take the paper, but Smythe shoved the library table between himself and the angry earl, pinning the latter to the wall in a most undignified position. At other times Blair could have easily freed himself and throttled the contumacious Smythe. But he was weak from the injury he had suffered, and he pressed his hand to his throbbing head and regarded the rebellious lawyer furiously.

And then the door opened, and a group of firm faced, well built men entered.

"I beg your pardon, my lord," said the first of the intruders. "I am Inspector Forde of Scotland Yard. This is an American detective, and he has brought proper requisition papers, and this warrant has been issued against you."

A heavy set man who towered behind the dapper inspector stepped forward.

"I arrest you for the murder of Dr. Henry Lee in Virginia three years ago," he said.

Blair moaned and staggered back against the wall. This, then, was the end. Blake, the Richmond detective, had struck at last!

Without a word Blair stepped forward and held out his hands. For once in his life he was cowed, beaten.

"Oh, not that, my lord!" said the little inspector agitatedly. "It wouldn't be necessary to put handcuffs on a man of your station or anything of that sort, my lord. Doubtless there is some terrible mistake, which will all be rectified, my lord, and I hope you will not hold it against us, my lord, that we were compelled to do our duty?"

Vivian had heard the strange tread of several men upon the stairs, and the startled butler had burst in upon her with the crushing information that officers from Scotland Yard had asked for his lordship, and it was not concerning the thief who had assaulted his lordship, they had said. "For," the trembling butler added, "that was the very first thing I asked them, my lady!"

Vivian ran from her boudoir, her beautiful hair in disorder around her fair shoulders.

One glance told her that fate, weaver of destinies, had called Blair to account for his crimes. She shrieked and fell into his arms.

In prosperity, in their wild schemings, she had not loved him as she did now in the hour of his downfall and humiliation.

At a nod from the inspector Blair's valet brought his hat, stick and street coat. One last, passionate parting embrace and Blair walked with his captors down the great Gothic stairs as a felon—where he late had trod as a noble of the realm!

De Vaux escaped scot free, but without the diamond. Wondering if he had been recognized under the vizor of the helmet or by Smythe, he laid low for several days and then got out his motorcar and gave his chauffeur orders to speed for Dover, where he would take boat and escape across the channel to France.

But it was fated De Vaux should not gain Paris for some time yet to come, nor alone, for as his car sped swiftly through Mayfair it struck a taxicab with terrific force at a street intersection.

The heavy fender on De Vaux's big open car saved it from injury, but the lighter taxicab went over on its side and the uniformed bobby and the driver on the front seat were thrown to the ground.

From the uppermost door of the overturned taxicab a stalwart figure clambered. It was Blair, sometime earl of [illegible]

[illegible] hand he held a heavy walking [illegible] acting with swift intuition, [illegible] and thrust the stick through the handle of the door and behind the taximeter, fastening the door hard and tight.

Within the muffled cries of two men could be heard. De Vaux sprang from his auto and faced Blair in surprise for one brief moment. And then the fellowship of the desperate was swiftly invoked.

"The traps have got me!" cried Blair. And the two adventurers sprang into the big, undamaged car, which, at a sign from De Vaux, the chauffeur backed from the wrecked, overturned taxi, turned in the broad street and darted away.

Ten minutes later, from the rooms of De Vaux, Blair sent the latter, his sworn ally now—such are the strange decrees of destiny—to Vivian with a note. It read:

> Our old friend De Vaux has saved me. You hold the fort as Countess of Stanley. De Vaux and I will search for the diamond from the sky. We are not beaten yet!
> Lovingly, BLAIR.

It may be understood that, in all the desperate intimacy that followed, De Vaux never let Blair or Vivian know that he was the mysterious mailed assailant who had struck down Blair in his coronation robes and had borne away the great jewel, only to drop it in his flight.

* * * * * * *

Stupid in some things, but with the wisdom of serpents in others, Smythe studied the strange documents, evidently placed in hiding in the deer head by the adventurer-colonist, the first Sir Arthur Stanley, in Virginia, three centuries before.

The Harding gypsy family tree gave strange confirmation to the other antique documents. There was Rachel Harding, born in Kentishtown, England, in 1606. A son was born to her, christened Matthew, after her own father.

Then descended from this Matthew, through all the generations, the Matthew born in Virginia in 1860. This Matthew Harding married one Hagar Lee of another gypsy tribe in America. There was noted a son born to these two, but the record was blotted here on the ancient parchment of the gypsy genesis.

A month after the Earl of Stanley's sensational arrest and still more sensational escape Vivian, countess of Stanley, migrated secretly to Paris and Smythe sailed for America with much on his mind.

He searched the ancient colonial records in obscure Virginia parishes and, with the wisdom of serpents, gathered all his proofs.

These proofs were that Arthur Stanley, born son of Hagar and Matt Harding, was strangely Arthur Stanley in name and right and in name and right the direct descendant in a direct line of the adventurer Sir Arthur Stanley and therefore rightfully also the heir to the Stanley earldom and the diamond from the sky.

These proofs and the diamond Smythe brought to Esther and Arthur.

"It's all romantic and very pleasant," said Smythe, "to be a jolly king and queen of the gypsies and to dwell in Arcadian and primitive simplicity with these odd people, don't you know, but you have a duty to perform, a duty to your lineage, and a greater duty to your child. You must accept your rank and the diamond from the sky that I here restore to you."

"We want none of these things for ourselves or for our child," said Arthur, drawing Esther to him tenderly. "Station and wealth bring nothing but sorrow and heartache. The diamond from the sky has been a curse and not a charm against harm.

"It cannot be thrown back to the sky, so let us cast it into the sea and rid the earth of its evil presence. As for the earldom, for myself and my son I deem it better that we be plain American citizens rather than English earls."

And Esther earnestly coincided in this judgment.

"But, your lordship," expostulated Smythe, while Arthur smiled at the title, "your lordship may remain an American citizen and still legally hold a British title. I can cite you an instance, several of them." And Smythe did so.

The skeptical may consult Burke's peerage for the precedence in question.

Quabba Was Now Ruler In Romany.

"Besides," Smythe went on, "you deal doubly unjustly with her ladyship. Her ladyship should at least be mistress of Stanley Hall, as was her mother!"

And so the world and station called Arthur and Esther Stanley back to Stanley Hall, and thus the wrongs of many a grievous year were righted. Perchance the dead, whose living hearts had loved and hated, were more at ease for this.

The guilt of Blair, a fugitive somewhere on the continent, had been known some months. Arthur, freed from all suspicion of the murder of Dr. Lee, received at Stanley Hall, with Esther and their infant son, every heartfelt greeting a generous minded Virginia welcome could offer.

A great reception was given them by the high of Fairfax and the humble. Stanley Hall, brave in flags, saw happy throngs upon its lawns and within its stately walls again.

Vying with the Fairfax band, the gypsy orchestra, led by Quabba, now ruler in Romany instead of King Arthur and Queen Esther, abdicated in his favor, played again the wild Romany wedding strains. Arthur and Esther, with the ever attentive Smythe beside them, held the little American earl in their arms. On his baby breast gleamed the great jewel of the Stanleys, and ever his flower faced young mother murmured to herself and to him, "Oh, child of my heart, not a diamond, but a mother's prayer is the true 'charm against harm!'"

So sped the happy day, and so the soft Virginia twilight gathered. Beneath the lanterns' glow upon the lawns the murmur and the pleasant laughter hushed, as to the accompaniment of violin and guitar a clear young voice thrilled the dusk—ah, how fittingly the singer never knew—with the appealing words of that sweet old melody:

The tale of one who wandered over earth
  By land and sea, by home and foreign shore,
Until into your eyes he gazed and knew
  His search was o'er, his search was o'er.

Esther's bosom stirred with a happy sigh. Arthur's strong arms were about her, the child smiled on her breast and the loyal lips of Quabba kissed her hand ere yet he stole quietly away with the humble gypsy people.

The joy that transfigureth all sorrow, sin and death filled Esther's tender heart. It seemed to her that the loving gaze of Hagar rested on them in the dusk in benediction

And so love and peace dwell again at Stanley Hall. The little American earl, son of Arthur and Esther, has the diamond from the sky, and all ends happily as Hagar prayed—except that somewhere in the world, hidden and perhaps waiting to strike, is the desperate and bitter Blair.

With him are his cunning ally, De Vaux, and also Vivian, she who is the incarnation of desire for the diamond from the sky!

VILLAGE OF ST. HILAIRE

Lincoln Democracy Address.

The people of the village of St. Hilaire and the adjacent community will have the pleasure of hearing Honorable Frank M. Nye give an address on the Lincoln Democracy, at the Imperial hall Saturday, February 26th. Hon. Nye is not a Minnesota congressman but is an orator of some note as well. He has spent many years lecturing on chautauqua courses, and our people can look forward to a treat on this occasion. The following clippings will undoubtedly speak as well for Senator Nye as any feeble remarks that we might make: "In eloquence, in pathos, in argument and in poetry it was the most effective address which has been made in this city for years. It brought back to memory the stirring days of the war, when great orators stirred up patriotism of the people to a pitch never before reached in this country since the days of the Revolution."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Ignatius Donnely in writing about one of Mr. Nye's lectures said: "It roused the admiration of his hearers while it subdued their hearts. He is more than a lawyer, he is an orator, he is more than an orator, he is a genius."

Hon. John A. Johnson, former governor of Minnesota says: "I regard the Abraham Lincoln lecture by Mr. Frank Nye as a very great oratorical effort. I doubt whether the virtues of Abraham Lincoln have been more eloquently depicted by any American citizen. One gains a better understanding of the "great plain citizen of the West" and under the magic spell of Mr. Nye's matchless eloquence the martyred President stands revealed as the greatest American citizen. I esteem it a wonderful privilege to have heard the story of Lincoln's life from the lips of Mr. Nye and believe all Americans would feel a deeper reverence for our institutions and for men of Lincoln's type and character if they might hear the wonderful story of his life from this splendid orator."

This address will be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Civic club and will be well worth attending, and an opportunity which we cannot afford to miss. Admission: adults, 25c; children, 15c.

Tom Thum Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Midget and Tom Thum held at the Imperial hall last Friday evening proved to be a grand success as an entertainment. The little boys were in full dress suits and the girls were dressed in little evening gowns. The two ushers, Alex Lazar and Harold Hoff, escorted the guests from the rear of the hall to the stage where they were introduced to the audience as St. Hilaire citizens. Some of the representations were very laughable and caused a great deal of applause by the audience. When the guests were seated the bridal party made its appearance as: Idella Peterson, ring bearer; Nina Brown and Marie Hoff as pink girls, Hazel Peck and Agnes Peterson as blue girls, Paul Berkhall as best man, and Elna Swanson as brides' maid. Harwood Olson was the groom and waited for his little bride Evelyn Brown, who came in with her "father," Irving McKercher, as Mr. Midget. Albert Elliott acted as the officiating clergyman.

After the farce ceremony and congratulations, ice cream was served to all the little people by four flower girls. It was at this time under the spell of ice cream that the little people forgot the crowd entirely and in an unconscious way furnished great amusement by their actions.

This play was put on under the supervision of the Ladies' Civic club and they, together with Miss Phillips, deserve much credit. A large crowd was present.

Band Concert 25th.

Our village band is again about to appear before our people with another choice and select concert. This is to be the last concert the boys will put on before they start on their tour of the Northern towns with their concert band. If you wish to hear a treat in music you should be present Friday, Feb. 25th, at the Imperial hall. The boys have worked hard for the coming event and the least our town people can do to repay them is to patronize their concert, which is their only way of securing financial aid. If the boys are to continue they must have the aid of our townspeople so let the opera house be filled to its capacity on this occasion and encourage cur good little band along.

Lyceum Course.

St. Hilaire is to have a Lyceum course for next year consisting of four numbers. As the course is under the supervision of the Minnesota University, all the numbers secured are of educational value and guaranteed to be just as they are represented. This is the first course of its kind in our village and it is hoped that it will prove to be a success in every way. The course is given under the auspices of the Ladies' Civic club and the Commercial club which is evidence enough to show that the course will be sufficiently backed.

Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson and daughters, Eva, Nora and Lillie, entertained friends at an elaborate six o'clock dinner at their home on Minnesota avenue, Monday evening. A pleasant evening was spent afterwards in various games. The guests present were: Miss Selma Hoff, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wicks and Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hall.

Civic Club Meeting.

On Wednesday evening, February ninth, Mrs. S. Skottom and Mrs. D. Lazar entertained the Ladies' Social and Civic club at Mrs. Skottom's home on Water street. Two new members were taken in during the business meeting, Mrs. A. Martz and Mrs. N. A. Nelson. A delicious luncheon was served at eleven, after which the meeting adjourned. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. L. Peck.

Card Party.

A delicious luncheon was served and a very pleasant evening was spent. The guests present were the Misses Olga Fricker, Mae Barragy, Olive Porter, Echo Olson, Kate Patterson, Lillie and Nora Johnson, and Mrs. Hall and all declare that Mrs. McAllister and her sister make first-class hostesses.

The Linds intend to put in steel stanchions and equip the barn throughout with all modern conveniences. Work on the new building is to be commenced as soon as the balance of the material arrives.

It is inconvenient, at least, to haul hay continually from the stack to the barn during the winter months

The Silo saves a great amount of labor. You also have a most nutritious food, neatly and compactly stored close at hand, not mentioning the immense saving of feed.

A contrivance which pays for itself within a year by the amount of hay saved. Besides, by materially increasing the production of milk and beef, it proves its own worthiness.

The occupant of the room had undoubtedly been sitting in bed smoking, and then fell back to sleep. The damage was given as $25. At 9 p. m. an alarm was sent in from the Arthur P. Fox residence, 216 Kendall avenue south, where a small smudge was found under the kitchen floor. Mr. Fox endeavored to thaw out a frozen pipe and in doing so, the pipe became intensely heated and ignited the timbers under the floor. When the firemen reached the house considerable trouble was found in getting at the blaze, and necessitated chopping a hole in the floor. The loss was given as $25.

They who went down to the Soo depot Sunday morning were talking about it all day. Between whiles they would talk over times that were just as bad and caused just as much trouble. It had a hard time. You could tell that by the chunks of ice and snow that clung to it. It had gone a long ways and had been away some time. The engineer and fireman told how it was done. They left Kenmare early Saturday morning to try out the route after said route was reported to have been cleared. It went "head-on" with many a snow drift and it's speed was slakened at times. They found themselves in all kinds of trouble and at times it looked like they would have to turn back. The Wheatline train—there, its out now—came in after having been "tied-up" at Kenmare for the past three weeks, as the result of the heavy snowstorms. The line was opened for just the one day and was blown full of snow again in the evening. Monday morning the same train departed again, but only succeeded in reaching Adams, N. D. At Viking they were delayed over an hour, when a mountain of snow was struck.

Henry Werner, instructor in agriculture at the Lincoln high school, who accompanied the champion stock judging team to the Farm Crops show at Crookston last week, did something else besides seeing that the high school boys were awarded the cup. The Minneapolis Tribune says: "One would not be surprised if Henry Werner of Thief River Falls were to get an iron cross or a Carnegie medal as a result of the demonstration at the women's meeting. Mr. Werner did heroic things with sharp knives and meat saws, such things as would have been fatal to ordinary men. Mr. Werner gave a demonstration in the cuts of beef, explaining their relative values as he went along. He is agriculture instructor in the high school at Thief River Falls. Readers of the Tribune will recall him as the man, who several years ago planned and put through an unusual steer fatening project with his class in feeding. The killing of that steer was a great public event and Thief River Falls held a holiday so that all might be there to see. Well, Mr. Werner showed women at the Farm Crops show how to cut up a beef. He had half an animal to work on. He did work. He went at it with saws and cleavers, with knives of various lengths but of unvarying sharpness. With a fascinating skill that was nearly uncanny, he wielded blow after blow with a large cleaver, each time just missing the thumb that didn't happen to be engaged in the process. Then he sliced and he sliced, always seeming about to cut into trouble, but he never did."

COMMERCIAL CLUB REPORT DISCLOSES ACTIVE SEASON

Secretary Lincoln Gives Outline of Accomplishments During Past Nine Months---Noteworthy Record Made by Organization

PRESS PUBLICITY IS IMPORTANT FACTOR

All Undertakings Have Been Self-Sustaining and Close of Fiscal Year Finds Financial Condition of Club Excellent---Over 300 Active Members Now on Roll

To the Executive Committee,
Thief River Falls Commercial Club
Gentlemen:—

In presenting this, the first annual report of your secretary under the new order of things, I wish to call your attention to the fact that it covers in the main the period of nine month since you opened your present quarters and inauguarted the plan of a paid secretary, to devote his entire time to the work of the club and that the activities herein referred to have marked this period of nine months. Your fiscal year closes the second Thursday in February, hence this report includes the three months prior to my coming here, during which time, plans for re-organization were taken up, a membership campaign carried on and the work of clearing the decks for future action completed.

The chief expenditure during that time were made, to clear the slate of obligations incurred during the previous fiscal year and place the club in as good shape as possible, financially, for the new year. Our total receipts for the year include some $334.50 collected prior to May 3, when we opened the club rooms and which were used to pay off obligations of the previous year. By doing this, the club began its work on May 3rd; with a comparatively clean slate and the affairs in good shape. While we are charged with this $334.50 as receipts for this year, it did not become a visible asset for those activities we have since conducted. I make this explanation in justice to my predecessor, who so shaped your affairs as to leave things in excellent shape for me to begin my work. An inheritance of $32.28 was passed on to us May 3, 1915 with few if any old accounts to worry us.

On the other hand, the accomplishments of the club for the year ending this day, in justice, belong to the period of nine months in which time we have occupied these rooms and devoted our time and attention to the work. In every instance referred to, I have cited only such things as have been accomplished during that period. You have in fact three months more to go on before the year during which time we have had club rooms and the auxiliaries for a definite system of work at our hand, will close, namely May 3, 1916.

I wish at this time to compliment your former secretary and the directorate for their work in placing the club in such good shape to begin active work. I desire to express my appreciation of the cordial support you, as members of the directorate and the club generally have given me. Our nine months has been marked by harmony and earnest effort on the part of each individual member of this directorate and by the support of the business men of Thief River Falls, otherwise we should have failed.

You will bear in mind that in order to finance the club, we found it necessary to collect dues in advance from the banks and other sources backing the club financially and that we have not had this money to use in actual activities. It went for furniture and fixtures and it will require carefull financing to bring us out May 3, 1916 in such shape as to satisfy ourselves and this directorate. We can do this and expect to for on May 1, 1916 you will again have available the dues of the larger corporations, which we anticipated early in the spring.

The books of the club were audited February 3, by the auditing committee, having been closed February 1. They were found correct. I have prepared a supplimentary report covering the period between February 1 and this date, February 10 and the books will be closed for the fiscal year today.

You will note that you have actually made a profit during the past year for with an asset of some $1,521.43 actually paid for and the club practically out of debt, you must consider the situation such at this writing.

The obligations which you have incurred are such as can be handled without embarrasing the club, for they include the purchase of the seed exhibit at the auditorium, part of which has been paid for in dues for the year just closing. Again, you have paid off an old account, that of D. P. O'Neill for services during the county division campaign, with dues which would have become an asset for this year's work. You must consider these items in making an estimate of actual work and results during the past year.

CLUB MEETINGS

You have held ninety-two meetings during the fiscal year ending today of which 36 have been executive, 33 special committee and 23 regular club meetings. This does not include several informal meetings held to meet emergencies and to consider propositions demanding prompt action.

These meetings have been attended by the secretary with but few exceptions and recorded in the record books, which has always been accessable to members of the club and the reports of which have been read in open meetings. These records make a total of 118 typewritten pages.

MEMBERSHIP

The club membership is an asset difficult to estimate with any degree of accuracy. Because of an unfortunate elasticity in your by-laws, a member may enjoy club privileges for a period of three months, then become delinquent, if dues are not paid and take another thirty days in which to pay up or be dropped. I would strongly recommend a change in these rules which will require a notice of withdrawal in writing and payment of back dues, before it is granted.

In my best judgment, you can count on 325 stable memberships annually, not counting the extra ones which should be included in the budget fund, a plan adopted with success elsewhere and of which I have spoken before. With two annual events like the club play and the Midwinter fair you can finance this organization satisfactorily and have a fair working capital with which to carry on activities.

PUBLICITY

I have laid claim to some small ability in the matter of securing publicity at a minimum cost and call your attention to the fact that during the past year this club has been to the expense of just $12.78 to let its light shine abroad and the world know something good of Thief River Falls and the territory adjacent to it.

This amount was spent for the city loyalty contest prizes and a few cuts I secured to embellish news stories with. You have had over 168 columns of reading matter devoted to farming, civic advancement and community activities, published in the form of news stories in metropolitan dailies with circulations ranging from 18,000 to 80,000 daily. These items have NOT BEEN highly colored stories, nothing sensational or determined to the city has been included in them but such facts and figures as would have cost this club 20 cents an agate line in the dailies in which they appeared. Counting 14 lines to the inch, it would have cost $2.80 for every inch if the sign "Adv." appeared after the item. Figure 21 inches to the column and you can get at the cost of publicity when you HAVE TO PAY CASH FOR IT. Approximately $10,000.00. You had a fair demonstration of this cost last year, for I note that you paid in one lump sum over $600 for advertising in city papers, while the little booster story is daily, in its modest, unassuming but pleasing way letting the world know that you have a live, progressive city and a glorious country surrounding it, with every possibility open to the man who will take advantage of opportunity.

You have had scenes of your Market Days published in the "American City," the largest and considered the best publication devoted to community up-lift and advancement in the United States. These cuts have been augmented in value by salient facts as to how the Market Days were conducted, number of farmers attending and general results. Local newspapers and local correspondents of outside papers have done their part and the local press in particular is worthy of your most cordial appreciation for their co-operation. "A newspaper can make or break a proposition", is an old saw which is pretty near to the line and I wish to emphasize that I personally fully appreciate what has been done by Messrs. Cutter and Ross in the work of honest effort and publicity, to aid this organization.

The Thief River Falls Hockey team secured, by their victory at St. Paul, advertising which, from a fair estimate would have cost you $1,000, considering position, cuts and the keen interest the public took in the reports of the games in which they engaged. Now get at the very bottom of all this, sift it down and then ask yourselves, where it all came from? The commercial club is the answer. Bread cast upon the waters finally returning to you.

We have also used to advantage booster slips, inserted with letters of business men and carrying brief but snappy tidings of great joy to the hungry multitudes anxious to learn more of the most wonderfully developing country on the face of God's green foot-stool. Real estate men tell me that they were surprised to receive almost direct results from a few of these little booster messages and that the news stories relative to this country have aided them in land sales materially.

I am emphasizing these facts simply to bring home to you more forcibly just what can be done with printer's ink if you know how to handle the brush, and your club has something of a standing with the fraternity.

On the occasion of the annual convention of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs, your secretary was invited to read a paper on "How to Aid The Smaller Cities." This paper was prepared and given, the directors seeing fit to have your club represented at that convention. One city daily carried a column in excerpts from that paper, it appeared, with cut of the secretary at top of column, "reading matter alongside," to use the trade expression and the words, "Thief River Falls Secretary has good advice", etc; appeared in the headline. I refer to this, not because of any personal advertising it may have given me, but because it advertised Thief River Falls; that was what I was after for the secretary's duties, if he knows his business, are to saw wood and let the other fellow measure up the cord after it is ready for inspection.

In order not to encroach upon the essay order of things, I have prepared a chronological statement of the more important activities of the club, beginning with the opening of the club rooms on May 3, 1915, at which time the secretary took up his duties.

This summary follows:

May 12—Govenor Hammond guest of club at formal opening and occasion of the dedication of the public library.

Feb. 4—Thief River Falls hockey team won cup in amateur hockey contest in St. Paul.

OTHER ACTIVITIES

In addition to the foregoing, you have put on a successful home talent play netting the club $228.22. Inauguarted a system of club lunches, attended on an average by between 80 and 90 business and professional men, at which subjects of general interest were discussed and unity of purpose encouraged. Aided in securing a Physicians Hospital. Co-Operated in the plan to purchase additional school grounds. Secured the district Dairymen's Convention for 1916. Entertained representative of American Play-Grounds association, one of thirty cities in the state to be afforded this privilege. Aided in financing the hockey team in its trip to St. Paul in which they won a signal victory, putting Thief River Falls on the map as the home of winter sports, red-blooded young men and live community interest. Entertained Guernsey breeders and kindred organizations interested in dairying at club rooms. County organization and two auxiliary breeders associations formed. Outlined plan of merchant's convention to be held in the spring. Inauguarted the first mid-winter fair held in the city, netting the club $187.71 and attended by approximately 1,200 people. Secured a produce house for the city to handle farm produce and make this a purchasing and distributing point for the same. Other activities have been; co-operation with the Woman's Club in plan to beautify city, small beginning made. Donated free booth at fair for the band, held club dinner in its interests and encouraged the musical organization in plans for the coming year. Placed Thief River Falls on the routing list of the larger circus organizations, securing the Hagenbech-Wallace shows for the season of 1915. Conducted a city loyalty contest, participated in by students of the city schools and encouraging interest and co-operation among the young people. Established a board of censure and protected the public from unworthy solicitations.

In this respect it may be said that the club generally has no knowledge of the number of transients who apply for a permit to solicit funds during the year and of the caution being exercised by the committee in charge of this important responsibility.

But recently, a cripple called at the office of the secretary and requested permission to solicit funds to aid in "the care of a dependent mother and sister" and to finance over other difficulties. The case was investigated and the permit refused. The following day this same individual was arrested for the theft of a fountain pen and on suspicion of having been guilty of other petty thefts. This is one of a number of instances where the club has stood between the public and fakers and imposters.

The drainage committee and its work stands out prominetly in your achievements for it has brought actual results. A bill has been introduced in congress for a survey of the Red Lakes and Red Lake river territory, with an idea of eventually relieving the flood conditions. Not only this and perhaps of more practical benefit, is the fact that work on a temporary revetment along the river in the town of Hickory has actually been begun and the same financed by appropriations set aside by Pennington county, and water power interests along the river south of this city. This drainage committee and it work has attracted much interest and commendation.

The mid-winter fair proved a success far beyond your expectations and may be made an even greater one next year. It was unique in the fact that local merchants arranged booths, not to sell oods but as an advertising medium, auto dealers exhibited their latest models and community interests were given prominence in the display by the high school manual training and girl's departments. The farmers were afforded a section, free of cost and prizes, as liberal as the committee felt that it could afford, awarded thus bringing into closer unity the interest of the business man, the city schools, the farmers and residents of the rural districts. That this will become an annual event and be conducted along a more elaborate scale is my hope and anticipation.

The new Physicians' hospital stands as a monument to the enterprise of local physicians and the co-operation of this club. Your committee lent its moral support to the proposition and appeared before the county commissioners in the interests of an appropriation which was later voted. Nothing undertaken during the past year can be considered more of a credit to this community than this well equipped, modern and ably managed institution devoted to public health and expert medical service.

The club went on record as favoring the purchase of additional school grounds and aided materially in bringing the proposition before the voters in a favorable light with the result that we have planned for the future and are well equipped to care for the needs of the growing generation. It is my opinion that this is one of the most important matters to have received your attention and that you will in future years take a pride in the fact that you gave the plan your moral support and aided the men who, with an idea to the future of the youth of our city have brought about this purchase of additional school grounds and improvement to your school property.

You have inauguarted a plan of Market Days and free public auctions for farmers which has been copied elsewhere and tended to cement the feeling of co-operation and united interest between the men who till the soil and those whose interests are along commercial lines. It is only necessary to ask any fairminded farmer in this section what he thinks the attitude of the commercial club of Thief River Falls is towards the farmer, to discover that the old suspicion, so prevalent in almost every community, is dying out and that the farmer has come to consider our business men his friends and to feel that this is his home city and logical trading point.

The commercial club, through the activity of local merchants who put their time and money into the campaign, secured the installation of the Gas Car service between this city and Noyes. While it is a fact that this service was not maintained for any great length of time, you accomplished your purpose and it is general belief that the railroad, in its own good time will see the advisability of a permanent day service on this particular line and inaugurate such.

ORGANIZATION

If there is anything in organization, and there is, you have much to feel well satisfied over in this respect. Commercial clubs are not like Topsy, who "just grew." They do not grow of themselves but it is by arousing and maintaining public interest and showing an earnest effort to do something for your community tat a successful commercial club is maintained.

From a membership of about 200 last May, you have grown to number 325 bona fide members, not including the additional memberships taken out by the larger firms and which by right, as I stated when I came here, belong to the budget fund, a system adpoted by successful commercial clubs elsewhere and which has proven most effectual.

With this membership and organization, you have made it possible to sound the public pulse on any proposition within a comparatively short space of time, merely a public notice of meeting, a gathering of club members and honest, friendly discussion of the subject before you.

It is worth anything, I ask you, to have approximately one hundred of your business men meet here twice a month for a lunch and social hour and later the discussion of subjects of vital interest to you all? Can this be done without organization and can organization be made effectual without a place to meet, a system of doing things and an interest on the part of all identified with it? You know the answer.

Trade extension and better acquaintance go hand in hand. Your club planned and carried out one of the most successful auto runs it has ever been my experience to have been identified with. A tour to Roseau, stops at some eleven towns enroute and to cultivation of your friends and neighbors in those towns a distance of over 150 miles covered in a day on scheduled time and without an accident of any moment, is something of an accomplishment and I have no doubt but that your auto tours of this year will be equally successful and have the result for which they are conducted, namely, better acquaintance and a reaching out, in a legitimate way, for more trade.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

Acting in harmony with the old saw, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," the club has advocated suitable facilities for public enjoyment of healthful out-of-doors recreation and in co-operation with the city council, Park Board, School Board and other civic departments has been instrumental in bringing about results.

A community ice rink has afforded much pleasure to the general public and been maintained at the expense of the city. On Nov. 25, the secretary issued a call to those interested in hockey and winter sports and a meeting was held at the club rooms November 27, at which a temporary organization, known as the Thief River Falls Skating Club, was perfected with W. A. Devenny as president, T. B. Stauff vice-president and C. L. Hansen secretary. C. A. Pitkin and the club secretary were made members of the directorate in addition to the officers.

Through the public-spiritedness of Winton-Nichols Lumber Co., and the Prichard Company, donations of lumber for the foundation walls of a hockey rink were made and the city laid the lumber. Later, the hockey players organized and began active practice for play. Players put considerable money into suits and equipment and went at the game with a vim warranting public support. The commercial club and members of the directorate aided in financing the team on their successful trip to the mid-winter sports carnival in St. Paul and local business men went down into their pockets to aid the team. The result has been heralded far and near, for the Thief River Falls team lived up to the expectations of its friends and brought home the trophy cup as champions of the northwest in amateur hockey. Much good publicity resulted and the team, by their success has put this city on the map for winter sports and young atheelets with red blood and the "pep" to win for "The Old Home Town."

This city was one of thirty in the state to entertain the representative of the Playgrounds Association of America, a dinner being held at the Brumund hotel at which Charles Frederick Weller, national secretary, gave an interesting talk on the subject of play-grounds and community interest in the same. The Board of Education endorsed the plan outlin-

PENNINGTON MEN HONORED AT CROOKSTON LAND SHOW

Senator O'Neill Presiding Officer at Good Roads Meeting and Contributed Much to Enthusthusiasm and Success of That Feature

"COMMUNITY COOPERATION" BY SUPT. HAY

Town and Country Now Indissolubly Bound Together and Best Results Can be Obtained Only by Intelligently Working in Harmony is Belief of Local School Head

Prize winners in farm crops and stock judging were not the only things contributed to the Crookston land show by Pennington county last week. Citizens of the county took active part in the discussions at the meetings and their services in this regard were of such nature as to call forth the most flattering comment from all sides. Senator D. P. O'Neill of Thief River Falls, was the presiding officer at the "Good Roads' Day" meeting, and was a conspicious success. The Crookston Times says that the senator made an ideal presiding officer and kept the enthusiasm at a high pitch at both the afternoon and evening sessions.

Superintendent J. H. Hay of the Thief River Falls schools, gave an address on "Community Co-operation," and this proved to be one of the most noteworthy features of the entire show. Supt. Hay has given deep study to this subject and he was listened to with much attention. His address in part was as follows:

"Any discussion of the necessity of "Community Co-operation" at this period in our history, is academic—is a waste of time and effort. All admit the fact, that under the conditions which obtain today, we are dependent upon each other for our profits and pleasures. Whether we favor the complexities of our relations with our neighbors in town and country, or look upon them with distrust, the fact remains that we are now indissolubly bound into one family. This family consists, first, of those in immediate towns, our own township or neighborhood, and gradually extends its circumference, so as to enclose our county, then our district, and finally, the state and nation.

"Briefly, the causes for this interdependence consist of the telephones, superior mail service, autos, good roads, abundant publications, improved schools, co-operative movements in marketing, buying and manufacturing, highly efficient machinery, greater wealth, and a host of other activities closely related to our business and pleasure. No one can be found today who favors a return to the individualism of grandfather's times.

"With all the rush, the bustling and jostling of our crowd today, we prefer this high gear existence, so long as the driver is efficient and the tonneau filled. In other words, we are a communized people, thinking and acting in mass and touching elbows with our fellows at every turn. The problem which confronts us today, is not the consideration of how we may excite those agencies which might bring us into close relationship, but how to organize those agencies and activities which already have perfected community interests. We wish to direct our efforts along the lines of establishing harmony between the various members of our several families in order to increase their comfort, convenience and profit.

"Every town needs a strong, rich, well developed rural community about it. Fortunate, indeed, is that rural territory which has in its neighborhood a live, progressive town or city with its ready and continuous market. These two bodies of people are brothers of one family. The social and business relations of each are closely interwoven and highly reciprocal. Wherein the community interests of these two groups have not been directed, where suspicion has been permitted to acquire a footing and distrust has disorganized a natural and profitable relationship, then can a strong fearless initiative from some Commercial club or Farm club compel a return to normal, sane conditions. Easily acquired wealth and business prosperity invites and encourages exclusion or seclusion.

"Hard times, unusual climatic conditions or other ill luck are sometimes necessary to force members of the community family to recognize the necessity of cooperation—of giving and taking. However, every community possesses leaders who recognize the wisdom of team work and we ought to give them sympathetic and ready encouragement.

"The suspicion and envy, which too often characterize the small rural community, can be overcome by attempting to organize all concerned into a force for social, religious or business uplift. In other words, a new problem for solution, and for consideration will often solidify a whole neighborhood. I find that the most pressing need is intelligent leadership. Our clubs of various kinds, and our schools are developing these, and they will naturally assert themselves. Every farmer and every citizen of town or city can afford to listen to and seriously consider the suggestions of those who are attempting to cement communities into harmonious, working units. Today our vision recognizes but small bodies of community workers.

"We admit the necessity of farm clubs, corn clubs, boys' and girls' clubs, and commercial clubs. We are able today to think only in club units. In some sections, they are recognizing and living in county units, and in a few places, such as the "Red River Valley," in district unions. Our visions must broaden with our progress and enlightenment so that we can think and act in district and state units as easily as we now do in small club standards. This is coming and we can hasten its advance by earnestly striving to encourage and develop leadership, by seeing in our colleague a partner rather than a competitor; by "doing our bit" for our own township, our village, city, district, state and nation."

School Notes

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held at the office of the secretary, Mr. Pitkin, last Monday evening.

McIntosh went down to defeat on Friday on the local floor in an extremely fast game of basketball. The home boys play this week at Fosston. It is said that the Fosstonites have never been defeated on their own floor, but all rules have exceptions and it is probable that the time is at hand for the exception.

Miss Johnston, who has taught at Wayzata for five years, now has charge of Miss Schrepel's room in the Washington.

Miss Bleissner, an advanced graduate of the River Falls Normal, Wisconsin, arrived this week to assist in two of the crowded rooms in the Knox.

Next week the bus drivers will begin making daily reports of the children carried.

The improvement in the grade writing under the Palmer System, now in use in the schools, is so marked that there is no question but what this plan of penmanship is the best ever tried here.

Workmen removed the huge drifts of snow which had recently accumulated about the front doors of the Lincoln and Washington.

Two purses were found last Friday evening at the Lincoln after the basketball game. They are at the office awaiting the owners.

The silver cup, won last week by Mr. Werner's class at Crookston, now occupies a prominent place in the assembley room. Later, it will be placed on exhibition in a down town window.

The stock judging team and their instructor were tendered a complimentary dinner at the Lincoln dining room on Wednesday evening, at which the members of the Board of Education and wives, the high school faculty and President Vincent of the state university, were present.

Four orations on Mexico by members of the Freshmen-Sophomore literary society featured the opening exercises at the Lincoln Tuesday morning. Two of them will appear in the local press next week.

HOW APPENDICITIS CAN BE PREVENTED.

Thief River Falls people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This simple mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. Adler-i-ka has easiest and most thorough action of anything we ever sold. F. J. Stebbins, druggist.

COMMERCIAL CLUB REPORT DISCLOSES ACTIVE SEASON

ed by Mr. Weller and made an appropriation, conditional with support from the Park Board, to promote the work. This matter is held in abeyance for the time but that much good resulted from the address is generally admitted. The lecture was secured at no cost to the city or commercial club.

Bath houses, boating, and a keener appreciation of the advantages found here by reasons of two beautiful streams of water with natural parks along their banks, is being talked and another year will undoubtedly see the hopes of those offering these suggestions realized.

A Town and Country club with suitable golf links, was advocated the past summer but taken up too late to carry out successfully. The commercial club fathered this idea and even now, tentative plans are being made for active work along this line in the spring. It will put this city in the ranks of other progressive towns and afford an opportunity for out-of-doors recreation in a sport recognized as healthful and invigorating to mind and body.

The club has undertaken a number of projects for the betterment of the city and work is well under way to accomplish the results sought. It is not advisable at this time to go into these in detail but they will be recorded in due time and at any event, whether it be of dailure or success, the club will have the satisfaction of having exercised its best effort to bring the best results about.

This concludes my report for the year, with some elaboration upon such activities as I considered of most importance and with a number of lesser accomplishments unmentioned but which go to form the collected units of community life, loyalty and effort, into one satisfactory whole which must now and always will spell the significant work, "Success."

Boost Those Who Boost You

Here is an extract from a letter just received from a Thief River Falls citizen:

"I think that if you send a representative up here at this time most of the people will cancel the Minneapolis papers and take yours because the Minneapolis papers did not give the Thief River Falls Hockey Team advertising during the Carnival and the Commercial Club had to write the Journal before they would even print the scores of the games.

"Hope you will send a man up, and if boosting will do any good there are a few of us here who are with you."

The St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch always print the news, and are only too glad to have had an opportunity to direct public attention to Thief River Falls and its excellent Hockey Team.

Sending out representatives, at the present high cost of publishing a newspaper, is too expensive in proportion to results, but we assure the citizens of Thief River Falls that we will sincerely appreciate every subscription or boost that we receive from them.

Mrs. Andrew Blomquist, who for the past few years has been an inmate of a hospital at Fergus Falls, died at that place Tuesday of last week. She was brought here and buried at the Cedar cemetery Friday.

George Reushank of Rollis, has traded his homestead for one of J. B. Grobey's business houses on Hill avenue and will open a harness shop in the near future. Mr. Reushank and family will occupy rooms at the Northern hotel until spring.

"Joe" Wessel, the candy man who was appointed U. S. Marshall, was in town last week. He will begin his new duties March 1st.

Middle River high school is to have a piano. An organ has been in use for a long time, but with a high school orchestra in view the organ will not do.

Middle River had a fire scare last Thursday. The fire department responded nobly and in a few minutes the fire was put out. The fire started in the office of Sanberg's large livery barn and had a good start when it was discovered. The loss was about $150 all of which was covered by insurance. The village water supply is a success, the large fire pump only lowered the water in the reservoir eight inches in putting out the fire, which means that there is enough water to run the engine for half a day, while last year there was only enough to run the pump about 10 minutes.

Olaf Larson of Thief River Falls, brother of Mrs. Olof Olson, arrived here last Saturday and spent a few days visiting at the Olson home.

Mrs. S .O. Ostgaard of Gatzke, passed through here on her way to Warren, where she will consult a physician.

The village of Williams in Beltrami county, has a paper—volume 1, number 1 of the "Northern Light" which was published recently.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills.

Here's Thief River Falls testimony.

Verify it if you wish:

Charles J. Krause, 707 Arnold avenue north, Thief River Falls, says: "I was bothered for quite awhile by pains in my back. When I lifted anything, a sharp twinge was sure to catch me across my loins and make it hard for me to straighten up. Mornings, my back was very painful and I knew well enough that the trouble was all due to my kidneys, as the kidney secretions were unnatural. I think it was the strain of heavy lifting that affected my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills removed the trouble and I haven't had a return of it."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Krause had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—F10-17.

Some Of The Results Obtained At My Clinic.

Having been aware of the short comings of medicine and surgery in treating diseases, I equipped my office years ago with the necessary apparatus for the carrying out of Nature Cure teachings in my practice, and below is a list of cases to show the results I have been able to obtain by so doing:

In the spring of 1913 I treated two cases (a man and a woman, both middle aged) for Chronic Articular Rheumatism of four and seven years standing, respectively, with complete relief in two and three weeks' treatments. In the early spring of 1913 I treated two young men and in the summer of 1914, another young man, all for Sciatic Rheumatism, for about two weeks each with complete relief and no signs of any return since in any of the cases.

I recall four cases of Pneumonia (two young men and two young ladies) where the disease was broken in 24 hours.

I have treated several cases of Eczema with curative results; but one case in particular that I treated in the fall of 1912 was that of a young lady with a very chronic type of the disease of several years standing, who after having tried all sorts of doctoring with no avail, was completely relieved under my care.

Several cases of Acute Rheumatism have been cured in the shortest possible time under my treatment. All sorts of skin and veneral diseases are rapidly cured by Nature Cure Methods.

Any other disease, no matter of what nature, such as: Asthma, Bronchitis, Pulmonary Tuberculosis, Liver, Stomach, Bowel (including Appendicitis), Kidney, Nervous and generative organ troubles, as well as diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, etc., are best handled by Nature Cure Methods.

The most remarkable cure I have obtained is that of a young boy who, after having been given up by two of the leading Thief River Falls physicians for Abdominal and Lung Tuberculosis, was cured by my methods four years ago and is well today. Since then I have relieved a girl for Tuberculosis of a Kidney by the same treatment and I have at present a boy under my care who was entirely crippled three years ago with Rheumatism and Hip and Ankle Tuberculosis in connection, but who is now progressing nicely toward recovery.

Respectively submitted,

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

NEW TYPE AND MATERIAL ADDED TO TIMES PLANT

Complete Advertisement Dress is One of the New Features—More Important Improvements Contemplated

The Times force last week began the installation of a large amount of new material to be used in the printing of this paper as well as in the production of the best commercial work. The tendency in all modern printing offices now days is to standardize the plant, using as a basis some distinctive, easily-read type face and making the balance harmonize with this. To this end the Times publisher has chosen the famous "Caslon" series as a foundation body, and throughout the entire type equipment the influence of this popular face will predominate. This particular letter was chosen from a number of candidates because of its clean-cut lines, free from any suggestion of filigree work or ornamentation that only serve to make type grotesque and unintelligible. "Type was made to read." This is the motto of the Mergenthaler Linotype company, and the Times believes that it should guide everyone in the purchase of printing material. A glance at our advertisements will show what we mean. They appear dignified, are easily read and add an air of substantiality to the subject matter contained in them. In the production of commercial work also this letter is in great favor in the larger cities. It is plain but neat, and this brings the best results in printing of any kind.

Taken to Children's Home

Upon the alleged failure of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Kehoe, who reside in the township of Norden, to provide the proper support and care for their two children, Millard, age 3, and Margaret, age 6 months, they were taken to the Children's Home at St. Paul last Thursday evening by Rev. E. P. Savage, one of the district superintendents. Judge of Probate Wm. Michelet conducted the hearing in the afternoon. Mrs. Kehoe stated that they did not have funds enough to care for both of the children but could provide for the smaller one. It will be remembered that a short time ago Mrs. Kehoe appeared in Municipal court charging her husband with felonious assault with a loaded rifle. Mrs. Kehoe stated that her husband was at the present time employed in the woods and that at no time has he sent in funds to provide for the family. When Mrs. Kehoe took the stand, Attorney Michelet questioned her and revealed some very damaging evidence. Mr. Michelet said: "I do not believe in separating children from their parents merely for the fact that poverty exists in the home. Some of the greatest men the world has produced were the children of parents who were poor. I would rather see the county stand the expense and let the children remain with their devoted mothers, but I do believe in separating children from their parents, when no thought is given for their future and where the mother spends her time resorting to the practises revealed during the cross-examination."

Ditch No. 41 Established

The petition of H. C. Jarr and others for a public drainage ditch in the counties of Red Lake and Pennington was considered yesterday at the court house, Judge Andrew Grindeland presiding, and resulted in the establishing of Judicial Ditch No. 41. The ditch will commence at a point twenty feet east of the southwest corner of section seven, township 152, north, range 41 west, thence south and parallel with the twenty feet east of the section line along the west side of sections 18 and 19 and along the west side of section 30 for a distance of 3,660 feet, where the ditch intersects with a coulee and terminates and has its outlet in said coulee.

Holt Has $1,000 Blaze

Spontaneous combustion of kerosene oil is believed to have caused the fire that damaged the Solum Brothers' Cash Grocery store at Holt yesterday morning. The fact that the fire was discovered before it had gained any headway, prevented a greater loss. The blaze originated in the warehouse, where cans of oil are kept and badly damaged goods which were stored in the room. When the alarm was given several of the citizens armed themselves with hand chemicals and after a fight succeeded in stopping the flames. The total amount of damage done to the structure and goods is given to be in the neighborhood of about $1,000.

Large Audience Hears Vincent

President George E. Vincent of the University of Minnesota, closed the Lyceum course last evening, when he delivered an address on "The Mind of the Mob" before one of the largest audiences ever gathered in the Auditorium to hear a speaker. SYD CHABLIN IN "A SUBMARINE PIRATE"

This great film was made with the co-operation of the U. S. Navy and had to be passed upon by Secretary Daniels himself. The principal scenes were staged aboard one of the Government's Pacific Coast submarines and also aboard a battleship.

While a comedy in character, "A Submarine Pirate" displays submarine work pictorially in such detailed fashion as never before seen on the screen even in the best of the naval pictures sent over from Europe.

Syd Chaplin, one of the cleverest members of that family, as a waiter who dons the costume of an admiral in the U. S. Navy and with stolen papers takes command of a submarine, is excruciatingly funny. See him at the Princess Tuesday and Wednesday.

SUNDAY.

Colonel Covington Halliday, a true type of southern gentleman, is possessed of one vice, gambling. He goes to war and with him his faithful boy servant, Dan, a black boy of his own age.

He returned home after the war and finds his parents dead and he is the owner of Halliday House.

About twenty years later his passion for cards returns and a couple of clever crooks, Bantee and Daly, through a swindle on a horse race get him to mortgage his home and when the mortgage falls due he is turned out of his house.

He leaves for New York with his granddaughter and faithful servant, Dan. New York, he finds is no place for a Virginian who has no knowledge of business. The colonel retaining his pride, refuses assistance from a Yankee friend and is forced to stand in the bread line.

Lewis, an attorney who has met the colonel's grand-daughter and taken a liking to her, trys to help her out. Bentee shoots Daly in a duel and hires Lewis to defend him, placing great confidence in Lewis. Bantee gives some important papers to Lewis, who finds proof of the swindling in the papers and as a fee for defending Bantee, he takes Halliday House and returns it to the Colonel. P. O. Langjie, Ole Hegland and P. A. Dahl were in Thief River Falls Saturday for the purpose of getting the new pews for the Lutheran church in the town of Mayfield, which were made by the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company.

This church was erected last summer and the pews were made possible by the Ladies' Aid society, the ladies giving suppers, sales and entertainments to raise the necessary funds. Twenty new pews were purchased at a cost of $250. Rev. Sievert Lerffulom is pastor of the church and he has a congregation of thirty-two families.

Hockey Dance.

In order to help defray expenses in bringing the Warroad septet here Friday, the Thief River Falls Hockey association will give a dance that evening at the Auditorium. This dance is not given for a source of personal revenue but simply to pay the expense of the visiting team while here. Manager Smith says that the receipts of the past games would not bring Mavie here and the association is flooded with requests from out of town teams for games with Thief River Falls. They no doubt would like to see the Northwestern Hockey champs in action.

METAL MARKET IS SAID TO HIT AUTO MAKERS

A letter from the head of one of the big automobile factories to his Minneapolis representative in response to a personal request for information concerning the supply of metal available for automobile manufacture reveals what is to dealers and buyers of cars a most alarming situation and one that may result either in an absolute stoppage of deliveries on cars or an unprecedented rise in price on most of the machines.

The letter was shown to the management of the Minneapolis Automobile show held January 29 to February 5 at the Armory.

The letter follows in part:

Prices Take Jump.

"Referring to your letter of December 29 in regard to the metal situation the following prices will perhaps be of interest to you. The prices in the first column are the market prices for March 1, 1915, and the prices in the second column are the prices at which these metals are quoted at the present writing:

	March 1.	Jan. 12.
Tin	$.402	$ .41
Copper	.147	.235
Lead	.039	.235
Lead	.039	.059
Spelter	.105	.174
Antimony	.23	.41
Aluminum	.18	.55
Steel	1.10	2.00

"This simply gives you a line on the cost of materials entering into the construction of motor cars. Aluminum, while quoted at around 55 cents can only be had in large quantity by paying from 65 to 80 cents per pound. Steel, either open hearth or alloy, can be had in from three to five months and orders that were not on schedule before the first of November are going to be treated rather badly on deliveries. Tubing, in quantity, is being sold on an eight months' delivery basis. Leather has increased in price 15 to 25 per cent since last March, depending on the quality desired.

Buy your Buick before the price goes up. Fred D. Haug. (Adv).

"Freshies" Win Hockey Game

The first game of hockey played by high school players was played on the Municipal rink between the Freshmen and Sophomore-Junior teams, the Freshmen winning by a score of 3 to 2. The game was fast and well played considering that the contest was the first that any of the boys had played in and their observation of the rules of the game and team work were commendable.

The scoring for the Freshmen was done by Bergraff, Medderigh and McCrystal. Brudie carried the puck well and assisted his forwards in scoring. Provencher played a strong defense game for the Freshmen, blocking attacks on his goal and feeding the forwards well.

For the Sophomore-Junior team Zeh starred, scoring goals and playing a strong game on defense. This player is too fast a forward man not to be used there and his name is to be looked forward to in future Thief River Falls regular teams along with Bergraff.

McDaniels and Rogers played a consistent game and great work can be looked forward to from Stebbins, who is new at the game but shows great promise.

Line-up:

Freshmen	Pos.	Soph.-Junior
Bishop	g	Steen
Mostue	p	Stebbins
Provencher	cp	Zeh
McCrystal	c	Bovey
Brudie	r	Rogers
Meddreigh	lw	McDaniels
Bergraff	rw	Sundahl

Time 15 minute halves. Extra period, 10 minutes.

Scores: Freshmen: McCrystal, Bergraff, Meddreigh; Soph.-Junior: Zeh, 2.

Referee: G. Howard Smith.

Penalties: Sundahl, 1 min.; Zeh, 1 min.

MAN KILLED IN LIQUOR FIGHT

Olaf Vatne, Star Township Homesteader, Dead as Result of Assault by Jens Dahle, a Neighbor.

CALLS FOR HELP;IS STRUCK

Had Reached For Telephone to Summon Assistance When He Was Thrown to Floor With Sufficient Force to Dislocate Vertibrae.

Olaf Vatne, about 38 years of age, a homesteader living in the township of Star, died at the Grygla hospital on Tuesday forenoon as a result of an assault by Jens Dahle, aged 22, a neighbor.

The only witness to the affray which resulted in the death of Vatne was Ole Danielson, another neighbor of the dead man. Dahle is in jail here and will be given a preliminary hearing before Justice Tarrant Saturday.

The story of the homecide, as near as Sheriff LaBree and County Attorney Kjomme have been able to garner the facts, is about as follows: Dahle came to the Vatne place and claimed that some of the liquor in the possession of the latter was his, Dahle's property. This Vatne denied and a quarrel arose in the course of which the visitor threatened to kill the homesteader if the whiskey was not produced. Becoming alarmed for his safety, Vatne reached for the telephone with the intention of summoning assistance, when Dahle jumped onto him and threw him to the floor with sufficient force to break the neck of his victim.

Danielson summoned help and the injured man was taken to the hospital at Grygla, where Dr. Atkins found upon examination that the vertebrae had been dislocated and that death was only a question of a short time. The injured man lingered until Friday forenoon, when he died without having regained consciousness.

Sheriff LaBree and County Attorney Kjomme were notified immediately after the assault and left for the scene, where they placed under arrest Dahle and Danielson, the latter being held as a witness. Owing to the circumstances of the case it is likely that the county attorney will ask that the assailant be bound over on a first degree manslaughter charge.

The dead man was one of three brothers, the other two being Kittle and Tollef Vatne, all residing in the neighborhood. He had always borne a good reputation among those who knew him. Dahle's grandfather resides at Highlanding and he also has an uncle living at the same place.

LOCAL DRUGGIST IS HELD ON BOOZE-SELLING COUNT

Dr. H. B. Newell of Thief River Falls, Will be Called to Answer on Serious Charge.

Dr. H. B. Newell, proprietor of drug stores at Thief River Falls and Goodridge, was this morning served with a warrant charging him with selling intoxicating liquors to a minor. The complainant was Sheriff W. J. LaBree and the offense alleged is the sale of one bottle of whiskey to 18-year-old Harris Hagestuen on the 11th of December. This is the specific case brought against Dr. Newell at this time, although Sheriff LaBree claims that there are others chargeable to the same party. The evidence was unearthed with considerable difficulty by the sheriff, who is putting forth every effort in seeing that the law is being obeyed.

The drug store wherein the liquor is said to have been obtained was but recently opened by Dr. Newell at Goodridge.

The hearing in the case was set for Monday, Feb. 28, at 9 a. m., before Judge N. W. Tarrant.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR LYCEUM NEXT YEAR

City will Have Charge of Entertainments and Attractions Are Among the Best Seen on Any Circuit.

Arrangements have been completed for next winter's Lyceum entertainments and the attractions are by far the best that have yet been seen in any city the size of Thief River Falls. There will be four numbers in the course, as follows: The Chicago Operatic company, the Philharmonic Orchestral club, the Faust Opera Singers and Hon. J. Frank Hanly, former governor of Indiana. The Chicago Operatic company is composed of six artists of national reputation, giving an entertainment that is practically unequalled. There are thirteen members of the Philharmonic Orchestral club, and their work is said to be the best. The Faust Opera Singers are a quintet—three ladies and two gentlemen. Ex-Governor Hanly is a lecturer of national fame, some of his subjects being: "The World Disarmed," "The Irrepressible Conflict," "The Divinity of Christ," "The Patriotism of Peace," "The Government of the Fathers," and "God's Melting Pot."

The Woman's club deserves great credit for having furnished the people of the city with high grade entertainments in the past, and they will do all in their power to make a success of any future venture in a like direction. The cost of the next course will be considerably higher than any heretofore secured, and the city council deemed it expedient to assume responsibility for the outlay necessary. To ask the Woman's club to become sponsors for something brought here with a view to being of benefit to the entire population did not seem just right, and the city will itself take charge. The course next year will cost $225 more for the four entertainments than has heretofore been paid for five. There is no doubt, however, but that the very best in the market has been secured.

E. M. STANTON GRANTED SEPARATION FROM WIFE

Judge Grindeland in Chambers at Warren Renders Decision in Favor of Plaintiff in Divorce Action.

Judge Andrew Grindeland on Tuesday handed down a decision in the divorse action brought by Attorney E. M. Stanton against his wife, Fanny R. Stanton, granting his application for an absolute divorce. This case came up for action at the last term of court in Pennington county, and attracted considerable attention because of the prominence of the parties. The court in his memorandum says: "The situation in this case is somewhat peculiar. The defendant appeared without an attorney. She was informed that she had a right to have an attorney and have the plaintiff pay him, but she refused to have one. There being no evidence introduced on the part of the defendant, the question of alimony is left undetermined."

WORK IS MAPPED OUT BY CHARTER COMMISSION

Committee Appointed to Prepare a Form of Charter to be Submitted at a Later Meeting.

At a meeting of the charter commission held at the council chambers on Friday night the following were chosen as permanent officers: Lars Bakke, chairman; E. J. Overland, clerk; H. C. Rowberg, attorney and stenographer. A general discussion of the lines to be followed in the drafting of the charter was followed by the appointment of a general committee composed of Fred Roth, Milton Forder and A. H. Akre to act with the chairman, secretary and attorney in the preparation of a form of charter to be submitted to the commission at a meeting to be held on March 3. This committee has decided to request copies of the charters under which Minnesota cities of the class of Thief River Falls are operating, and these will be carefully studied with a view to selecting from them such matters as meet the requirements here.

Brakeman Injured.

L. McAdams, employed by the Soo line on the Wheatline freight train, had two fingers taken off the latter part of last week when he fell from a moving freight train near Viking. The man was brought to the Physicians hospital for treatament and is improving rapidly.

WILL OPEN HARDWARE STORE HERE ON MARCH 1

Thief River Falls will have another retail hardware store about the first of March, when H. H. Spink of Duluth, will occupy the store room recently vacated by the Central saloon in the Grundy block on Third street with a full line of goods of this character. The room is being remodeled and repaired and will when completed provide spacious and well-lighted quarters for the new enterprise. Mr. Spink is expected here the last of the week to superintend the placing of fixtures and unpacking of stock. He is a hardware man of long experience, having for years been affiliated with one of the best known houses at the head of the lakes.

BUILDING FREE TO CONVENTIONS

Auditorium Gatherings at Which Visiting Delegates Are Present and To Which No Admission Fee Is Charged.

DEPOSITS AS AT PRESENT

Old Contract With Peoples State Bank Still in Effect and Interest Rate Considered Best—Much Important Business Transacted.

The city council at its meeting last evening approved the scale of prices submitted by the Auditorium committee for the use of the building. Conventions, except those of a political character, and for the attendance at which no admission fee is charged, will be given the use of the Auditorium free of charge. The Thief River Falls band will be permitted the use of the hall for three public dances annually free, and no charge will be made for the annual firemen's dance, the Elks' charity ball, or the annual library ball. All work necessary in connection with these affairs, such as the removal of seats, must be borne by the parties giving them.

Entertainments and dances for which an admission fee is exacted will be charged for the use of the building at the following rates: Dances, $35 per evening; Church entertainments, $15; private club entertainments where the admission is by invitation and no tickets sold, $20; political gatherings, outside of conventions, $20. Shows and theatrical performances to be arranged for by the manager. Wrestling or boxing matches at the Auditorium are to be prohibited and no free or complimentary tickets will be issued.

The bids of all banks offering to act as depositories for city funds were rejected, it being decided that the arrangement made with the Peoples State bank for acting as such depository was still in effect. The interest rate now paid by the above bank is also greater than that offered by any other bidder, so that the council found it advisable to permit the existing arrangement to continue.

The private telephones maintained by the city in the residences of city employees were ordered discontinued after March first.

The appointment by Mayor Gambell of Thomas Moran as special policeman with the added duties of dog tax collector, were approved by the council.

John Meyers was appointed garbage collector for the ensuing year at a sliding salary, ranging from $50 during the winter months to $80 for the month of September.

The plumbers' license of Wiste & Thompson was revoked for the nonpayment of inspection dues.

No action was taken on the petition of the pool room proprietors for permission to run their places of business open on Sunday. The matter did not even come up and none of the parties interested were present to urge its consideration.

The council authorized the transfer of the cigarette license of Zeh & Curran to W. W. Watson. The usual routine business was transacted and a number of bills allowed.

"STRANGE CASE OF MARY PAGE" NEXT BIG SERIAL

This Greatest of All Moving Picture Stories Will Be Run Jointly By Grand Theatre And This Paper—To Appear Soon

The most sensational moving picture yet produced as a serial is unquestionably "The Strange Case of Mary Page." This story has of late been running in the Minneapolis Journal and several of the big papers of the Eastern cities, but has never yet appeared in a theatre or a newspaper in this section. The Thief River Falls Times has, however, completed arrangements whereby the entire story will appear as a serial in its columns, the play being at the same time produced at the Grand theatre. Everywhere this picture has appeared it has created a sensation as it is totally unlike anything yet attempted in a screen play. The fact that the installment of the story to be seen at the Grand every Monday and Tuesday will appear in these columns as a story on the preceding Thursday makes the production doubly interesting. The first chapters will be printed on March 16, and the first films run on the 20th and 21st. Do not miss the opening chapters of this remarkable story.

Further announcements will be found in another column.

WILL COMPLETE THEIR CHURCH

Finest Edifice of Its Kind in the City Will be Erected by Congregation of Our Saviour's Lutheran

BEGUN THREE YEARS AGO

Will be 40x80 Feet, Built of Tile and Brick, and Will Cost at Least $6,000—Congregation Has Enjoyed Steady Growth

A church building, costing in the neihhborhood of $6,000 will be erected during the summer at the corner of Horace avenue and Fourth street, by the congregation of Our Savior's United Norwegian Lutheran church. The structure will be 40x80 feet, of brick and tile throughout, and when completed will be the finest building of its kind in the city and one of the best in the entire section. The interior furnishings will be in keeping with the beautiful exterior, and everything will be of the latest and most approved design.

The basement part of the new church was completed about three years ago. This was roofed over and services have since been conducted there pending a decision on just what kind of a building it was advisable to erect. The work was begun while Rev. A. B. Roseland was pastor of the church, and his successor, Rev. O. P. Staavas, has been untiring in his efforts to bring the enterprise to a successful conclusion. He has been so far successful that all preliminary matters are now attended to and the actual work of building will begin as soon as the weather makes the start feasible.

Rev. Stavaas came here last May, and the church has steadily grown and prospered under his leadership, until now about seventy families are entered on its membership roster. The new structure will not only provide for them a beautiful place of worship, but will be a decided improvement to the entire neighborhood.

ASSOCIATION FOR BETTER MARKETING OF LIVE STOCK

Speakers Connected With Extension Department of University of Minnesota Will Address Farmers

D. A. Gamnitz of the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota, and D. McLaren, a prominent livestock shipper located at Carlton, will be the speakers at the meeting to be held at the Commercial club rooms on Saturday for the purpose of forming a live stock shippers' association. These gentlemen have aided in the establishment of similar associations at many points in the state during the past few years and their experience should prove of interest and value to those interested in securing one for Thief River Falls. It is well konwn to anyone who has handled live stock for market that unless shipments are made at a specified time it is practically impossible to have the stock in the best condition, and this has been responsible for much loss in reduced prices. This is one of the difficulties that an association overcomes, as a regular shipping day is set and everyone having stock to dispose of at that time sees that it is in prime condition.

These associations have been organized at all large shipping points, and it is now the aim of the extension workers to form similar bodies in the smaller cities. They have been the means of saving their members large sums of money directly and their shipments always receive the highest prices going.

The meeting is under the auspices of the Commercial club and the agricultural department of the high school.

LOCAL BASKET TOSSERS WIN FROM FOSSTON

Contest Was the Snappiest Played This Year—First Defeat for Fosston on Home Floor In Six Long Years.

Playing a fast and furious game, with a determination to win the Thief River Falls high school basketball team triumphed over the Fosston quint last Friday evening at the Fosston gym, by the close score of 19 to 17. The game was an important victory and shows that Thief River Falls will undoubtedly cinch the district championship, thus insuring them a trip to Northfield to compete for the state championship. Another fact of the game is that it was the first time in six years that Fosston had met defeat on their home floor.

The local team found the hoop but once during the first half, and allowed Fosston to drop in four field baskets and one free throw. Brilliant teamwork was displayed by Fosston during the first half, which undoubtedly accounts for the splendid score run up. The first half ended 9 to 2 in favor of Fosston, and it generally looked as if Fosston would run off with the long end of the game.

The second half opened with Thief River Falls taking a more aggressive stand and showed a versatility of attack that thrilled the crowd. Time after time they would bring the ball in a series of rushes up the entire length of the floor which netted them many points. Fasel, Schmitt and Holzknecht were the luminaries during the second half, making basket after basket. Fosston secured four baskets during the half while Thief River Falls dropped in eight and one free throw. The second half ended 19 to 17 in favor of Thief River Falls.

Brown at forward placed one basket in the wicker; Fasel, 4 and 3 free throws; Linde, 1; Conner, 1; Holzknecht, 1.

The line-up:

T. R. Falls	Position	Fosston
Brown	L. F.	Wynne
Fasel	R. F.	Bakkum
Linde	C.	Johnson
Schmitt	L. G.	Fogelberg
Holzknecht	R. G.	Movald

Conner for Brown last ten minutes.

Referee: Diedrich of Bemidji.

Baskets for Fosston: Wynne, 1; Bakkum, 2; Movald, 4. Free throws: Movald, 2; Wynne, 1.

SWEDISH MISSION CHURCH HOLDS QUARTERLY MEET

Pastors and Laymen Begin Session a Week Ago and Still Continue—Large Number of Delegates Present

The Northern Red River Valley division of the Swedish Evang. Mission church held its quarterly meeting at the church of that denomination in Thief River Falls last week, commencing Wednesday evening. A number of pastors and delegates from out of town churches have been in attendance, and the favorable weather and interest shown by local Scandinavians have contributed to make the meeting a success in every way.

Three meetings have been held each day. The forenoon and afternoon sessions have been given over to routine business and to discussion of questions of special interest to both pastor and layman. During the evenings and on Sunday large spiritual meetings have been held, the pulpit being occupied by the visiting pastors. Spirited singing, prayer and testimony has contributed to make these services particularly interesting and inspiring. The Sunday afternoon service was of special interest. At that time Mayor F. H. Gambell was present and delivered a lecture dealing with the progress and possibilities of missionary work in Alaska, where the Swedish Mission denomination has some of its forces stationed. Dr. Gambell has himself visited these stations and is personally acquainted with some of the missionaries there. His message was therefore listened to with much interest and was highly appreciated by everyone present. On account of the great interest shown and other encouragement received the meetings are being continued throughout this week.

The following are among the pastors and delegates who have attended the meeting: Rev. F. A. L. Lindholm, Tien; Peter Olson and Rev. Carl Olson, Warren; Rev. J. G. Wilson and Gust Erickson, St. Hilaire; Rev. B. A. Werklund and Gust Johnson, Roseau; Rev. C. J. Bjornberg and S. Brodine, Jupiter; Axel Swanson, Vega; John Hendrickson, Alvarado; Carl S. Carlson and Andrew Strandquist, Strandquist; Louis Ohlen, Lancaster; Rev. O. J. Lundell, C. Gustafson and C. Ledin, Thief River Falls; Rev. Werner Drotts, Viking; Rev. F. A. Erickson, Crookston.

The local church and its pastor, Rev. O. J. Lundell, deserve commendation for the efficiency and hospitality with which it has received and entertained this large meeting. The semi-annual meeting of the Conference will be held at Vega, Minn., during the early part of next June.

MAN WALKING ON TRACK IS STRUCK BY SOO TRAIN

Hans Mikkelson, 35 years of age, apparently a man of the tourist type but of whom nothing is known hereabouts, was struck by a train on the Soo railroad about three miles east of Plummer on Monday. His right leg was badly crushed and it is feared he received internal injuries. After having laid out in the cold during all of Monday night he was found by the crew of a freight train on Tuesday morning and hurried to Oklee for medical assistance. He was alive at last reports, although his injuries and the exposure make his recovery doubtful. He had a pint of whiskey with him when found.

LIGHT RATES ARE VERY MODERATE

Electric Light Plant is Self-Sustaining and Manages to Have Credit for Future Improvement

BOOKS IN GOOD CONDITION

Every Item Properly Kept Track of And Every Cent Properly Accounted For—Comparison With Plants in Similar Cities in State of Minnesota

The municipal lighting plant of the city of Thief River Falls is self-sustaining. While charging a rate as low as consistent with proper upkeep and conservative management, the water and light board has been able to create a sinking fund to its credit in the city's treasury. This surplus will soon prove a decidedly convenient item. It is only a matter of a very short time until the plant will have to be changed to the alternating type, and this is a costly process. Practically all minor equipment will have to be altered to meet the new requirements, even the present meters being useless. The fact that matters have so been managed that these changes can be made and paid for out of the earnings of the plant will then prove of the greatest advantage. The demands made upon the plant are steadily increasing and in the power department particularly this increase may at any time become so great as to make necessary improvements of the most important character.

The department charges rent for light meters at the rate of 25 cents per month. Consumers are given the opportunity to own their meters if they so desire, but no one has taken advantage of this provision. There is considerable expense connected with the keeping of these recording instruments in repair, the replacing of those destroyed by fire or otherwise and in their general supervision. Everywhere that private ownership of these meters has been tried it has proven unsatisfactory and the current-furnishing concern has in practically every case had to take them over and incorporate them into the equipment.

The city of Thief River Falls pays $5,500 per year for its street lighting. This sum is provided by levy the same as any other item of fixed outlay, and is derived by general and direct taxation in the usual manner. For the city, however, to pay itself this sum for the use of its own plant would, of course, be ridiculous, and the return of this money is provided for by the exaction of a franchise tax of equal amount against the plant. Thus the transaction is practically for the sole purpose of keeping the records straight and involves no financial transfer of any kind.

The books of the public utilities department of the city are in excellent condition. Every item of expense is specifically set forth and every penny of the receipts scrupulously accounted for. B. E. Dahlquist, an expert accountant, resident of Thief River Falls, has audited the books of the department and found them well kept and correct. The records of E. J. Overland, former city clerk, those of A. H. Fasel, the present incumbent, and of Supt. Leonard Peterson of the light department have been examined in every detail by an expert whose business it is to discover unexplained entries if such there be, and he has found none.

As to the rates for light, these are about the same as in other cities of the size of Thief River Falls and where the conditions are similar. The rate in the city of Duluth cannot possibly be used as a basis for comparison. In that city the light plant is privately owned, for one thing, and rates are at the very lowest point because of the continual threat of a municipal plant held over the head of the furnishing company. A report compiled by Prof. Gerhard A. Gesell of the University of Minnesota, giving the rates charged for electric current in all municipalities of the state shows that in Duluth there are 16,800 consumers of electric current, this being exactly 16,300 more than is credited to Thief River Falls in the same report. The rate for commercial power in the larger city is from 4.8 to eight cents per kilowat hour by meter, while the commercial rate is from three to six cents. In Thief River Falls the meter rate is nine cents per kilowat hour with a discount for prompt payment, while the rate for commercial purposes is from two to six cents per kilowat hour, according to the amount of current used. Just why the big city at the head of the lakes should have been taken as an example by certain carpers who do not know what they are talking about is a mystery, as the comparison proves absolutely nothing.

A few other examples taken from the report of Prof. Gesell may be of interest. In the village of Detroit the charge is from five to nine cents per kilowat hour; in Fergus Falls the commercial lighting rate is seven and one-half cents; the people of Fosston pay fifteen cents for both light and power; Glenwood's meter rates are from ten to twelve and one-half cents. At Hastings, where the plant is privately owned, the rate is fifteen cents for lighting and just half of that for power; at Red Wing the charge is from seven to eleven cents; Rochester, six to ten cents; St. Cloud, five and one-half to eleven cents for lights, four to seven cents for power. At Winona the rate is from four and one-half to eleven cents. These are only a few, but they go to show that the rates at Thief River Falls average up about with those of other communities.

As to the charge of mismanagement and worse hinted at or openly made by certain irresponsible parties who evidently were bound to discover something wrong where nothing of the kind exists, these will have to be made more explicit before people will pay any attention to them. If there is crooked bookkeeping the citizens are entitled to know it. If former Clerk Overland, Clerk Fasel or Superintendent Peterson are guilty of misappropriation or of covering up entries the facts should be published, not hinted at. The city government in charge of affairs just previous to that now in office was composed of Lars Bakke, mayor; F. H. Herrick, president of the council; Frank Effinger, Anton Langseth, Severt Brandon, O. L. Bakken and A. H. Akre, councilmen. The present council is made up as follows: Dr. Gambell, mayor; C. W. Ackerman, president of council; Carl Froseth, Henry Amble, Martin Benson, Ole Ihle and O. L. Bakken, councilmen. Malfeasance or misappropriation is being hinted against these men or some of them. The charges should be made direct and the parties specified.

What do the people think of this kind of proceeding?

The budget plan will be used in the regulation of expenditures, and this is now being worked out.

Commercial Club Tonight.

There will be an important meeting of the Commercial club held this evening at 9 o'clock at the club rooms at which all members are requested to be present. Matters which are to be decided in the near future will come up for discussion and it is desirable that there be a large attendance. IS ADVOCATE OF FARM LOAN BILL

Thief River Falls Banker Appears Before Senate Committee to Urge Adoption of Important Measure

THE AMORTIZANION PLAN

Percentage of Annual Interest Charge is Applied to Liquidation of Principal Until at the End of 36 Years This is Wiped Out

The federal land bank bill introduced by Senator Hawley of Wyoming, will prove the most important measure ever enacted into law for the benefit of the American farmer, according to C. L. Hansen, president of the First National bank of Thief River Falls, who returned from an extended visit to Eastern points on Thursday last. While in Washington Mr. Hanson appeared before the senate committee having the measure in charge and presented arguments in its favor, being one of a large number of Northwestern bankers present to urge the favorable report and early passage of the bill.

The measure as introduced by Senator Hawley has for its purpose the establishment of federal land banks, the function of which will be to make long-time loans to farmers. These loans will be made under what is known as the amortization plan, the principal feature of which is the gradual retirement of the principal of the loan through the application thereto every year of a part of the interest money. One per cent of this interest is annually to be thus applied in payment of the principal and it has been figured out that the latter will have completely absorbed or retired the entire indebtedness at the end of 36 years. Under the arrangement the borrower will only be paying the regular interest charge and the principal will take care of itself.

One feature of the measure as proposed is that the loan may be paid up at any time after five years have elapsed, the one per cent deducted annually up to that time being credited to the borrower against the total. He may, however without any further arrangement, allow the indebtedness to run the full 36 years, at the end of which time it will have been completely wiped away by the one per cent applied against it annually.

Mr. Hanson says that he is strongly in favor of the measure. He does not regard it as promising any direct profit to banks, but its indirect benefits will be immeasurable. An easy re-payment plan on farm loans is one of the things urgently needed in this country, and the establishment of these federal land institutions will provide it.

"Times are good in the East," said Mr. Hanson. "This is almost entirely due to the demand made upon this country for food stuffs and manufactured products, by the war. In fact, it is everywhere asserted that conditions were never in a more flourishing condition. The improvement during the past six months has been simply wonderful and a feeling of optimism prevails in all lines." As an indication of the effect of the war on American banking conditions, Mr. Hanson's attention was called to the fact that one bank, the National City of New York, now holds deposits amounting to $550,000,000, practically half of which has been banked during the past twelve months. This institution labored steadily for 200 years to bring its deposits up to $250,000,000, and then practically doubled this amount in one year.

Mr. Hanson also visited New York City and points in the New England states, and returned by way of Buffalo and Chicago.

YOUNG MEN ORGANIZE AS JUNIOR COMMERCIAL CLUB

Charter Membership of Eight and Will Have Own By-Laws and Use of Club Rooms at Stated Hours

With a charter membership of eight the Boys' Commercial club started on its career of usefulness by organizing for business on Monday evening. The members are the following young men, ranging in age from 17 to 20 years: Fred Scanlon, Roy Brown, Hugh McDaniel, Martin Langseth, Merrill Kromer, Harold Schmidt, Derby Anderson and William Hoag. Fred T. Scanlon was elected president, Roy Brown first vice president, and Hugh Mc Daniel, second vice president. The executive committee of the Commercial club will exercise a supervisory control over the affairs of the new organization, but the boys will have their own Constitution and By-laws and the success of the venture will depend largely on their own efforts. None but lads of the highest moral character will be admitted to membership and the aim of the club will be the fitting of its members for the work they may be called upon to do by inculcating the lessons of proper living, acting and thinking. Cigarette smoking and other habits injurious to health and morals will be strictly prohibited among the members of the club and every encouragement will be extended in starting the boys in the way they should travel.

Secretary Lincoln states that it is the intention to have the new club attend the state fair in a body, as well as participate in the automobile trips and other outings planned for the summer by the regular club. The boys will also have the use of the club rooms at such times as their presence does not conflict with the convenience of their elders and everything will be done to make them welcome and help them along.

CHAMPIONS WIN AT CROOKSTON

Thief River Falls' Northwest Champion Hockey Septet Removes All Doubt as To Superiority of Two Teams Sunday.

FINAL SCORE IS 2 TO 1

Crookston Crowd Goes Wild When Their Team Scores Accidentally—Poor Ice Prevents Locals From Administering More Severe Defeat

Playing upon a sheet of ice that was practically "honey combed," the Thief River Falls Northwest Champion Hockey team defeated the Crookston septet last Sunday at the latter's rink, by the same score as in the previous engagement, 2 to 1. Had the ice been in a better condition there is no doubt but what the "champs" would have doubled or even trippled the score. The game showed very clearly the superiority of the local septet over their opponents.

At three o'clock the teams lined up at the sound of the whistle, Crookston defending the west goal. The puck was dropped at center and then whirled around for fully fifteen minutes when a pretty shot was made, Durham to Rice to Backus. Shortly after the puck had been dropped for the second time, Crookston shot it directly to goal-keeper Bennett. With little effort the rubber was stopped and rebounded back into a crevice in the ice. In attempting to dislodge it from its place Bennett stumbled and fell. As a man can be ruled from the game for throwing the rubber, Bennett adhered strictly to the rules and attempted to put the puck on clear ice for a shot. On arising from the ice he dropped his stick and at that moment a Crookston man rushed in and swept the puck in, tieing the score. The ice at this time was in such poor condition that the contest developed into a running match. Skaters tumbled, the puck was concealed in holes in the ice and very few combination plays were successful.

The second half opened with both teams trying to break the tie. From the moment time was called to the finish of the half very little teamwork was shown on account of the holes in the ice. After twenty minutes of playing, time was called with the score still a tie. Five minutes were then allowed to play the tie off. About one minute elasped and the puck was driven into the net from a heap of ice by Flozsdahl, giving Thief River Falls the game.

The line-up:

T. R. Falls		Crookston
Bennett	Goal	Boyd
Campbell	Point	W. Hansen
S. Durham	Cover P.	C. Nelson
Hagen	Rover	Hagen
Backus	Center	Peterson
Rice	Left W.	R. Hansen
Jos. Nelson	Right W.	Flozdahl

Time of Halves: 20 minutes.

Scores: Backus 12 minutes; Flozdahl, 21 minutes.

Roseau Victor.

Playing with six men and all the players in a stale condition after a hard season the hockey team was defeated by Roseau Tuesday afternoon by a score of 7 to 2, at the Roseau rink. Clifford Rice had a tooth knocked out after three minutes of play. Thief River Falls filled in the line-up with Dahlquist and Holland of Warroad, owing to injuries to local players. Both played an excellent game. The home defense went to pieces, each man trying to outdo the other in poor playing. Even the never failing "Stonewall" Bennett failed to live up to his reputation in this contest. When Roseau played here, a return game was promised and the contest was staged as a matter of courtesy.

Manager Smith states that the hockey season is practically over, owing to the approach of warm weather and that no more games will be booked. The team has made a most remarkable record for its first year in the field and an equally successful season is expected next year.

T. R. Falls,2	Crookston, 1
T. R. Falls, 1	Roseau 0.
T. R. Falls, 2	Roseau 3.
T. R. Falls, 4	Builders Ex., St. P., 0.
T. R. Falls, 2	Two Harbors, 1.
T. R. Falls, 8	Harriets of Mpls., 1.
T. R. Falls, 4	Olympias of St. P., 0.
T. R. Falls, 2	Crookston, 1.
T. R. Falls, 2	Roseau, 7.
Total games played	9.
Won, 7	lost, 2.

NORTHERN EDITORS STOP OVER AND TALK POLITICS

Martin Widsten of Warroad, and R. J. Bell of Rosseau, Tell How the State Will Be Best Served

Martin Widsten, publisher of the Warroad Pioneer, stopped off at Thief River Falls on his return from the editors' meeting at St. Paul, in order to do a little missionary work in the interest of Congressman Steenerson's campaign. Mr. Widsten is chairman of the congressman's committee and misses no opportunity to put in a few licks for his candidate. While there does not at this time seem to be any particular necessity for keeping up an organization in Congressman Steenerson's behalf, the editor-chairman is not inclined to let anything get by him and keeps the interest alive all the time.

R. J. Bell, the veteran Roseau newspaper man, also stopped here over Sunday on his way back from the editor's gathering. Mr. Bell's highest ambition at this time is to secure the Republican gubernatorial nomination for S. G. Iverson, but he does not seem to be receiving much encouragement. He was one of the signers of the petition urging Frank B. Kellog to become a candidate for the United States senate and believes that the brilliant St. Paul attorney may yet be prevailed upon to enter the race.

WAS BUSY YEAR FOR INTERURBAN

Annual Statement Shows This Enterprise To Be One of Vast Importance to Thief River Falls and Vicinity

OVER 35,000 PASSENGERS

People Residing in Section Traversed by Line Make Thief River Falls Their Trading Headquarters—Find It Great Convenience

The Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway for the year ending December 31, 1915, according to reports of the State Railroad and Warehouse Commission, carried 35,285 passengers and handled 17,416 tons of freight. Practically all of these passengers were people residing in Thief River Falls' largest and richest trading district. They were coming to Thief River Falls to buy of local merchants.

It is surprising to note that the Minnesota Northwestern, although operating only 20 miles of road, brought to Thief River Falls one-third of all passengers arriving here on all the railroad lines entering the city. This is attributed to the excellent service afforded by this railway. With its three trains each way daily and the fact that by making stops each mile it becomes so convenient for the farmer that he simply must come to town.

Also trains on this line are always on time. During the recent severe weather when other trains were hours late, those on the Minnesota Northwestern were right on the dot.

The figures for freight handled also show that Thief River Falls is a distributing center for this district, as of the total amount handled 45 per cent originated in this city.

The benefits to be derived by Thief River Falls as the country develops and the line grows can be truthfully said to be unlimited. It only remains for Thief River Falls to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by extending every encouragement to the road.

NEW LAND FIRM

O. C. McCormick, vice president of the Continental Land company, with headquarters at St. Paul and offices at Farimont and Colfax, N. D., has opened offices in the Union block and will engage in the business of buying and selling farm lands. Mr. McCormick's activities will be confined almost exclusively to the Pennington county brand of the business. The firm is an old established concern but this is its first attempt to invade Northwestern Minnesota, although it has been long and favorably known in North Dakota. Mr. McCormick invites anyone having farm acreage for sale or exchange to call on him.

After the smoke of battle has cleared away it may be found that Roosevelt has carried off the nomination after all. There is not the slightest doubt but that he is again most seriously considered by men who will have considerable to do with the nomination of the next Republican candidate for president. A few months ago his stock was down considerably below par, but it is again soaring and there is no telling where it will be by June. It seems to have been definitely decided that Hughes cannot be prevailed upon to accept the nomination, and outside the supreme court justice there is not the slightest doubt but that the colonel has the largest personal following of any man in the Republican party—if not in the country. This Northwestern section is strongly for Senator Cummins, but in the event of his nomination being found impossible, Roosevelt is perhaps as popular a second choice as any. Many keen political observers, Samuel G. Blythe among them, seem to think that Roosevelt will keep out of the fight at Chicago, permit the nomination to go to some practically unknown or wholly impossible man, and then come back strong in 1920. If this is the colonel's program we predict that the people will upset his apple cart by selecting a most acceptable candidate at Chicago and then electing him in November.

Those who say that President Wilson is stronger than his party are absolutely correct, but if they think that in making this observation they have done all that is necessary to secure Republican success at the next election they had better take a look around and then make another guess. They should remember that Woodrow Wilson's name will be the one on the ticket and not the Democratic party's. That organization is not popular and is becoming less so as time discloses the utter inability of its policies to meet the conditions of the times. A strong man on a sensible platform can be elected by the Republicans next fall, but anyone possessed of the idea that this is a yellow dog year had better get rid of it and go to work. There is nothing to be gained by telling people that success is certain no matter who the candidate of the Republicans may be or what the platform proposes. The voters are reading and thinking and reaching conclusions of their own these days and this fact had better be taken into consideration by those proposing candidates and making platforms.

The Times does not think that those misguided citizens over in the Indian treaty section who are attempting to have the provisions of that liquor-prohibiting clause abrogated by congress will get very far. And they should not. Any section of this country made dry by the laws as they already exist is very likely to remain so for all congress may be expected to do. Senators, and congressmen do not like the liquor question in any guise, but are far more likely to add restrictions than they are to abrogate them. No matter how they may feel personally about the matter, they will not care to go home to their constituents with a record of having opened temperance territory to booze. They find it hard enough to explain the reasons for their not voting for national prohibition when they have a chance and will add nothing more to their own sorrows if they can help it.

That the people of Minnesota dislike being forced to make a choice between Eberhart and Clapp for the United State senate is certain. The former is regarded as being rather light for senatorial dignities, while Clapp has managed to array a very large percentage of the Republicans of the state against him. That this feeling is real and deeply rooted is indicated by the action of the members of the Minnesota Editorial association at their convention last week. A very decided preference for Frank B. Kellog over either of the mentioned candidates for the place was manifested and he would receive practically the unanimous support of the Republican press of the state in case he permitted the use of his name. He would in no way be a compromise candidate. The demand for him is real and comes from people of every walk in life, everyone regarding him as a man of exceptional capabilities who would fittingly represent Minnesota in the upper house of congress. Sentiment may so crystalize in his favor that he will find it impossible to refuse the nomination, some such result being evidently in the minds of the editors at St. Paul. The present situation might hold some slight element of danger did the Democrats have a popular candidate of senatorial size to put forward, but they are at the other extreme, having nothing in that line of sufficient strength to cause even a ripple of enthusiasm. The one best bet at this time is Kellogg, and the Times hopes he will be nominated.

The Times believes that the city council should at once take the preliminary steps necessary to give the city another chance to acquire the Kretschmar dam at this point. Most of our people now believe that a mistake was made when the proposition to buy the property was defeated a year ago, and that if the opportunity was again presented the result would be different. The dam now furnishes power for the municipal electric light plant under a leasing arrangement, but it would be both safer and cheaper for the city to be the actual owner of an enterprise so important to the continued well-being of the people. Many of the objections contributing to the defeat of the proposition at the last election have now been removed, and there is hardly a doubt but that a majority in favor of buying would now result if the matter came to a vote. It is understood that the owners of the property stand ready to renew the option at the same figure at which it was before offered, and that the price is reasonable everyone admits. When projects for the year are being considered this should occupy a prominent place in the discussions.

Out in this great and glorious northwestern country, where a man is considered a good citizen if he loves his family, pays his debts, tells the truth and boosts for his home town, the reasons advanced for not confirming Louis D. Brandeis as a justice of the United States supreme court do not seem particularly good. These reasons, as far as we are able to discover, are: First, Mr. Brandeis is of Jewish extraction; second, he once told the railroads of the country that through inefficient management they were wasting an enormous sum of money. As to the first objection, we do not see why a man of the race of Solomon and who is admittedly a great lawyer should not make as good a judge as one whose only qualification is service to the party. As for the railroads, Mr. Brandei's only put into words what nearly everyone already knew. There may be reasons why this appointment should not be confirmed, but these two are not among the good ones.

The case of State Treasurer Walter J. Smith presents nothing particularly new. He betrayed his trust, speculated with funds not his own—and the unevitable result followed. This official was personally one of the most likeable of men, immensely popular and universally trusted. His downfall is therefore all the greater. The fact that he is now confined at a liquor and drug cure institute may account for much. At any rate, his case should prove a warning to young men in positions of trust. Any diviation from the path of the strictest rectitude is sure to bring on a train of disasters, no matter how slight the chances appear for getting caught or how apparently certain seem the opportunities for gain.

The supreme court of the State of Minnesota has handed down a decision to the effect that when a majority of the people residing in a county vote that county "dry" it is for the purpose of preventing the sale of alcohol within its borders. The saloon men of Koochiching county appealed from a decision of Judge McClennahan of the Fifteenth district, in which the court held that the dry provision applied to cities with home rule charters as well as to outlying communities. The supreme court holds that the district judge was right and that all communities within such county come under the restriction. This will also settle the matter as far as East Grand Forks and one or two other communities are concerned.

The people of Thief River Falls are this week entertaining delegates to two very important meetings. One of these was that of the Guernsey Breeders association yesterday afternoon and the other will be the meeting for the forming of a stock shipping association to be held Saturday. These are the kind of gatherings we take particular delight in welcoming. They are composed of the men who will make this section even better than it is at present.

Correspondent Discusses Ways of Railway Commission.

EDITORS ENDORSE KELLOGG

Many Attending State Convention Sign Petition Asking Him to Enter Senatorial Race.

St. Paul—(Special)—You've all had dreams—dreams that set you to thinking when you awoke, and kept you thinking. Generally they were absurd and more often improbable, yet their memory remained and out of the tangle came much in the way of thought. I had a dream the other night—now, don't laugh—I dreamed the state railway and warehouse commission disagreed on a matter before them and that one of their number violated precedent to the extent that he took the public into his confidence. The whole thing was so unusual that it set the state press to talking, and out of it all came a boom for governor for the insurgent member, with the added honor of United States senator. Right there came the break; I awoke—it was only a dream. Few possibly know it, but outside of the educational department, which admittedly has the lead, the most powerful state department, speaking politically, is that answering to the name of the state railway and warehouse commission. More than 300 men are employed in the department, all of whom has done his bit in a political way, and when the mass moves opposition must give way. All this probably explains the inability of the outside world to scale the walls of its sacred precincts, for as memory runs the only change in the ranks of the commission since the statewide primary law was enacted has been as the result of resignation. Prior to it convention rule generally fixed the maximum at three terms. Piffle, did you say about that dream? Why, it's impossible!

✣ ✣ ✣

In the old days the railway and warehouse commission was a most important factor in the state government. Memory hargens back to the fight on the merger, the birth of the co-operative elevator, the fight to uphold the 2-cent fare law, and a hundred other acts and moves that have saved the people from corporate greed. Little in this line has been written into the history of the commission of late, but such must not be taken as meaning that the members of the commission are not earning their salaries. It is simply the method now employed in handling the department's business. Where in the old days all three members of the commission were answerable for the department's several trusts, the work is now apportioned—telephones to Commissioner Elmquist; grain and warehouses to Commissioner Jacobson, and railroads to Commissioner Mills. Of course the three sit as a court on all questions brought before them, but the findings are generally subdepartmental. Where it was formerly the practice to place the burden of proof on the railroads when an order carrying some concession to the public was involved, the commission now makes exhaustive investigation and then acts. This is now the case with telephone rates in Minnesota, a new line of business given to the department by the last legislature. In the old days a cut would have been ordered and the alternative given the companies of either obeying or fighting, but under the new order of things the properties of the companies must first be valued and then the reduction, if found justified, made by the commission. It does not bring as quick results, but the commission of today believes it is the safest.

✣ ✣ ✣

Ye country editor has been with us this week, nearly 200 of them, with Minneapolis as the host. It was one of the best annual meetings in the history of the State Editorial association and those in attendance enjoyed it to the limit. Three whole days were given over to the program, and it included everything calculated to give the moulders of public thought a good time. Not the least was their opportunity to see the latest in new faces seeking political preferment. Thomas Frankson, with his manager, Sid Huntley of Fillmore county, was early on the ground. Mr. Frankson, you know, has designs on the lieutenant governorship. Another with like aspirations was Dr. Gates of Kenyon, and still another James A. Peterson of Minneapolis, a veteran of many political wars. Governor Burnquist faced the quill pushers one whole evening, while pressing him hard for recognition was Irving Caswell, who has taken on the job of making Senator Cummins of Iowa president; Andy Rahn of Minneapolis, who will attend the Republican national convention in the Iowan's behalf; Dar Reese, who wants to represent the Fourth district as congressman, and a dozen others with official axes to grind.

✣ ✣ ✣

Not the least of the doings of ye editor was the interest manifested by them in a petition circulated by R. C. Dunn of Princeton asking Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul, the well known trust buster, to allow the use of his name as a Republican candidate for United States senator. Many editors lent their signatures and those who did not gave expressions of good will. It was an unusual proceeding and was productive of much comment. It indicated where the country press of the state stands in the matter of the senatorship to be passed upon next June and left little doubt as to the outcome should Mr. Kellogg answer the call. The Princeton editor was liberally complimented for his success in managing the little coup in Mr. Kellogg's behalf. It took many of the old timers back to the days of Senator Cushman K. Davis, when similar endorsements were secured.

✣ ✣ ✣

If A. A. D. Rahn of Minneapolis is not found among those present when the next national Republican convention is called to order then it will not be the fault of Andy or his friends. Andy is a candidate for delegate at large, with Senator Cummins as his preference, and the way a score of the boys have taken it upon themselves to put him across would do credit to a job more productive in the stuff that goes to make a fat bank account. Delegateships, you must know, are a tax instead of being productive of the wherewithal. The Minneapolis man was strongly in evidence at the state editorial convention and the few scribes he did not know were soon made aware of his presence by those hustling in his behalf. Andy's long suit is timber, and he was at home with the boys from the Northern woods.

A. A. D. RAHN.

The alleged peculations of Walter J. Smith, who was compelled to resign his position as state treasurer, still continues to engage the attention of those whose ambitions and place of business is the state capitol. A. C. Gooding, a banker of Rochester, has taken over the office and has fallen into the routine of the job like an old timer, but the boys miss the smiling face of Walter just the same. Mr. Smith, you probably know, was indicted, is now out on bail and his trial will follow shortly. That his punishment will ever extend beyond the disgrace his acts have already brought him is doubted, but such is not dulling the activities of those who have charge of his prosecution. Much sympathy is being extended Mr. Smith and his family and it looks very much as if public opinion down here would determine the verdict. Mayor Victor Power of Hibbing has taken it upon himself to care for the ex-treasurer in a legal way.

✣ ✣ ✣

Mayor Power of Hibbing, I am told, has designs on the Republican nomination for governor. One day recently he was closeted for several hours with Secretary of State Julius A. Schmahl, and while the two admitted that the big job was mentioned, the conference, they said, had to do with other things. I know a few who would not be a bit pleased if the little mayor of Hibbing decided to take a fling at the job.

✣ ✣ ✣

Managers of Henry D. Estabrook of New York, now engaged in interesting Minnesota voters in his presidential candidacy, mingled with the state editors and distributed much in the way of information concerning their favorite. Mr. Estabrook will cross swords with Senator Cummins of Iowa at the March primaries and his backers are confident enough of his success to predict that he will win.

✣ ✣ ✣

The name of W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow has been mentioned as a possible candidate for lieutenant governor. The mention comes more from his friends than it does from "Bill" himself.

✣ ✣ ✣

✣ ✣ ✣

Former followers of Theodore Roosevelt in Minnesota look with interest on the active campaign started in Massachusetts to nominate Roosevelt on the Republican ticket, but they are in no shape to start a similar movement here. Colonel Roosevelt forbade the filing of a petition in this state and the Roosevelt men in the Republican camp have gone under the banner of A. B. Cummins. Several have filed for delegate at large to the Republican national convention.

The Open Court

Editor of Times,

Dear Sir:—I take the liberty of stating that your article in last week's issue regarding the removal of the saloon signs and curtains from the soft drink places of business may have given the public a wrong idea as to the motive power. I beg leave to state that the men running these places did of their own free will agree among themselves to remove the saloon signs; to take down the blinds; to remove or not allow to be used any card room or back room; to allow no liquor sold or drank in their places of business; to allow no card games played on Sunday; and to close at eleven o'clock in the evening.

"True Sportsmanship."

Owing to the fact that the management of the Hockey association has been severely critised by a great number of local people for giving Crookston and Roseau return games and as the writer is the one who is responsible for the trips having been made, although an explanation should not be necessary, it seems that it is.

In the world of true sportsmanship, there is one unwritten law and that is that no team can honorably agree to exchange games with another team and after winning the first game refuse to return the game, no matter how battered up or in what crippled condition its team is in. It is much more honorable to lose a game by a large score and know that you have done what you agreed to do, than to show a dishonest spirit of untrue sportsmanship in refusing to carry out your agreement. It was because of the fact that the Crookston team and Roseau team visited Thief River Falls and played hockey here that the Thief River Falls team was recognized and invited to compete in St. Paul. Although it was realized that in the crippled condition the team was in and the fact that they were only able to put four of their men on the ice in Roseau, defeat was certain, defeat is more honorable than the welching spirit shown by local critics and as long as the writer has anything to do with hockey in Thief River Falls, the same spirit of true sportsmanship will be shown.

BEGINNING OF IMPORTANT CULVERT PIPE INDUSTRY

Northern Construction Company Will Soon Have in Operation Factory For the Making of Improved Product

Another industry that may in the course of time mean a great deal to Thief River Falls was announced yesterday when it became known that the Northern Construction company would soon begin the manufacture of their reinforced cement sewer pipe at a site in the neighborhood of their warehouse near the Soo tracks. The concern has for some time been using this pipe on their contracts and the general satisfaction it has given everywhere warrants them in going more extensively into the business and manufacturing the article for the general trade.

This culvert pipe is cast and laid in the usual manner, but after being assembled in place there is a one-half inch steel bar run through the entire length of the culvert and threaded at each end. Large burs are then employed for the purpose of drawing the entire length of the culvert together, thus preventing its breaking apart in the joints.. Rigidity is added by providing four wrought iron pipes passing entirely through each section and engaging a recess in the next joining section. These culverts have been given the most severe tests and have everywhere met every expectation.

This company last week also secured the contract for the building of about 40 bridges of different sizes and lengths in Aitkin county. Another important job awarded this concern is a contract calling for continuous work on the state highway in Kittson county.

ENGINEERS ARE WARNED OF FLOODS THIS SPRING

Unusual Amount of Snow May Cause Trouble When Breakup Comes and Weak Bridges Are in Danger

W. E. Monks, deputy state engineer for the district composed of Pennington and Red Lake counties, has received word from State Engineer Cooley, warning him that the spring break-up may endanger the bridges of the district and advising their strengthening wherever this is deemed necessary.

"The railroads report falls of snow in the northwest running as deep as 23 feet on the level," said Mr. Cooley. "When this begins to melt in the spring it will mean trouble. Bridges should be strengthened now wherever possible, and heavy rocks placed on the upstream side of the abutments to save these from being knocked out by floating ice."

"Because of the open weather of the fall, the roads were placed in unusually good shape to stand water and damage to their surfaces will not be very great."

Has Big Territory.

Carl Thompson has secured the agency for twenty counties of Northwestern Minnesota for the "Big Six" shock absorber and snubber, with headquarters at Thief River Falls. This automobile accessory is meeting with much favor and Mr. Thompson intends pushing the contrivance during the coming season. It is likely that local agents will be appointed by him in other places, as he expects the business here to take up most of his time.

Mr. Steenerson's Long Speech.

Congressman Steenerson is in grave danger of acquiring a reputation as a long-distance speaker. On Feb. 10 he spoke for two hours and forty minutes in opposition to certain sections of the postoffice appropriation bill, and presented an array of figures about a mile long in support of his position. Among other interesting things that the speech contains we find the statement that only 1.7 per cent of the parcels post goes to the rural routes, the 98.3 per cent going to the cities. This is just the opposite from what most people have been lead to believe. The congressman's arguments were based on a desire to have the postal service self-sustaining, deriving a sufficient revenue from its maintenance to meet its own requirements.

He explained that he was a friend of rural routes and all other branches of the service and wished to encourage them all. However, when a new element of service such as the parcels post was introduced, he wanted it based on sound economic principles.

Primary Election Supplies Sent

The clerks of the different townships of Pennington county will shortly receive the supplies necessary for the proper conducting of the primary election on March 14, at which time the people of Minnesota will register their choice for president on the different political tickets.

Three tickets are in the field, the Republican, Prohibition and Democratic. Henry Eastabrook, Albert B. Cummins and William Grant are the candidates of the first-named party; Eugene Foss and William Sulzer will contest for a majority of the Prohibition votes, and Woodrow Wilson will have no opposition for the Democratic nomination.

The polls of the county townships will be open from 9 o'clock a. m. to 9 o'clock p. m. while the voting places in the cities are to be kept open from 6 o'clock a. m. to 9 o'clock p. m. The same conditions prevail as in past June primaries when county and state office candidates were voted upon. The distribution of the supplies, the canvassing of votes, the returns and all other matters that came at the time of the June primary will be in all respects the same at this primary.

A primary for the nomination of state officials will be held in Minnesota in June.

Mr. Larson's Warologue

The warologue delivered at the Auditorium Monday evening by E. J. Larson, war correspondent for the Minneapolis Tribune, who has just returned from the European battle front, was attended by a large and appreciative audience. The lecture was illustrated by 200 scenes taken by himself, in France, the majority of which were taken in the trenches at the front and which show each detail in the methods used in the war that has killed or crippled more than 15,000,000 men during the past few months. Mr. Larson's opinion is that the nations cannot make up the losses they have sustained no matter how much territory they may acquire or no matter who wins. He stated that the war would not be stopped by the rulers but that it would come to an end when the people called a "halt." In speaking of additional defense for the United States, Mr. Larson said that he did not approve of a standing army of too great numbers, because he believed that there is as much danger in too much militarism as in unpreparedness. Mr. Larson believes that the conflict in Europe will last at least two years more. He also stated that in France there is today less poverty than in times of peace. This condition is brought about by the government taking care of the poor of the nation and also by paying pension money to the wives and families of the soldiers at the front. As to the methods of wodern warfare. Mr. Larson said: "Each trench in the war zone is numbered or named the same as the streets of a city so that the soldiers will not become lost while going from one trench to another. The trenches are dug into the earth and in many places are paved by brick. Dugouts in the side of trenches take the place of tents, which are an easy mark for aeroplanes, which are now as important in war as guns. The gunner in back of the trenches does not know what he is shooting at but is directed as to how he shall elevate his cannon by a man in a tree or an aeroplane. There are gunners who have been fighting for almost two years, and who do not know what one single shot has been fired at. In one place where I was, an excavation has been made under a church and 1,000 French soldiers bave been stationed there. Electric tights are to be placed there soon. The soldier in the trenches know how to fight against gasses, acids and liquid fire. When they begin to feel the effect of the gas, a cloth is placed over the nose stopping the deadly effect of the gas." Mr. Larson expects to go to Germany before the close of the war, but returned to the United States first because a correspondent transferred from the French to the German front is not given the privileges in the German trenches that he would have if he went direct from the United States to Germany.

Fast Game Saturday Night.

Coach Johnson announces another fast contest that will take place at the Lincoln gym Saturday evening at 8:15 p. m., when the Crookston quint will try conclusions with the local basketball team. The Crookston boys were defeated two weeks ago on their home floor and are coming back to regain lost laurels. A fast game is predicted and the gym should be filled to its capacity. The line-up will be: forwards, Fasel and Brown; center, Linde; guards, Holzknecht and Schmitt. This game will mark the beginning of the end of the basketball season. The last game of the year will probably be played with Fosston March 3.

SIXTEEN FIRES IN 1915 IS PENNINGTON'S RECORD

The Total Loss Was $45,457, This Being Slightly Greater Than During the Previous 12 Months

The need of a more general adoption of fire prevention methods in Pennington county is shown by the annual report issued by Robert W. Hargadine, State Fire Marshal, of fires in this county during the year ended December 31, 1915.

There were 16 fires during the year and the loss was $45,457. This is greater, both in the number of fires and in the aggregate losses as compared with 1914. In that year the loss in Pennington County was $45,035, and the number of fires reported 10.

However, the number of fires and the aggregate loss for the past year shows that just a little more care in the elimination of fire hazards and a little more general appreciation of the need of fire protection will place Pennington county in the ranks of those whose losses were reduced during the past year.

Another Band Dance.

Arrangements are going forward for making the band dance at the Auditorium on March 3 the most elaborate affair yet given by the organization. This is a "by request" dance, the band having no intention of putting on another affair of the kind at this time. The success of their previous dances has been so marked, however, that the people demand more of them, and the boys are always glad to oblige. A lot of new music has been secured and everybody will be done to make this even better than the dances that have preceded it.

NEW CHARGES ARE SUBMITTED

Brandeis Accused of Assisting Harriman.

PROXIES SOUGHT BY FIRM

Attorney Opposed to Confirmation of Supreme Court Justice Says Latter Aided in Ousting Fish From Control of the Illinois Central.

Washington, Feb. 24.—New charges, alleging employment of Louis D. Brandeis by E. H. Harriman to obtain proxies in the celebrated fight for control of the Illinois Central railroad and Mr. Brandeis' relations to the Equitable Life Assurance society were filed with the senate subcommittee considering Mr. Brandeis' nomination for the supreme court.

Austin G. Fox, a New York attorney in charge of presenting evidence for those opposed to the confirmation of Mr. Brandeis, laid the new charges before the committee and summarized what he expected to prove by witnesses.

In 1907, he said, when E. H. Harriman was fighting Stuyvesant Fish for control of the Illinois Central, Sullivan & Cornell, Harriman's attorneys, sent Wadill Catchings to Boston to employ Brandeis, Dunbar and Nutter to secure proxies from Illinois Central stockholders in New England and to be voted against Fish.

"Thereafter," said Fox, "Mr. Brandeis' firm acted for Mr. Harriman and widely sought to obtain proxies in his behalf. A number of letters soliciting proxies were sent out by Brandeis, Dunbar and Nutter.

"In 1908, in answer to a charge made by Joseph B. Warner before the legislative committee on railroads of Massachusetts, that Mr. Brandeis had acted in behalf of Mr. Harriman, Mr. Brandeis denied that he had ever acted in that capacity."

School Notes

Miss Lindquist, Knox School principal, was called to Duluth last Thursday by the serious illness of her sister, who is a teacher in that city.

Two brief orations, presenting two opposite views of the Mexican situation and recently delivered before the assembly by the members of the Sophomore class, appear in another column. The intervention speaker was Peter Peterson, and the opposite side was taken by Celia Saugen, both of whom are students from northeast of town.

Iowa is looking for 150,000 bushels of seed corn. It behooves our local farmers who intend planting corn this year to make arrangements immediately for a supply of sound seed. The Agricultural Department of the school is in a position to direct corn growers where to secure guaranteed seed for this locality, but they will have to act promptly.

Alfreda Knudson, a freshman in the Lincoln, is in the hospital recovering from an appendicitis operation. She is one of several students who have been similarly afflicted this year.

The six weeks period examinations in high school, both Junior and Senior, are being held this week. The examinations count for twenty-five per cent of the student's standing.

Two members of the Sophomore class of the Thief River Falls high school engaged in a debate on the Mexican situation before the assembly at the school recently. The argument for intervention was maintained by Peter Peterson, while Celia Saugen upheld the negative side of the proposition. The case for the affirmative was stated as follows:

Why We Ought to Go to War With Mexico.

War with Mexico is enevitable. Once again the passion of patriotism resounds through the entire land. Once again a trap has been set to test our loyalty and love of justice. This time it is not a political rival, imposing upon us, or commercial jealousy fooling us; but it is a brother committing suicide, a nation gone mad. In their crazed condition the Mexicans have murdered our citizens, destroyed our property, disregarded our nationality and imposed upon us a condition less desirable than war itself.

For all this, we should have more than a right to go to war with Mexico.

Let us look at the pitiful condition of the Mexican state and its half barbarian population. Just consider what a folly it is that such a beautiful and resourceful country as Mexico, should contiune to be the slaughter house of the Americas. Picture to yourself the condition of the Mexican peasants, so far behind us in civilization and so entirely deprived of the pursuits of happiness, that we cannot compare ourselves with them for an instant. But we can save them; we can give to them what God intended them to have, what they should have and what they have a right to have. Should not this be enough to inspire every able-bodied American from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to the Gulf, to take his life in his hands to save the persecuted people?

"Well," you say, "but we should have to shed American blood for its sake." Does the brave think of comforts when he jumps into the cold water to save the drowning child? No. And is life so dear and peace so sweet that we for a moment should hesitate to do them justice? Can you for an instant think of how you could better sacrifice your life than for the cause of justice and the service of such a crusade in your country?

The Mexican case is terribly serious. It is something that demands our immediate attention. To settle it in a peaceful way, we know now is impossible. Like delirium patients, who see things turned upside down and go about destroying things uselessly, the Mexicans are no longer responsible for their acts. It is our duty to bring them back to their senses. That we cannot do this without loss to both ourselves and them is certain. You never get something for nothing. The physician, who heals a wound must destroy many cells; the farmer reaps bumper crops at the expense of the soil; and we cannot be true citizens of the greatest of all American countries unless we sacrifice something to save one of the most afflicted.

Here then, lies this Mexican question. We can take two actions in it, but only one best one, which demands that we take arms against Mexico, quiet the people, establish a free and independent government and ever stand ready with our assistance to maintain it as the feeble nation is growing. Then, I am sure, that once we shall know that our efforts have not been in vain/ Then there is a last and wicked way. To take away our American conscience, our American feelings and our American views, and steer the ship of state, blind and unconscious of the cries of our next door neighbors.

Peter Peterson.

Miss Saugen did not take up much time in presenting the negative side. She said:

Intervention in Mexico.

We do not want war, therefore we should not interfere in Mexico. We are not ready for war. There is something more than guns and battleships, there is something deeper than mere war preparation. We, the citizens of the United States, are not prepared to do as Europe has done. There is no real cause for war with Mexico. The American citizens that were murdered were warned by our government to keep away from Mexico. They were threatened. warned, but they went. We know the result. When we recognized Carranza, he made a promise which we, in honor, have to give him a chance to fulfill. If we rush into war there will be more massacres, more lives destroyed, more of everything that has just happened in Mexico. War would not protect our interests, our citizens, our rights. War would provoke other countries to take advantage of our folly, and break every international law they could. We are bound by Pan-Americanism; unless all of the Americas want to, we cannot make war on Mexico. America abhors war, and is beyond Europe in finding other means for the settlement of national disputes.

Written by FREDERICK LEWIS, Editor of McClure's, In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories

In "Big Moments of Big Trials" Irvin S. Cobb says, "Editors and reporters are forever dreaming of the perfect murder story, which will be the story of a young and pretty woman, preferably an actress, accused of killing a rich man by poisoning him, with a lot of mystifying features and complications to go along with it. When this comes to pass, if it ever does, it will be, from the standpoint of public interest, a perfect story—which means circulation, which means everything to newspapers."

CUMMINS URGES UNITY OF PARTY

Says It Is Duty of Republicans to End Wilson Regime.

IOWAN'S LINCOLN DAY SPEECH

Points Out Mistakes of Present Democratic Administration in Address at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—Senator A. B. Cummins of Iowa was the principal speaker at the Lincoln Republican club banquet here last night. He said, in part:

"Mr. Toastmaster and Gentlemen of the Lincoln Republican Club: Of all the millions who have been born, who have lived, and who have died in America, there have been but two whose achievements have so woven themselves into the fabric of the nation that their birthdays are commemorated by all the people.

It is indeed true that no country on earth is so rich in the words and deeds of great, strong-hearted, high-minded men as our own, and we remember all of them with undying gratitude and increasing affection; but by common consent these two commanding figures tower above all the rest, and the days which gave them to the world are universally set apart, crowned with especial honor; not in a community here and there; not by an organization in one locality or another; not by societies with defined purposes; but in every community, every organization, every society, and by every true man and woman in the land. Your lips have already named them—George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

It is not my purpose this evening to speak upon the life, character or work of Abraham Lincoln. I have listened to many tributes rendered to his genius, fidelity and virtue; some divinely eloquent, some marvelously analytical; but none of them have filled my instinctive measure of the man. Americans who love their country and who know the things he said and did and who remember the solemn scenes through which he moved, can feel what Lincoln was infinitely better than the most accomplished orator can describe.

Divided House Cannot Stand.

Inasmuch as I am speaking to Republicans just entering upon an important campaign for political supremacy; Republicans who are now viewing with sadness and regret the humiliations and disaster inflicted in three years of Democratic administration, and who are profoundly convinced that the American people deserve something better, I must be permitted to recall one sentence which fell from Lincoln's lips at the very outset of the struggle of 1858. He was referring to a situation in the country at large, but it may well be invoked as the watchword for the Republican party in the months immediately before us. He said, as you will remember: "A house divided against itself cannot stand * * * * I do not expect the house to fall, but I do expect it will cease to be divided."

The house of Republicanism, founded upon the truest principles ever espoused by the human kind and reared by the labor of the wisest and most unselfish patriots of modern time, must not fall; but to stand, it must not be divided against itself; and it has become our highest and most imperative duty to see that it is not divided, and that it shall endure for the glory of free institutions and the welfare of the people.

I do not suggest that we must think alike upon every public question, but I do insist that there are certain underlying, fundamental principles and policies of government upon which all Republicans in substance agree, and these are broad enough and stable enough to afford safe standing room for all of us, with ample opportunity for differences of opinion upon policies concerning which a common belief is not only impossible but oftentimes unfortunate.

The miserable failure of the present administration in managing our domestic affairs and its shameful weakness in dealing with our foreign relations have so angered the people of the country that it has become not only the imperative duty but the deepest desire of all good citizens to drive it out of power, and reinstate as speedily as the laws of the land will permit, a government that will restore the confidence and rekindle the pride which every patriot ought to feel in the strength and justice of his nation. The one paramount duty before us is the retirement of Woodrow Wilson and his followers in the house and senate. When we win, as we will, some of us may not get all we want; but we are bound to get something better than we have now, for the mind cannot conceive anything worse.

The president and congress began their assault upon our institutions by the enactment of a tariff law, which taking it all together is the completest compound of ignorance and indifference ever composed by a legislative body. It neither gives protection to our home markets nor yields revenue for the maintenance of the government. It defies every principle of economics ever advanced by the principles of any school of scientific thought. Had it not been for the hideous war which has paralyzed the industries of Europe, it would have put this country into bankruptcy with no prospect of a dividend to creditors.

Tariff Hostile to Farmers.

This tariff law has no redeeming feature except the income tax, and that I may say in passing was of Republican origin, but its crowning folly and unspeakable injustice lie in the palpable and indefensible discrimination against the farmers of the country. It gives the manufacturers of the East some protection, inadequate it is true, and therefore ineffective; but it remorselessly exposes the agricultural producers in the great West to the unrestrained invasion of the whole world. It must be swept away, and in its stead there must be substituted a fair, reasonable and adequate tariff for the protection of American industries, a tariff which will enable home producers to hold their own markets in decent prosperity against all comers. The Democrats themselves are beginning to see the hopelessness of their law and are twisting and turning in every direction to avoid some of the disastrous results which are so obvious that they cannot be longer hidden. For instance, the ways and means committee of the house is about to recommend a full and sufficient duty on dyestuffs. Why? Simply because we need them, and we cannot get them from abroad, and our capital will not invest in the business unless assured of protection against foreign rivals when the war comes to an end.

Again, the energetic but elusive secretary of commerce is insisting that we must enact an anti-dumping provision, a provision which recognizes the necessity of protective duties, but which our Democratic friends hope may be so obscured that the people generally will not perceive the admission of past folly which it clearly implies.

Why a Tariff Commission?

Again, the president and his leaders in congress are now proposing the establishment of a tariff commission. Why? For this reason and no other; they are praying that through the work of such a commission some of the disasters which their tariff law necessarily inflicts may be avoided without a frank avowal that they have imposed upon the country a policy so destructive that they dare not meet its logical outcome. The tariff commission has been for years a Republican proposal, desirable because we want to know, from time to time, the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad. We want a tariff commission in order to fix duties that will protect our home markets against unfair competition, but why does a believer in the ruinous doctrine of free trade or tariff for revenue only want a commission?

It is not possible within the time which I may properly consume to review all the flagrant mistakes recorded in the history of this administration. It has simply been one blunder after another, repeated with such unvarying regularity that the people have come to expect nothing else.

The law revising our banking system, while it has some good in it, which Republicans rather than Democrats put there, is, as a whole, a most dangerous experiment. It has not only made powerful combinations among banks lawful, but it has created a board clothed with more authority than was ever before conferred upon an administrative body.

Again, it proposed a shipping law which was founded upon an acknowledged want of the people; but it coupled the plain duty of the government in this respect to a plan of partnership in a private corporation which, had it been carried out, would have associated the government with the pirates of ocean traffic in an attempt, not to relieve the people, but to make profit out of them.

It is a unique administration in that it abandons, without a thought of responsibility, the most vital parts of the platform upon which it came into power, and assumes that the people will be satisfied with the simple explanation that minds have changed. At this moment it is in a state of chaotic confusion. The balance in the treasury which it inherited from a Republican administration has been absorbed in the extravagance of its appropriations, and it needs money and does not know where to get it. It is blindly groping around amidst further stamp taxes, gasoline taxes, automobile taxes, income taxes, and the like, but lacks the courage to lay its hands upon anything. It is a despondent, aimless, spineless wanderer in the wilderness created by its own incompetency. It is not big enough for the job; and what will happen to us during the next year mortal man cannot predict.

If I were to leave this meeting without considering our relations with foreign powers and without expressing my own views upon the subject which we have come to know as "preparedness," the things uppermost in my mind, and yours as well I have no doubt, would remain unsaid. The subject presents itself in two aspects. Our course toward Mexico, and our relation to the belligerents of Europe.

Mexican Policy Shameful.

No real, red-blooded American will ever turn to the page which records the conduct of this administration toward Mexico without blushing for shame and burning with indignation. It is hard for me to speak of the subject in terms of respect. I do not, of course, charge the president and his advisers with conscious wrongdoing, but weakness and vacillation are sometimes more than the equivalent of intentional wrong, and from this accusation the president cannot escape.

In the past three years American citizens who had a right to be in Mexico have been robbed, shot, hung and starved at the pleasure of the so called armies roving about the country; and never a thing done save a protest, now and then, to an irresponsible, cruel and lawless leader. Our government has not only failed in its duty toward our own people who are in Mexico, but it has witnessed the most atrocious outrages against Mexican men and women the world has ever known, without a decisive word or a courageous act.

At the present moment the situation in Mexico is absolutely hopeless. There was a time when in my judgment, intervention might have been avoided, but now the horrors of indiscriminate murder and the savage lust for blood and rape and all other crimes against humanity, have broken the civilized spirit of the people. They have not the strength needed to construct a government. They are starving, not by the thousands, but by the tens of thousands; and I predict that unless we are willing to stand by and see that country lapse into barbarism, and to see it ravaged day after day by the cutthroats and plunderers who are now in possession, we will be compelled to intervene simply to furnish a nucleus around which the remnant of liberty and decency can gather. There may be some other way in which we can be helpful, but I am unable to perceive it.

I turn to our troubles with the belligerents of Europe, strange as it may appear, with a profound relief. I believe the president was wise and patriotic in his proclamation of neutrality. Sacred as the compact of nations ought to be, and sympathetic as all right-minded men are with stricken Belgium, our country would not have been justified in declaring war because Belgium was invaded. Whether we have been in fact neutral is quite another thing. The government may have maintained, technically a neutral position, but individually, industrially, and financially we have not been neutral. Agreeing, as I think most of us do with the president in the neutrality of the nation, it is yet unfortunately true that, in maintaining the dignity of our position, and in convincing the belligerents of the sincerity of our purpose, the state department has met with ill success. This is not the occasion for reviewing the shortcomings of the administration in these respects, but it is impossible to conceal from ourselves the obvious fact that we have lost some of the prestige and distinction which in former days illuminated the American name.

Question of Preparedness.

We are all profoundly grateful that we are not in war; but some of us are skeptical about the credit which one man claims for the peace which now prevails. The stability of the president and his administration is not forfeited when we remember that a year ago he set his face firmly against any increase in our military strength, and impliedly opposed even the maintenance of the naval program of the last few years, whereas when congress assembled last December he recommended with great earnestness an immediate addition to both army and navy and recently toured the country in advocacy of his program.

It is not enough, however, to question the views of the chief executive, his cabinet or his congress, or doubt the competency of the administration to deal with the vital problems which the unparalleled calamity in Europe has created. I realize that, in the present circumstances the Republicans of Minnesota have a right to know my views respecting the course which the United States ought to pursue under the unusual conditions which now confront us.

To me the course is plain before us. we ought to go quietly, firmly forward strengthening and balancing the military arm of the government according to the program universally accepted. We ought to do it with no blare of trumpets, no challenge to other nations. Before any radical change is made in the policy we ought to know the outcome of the war. It may happen that conditions will arise that will compel us to stand armed ready for instant conflict, not against one nation alone but against a combination of nations; one the other hand, it may happen that the war will so close that the partial disarmament of the great countries will begin and that a long era of international peace will be assured.

AT THE THEATRES

The Clemenceau Case.
(Direction Herbert Brenon)

Iza's sinister beauty and its fatal effect on the lives of two noble men form the main plot of THE CLEMENCEAU CASE. Pierre, her husband, whom she casts off for Constantin Ritz, she leaves with his career as a talented sculptor blasted forever. In turn she toys with the infatuated Ritz, shattering his hopes, ambitions and home life.

But Pierre saves Ritz against himself. With heroic self-sacrifice he allows himself, apparently, to fall once more under Iza's spell. He meets her in her oriental boudoir. As she presses her false lips to Pierre's he stabs her to the heart just as Ritz enters. "I have saved you your wife," says Pierre calmly as he telephones for the police. "As for me, Iza killed my heart years ago." See Theda Bara in this thrilling drama at the Lyceum Thursday, March 2.

An illegal marriage is performed and in time he abandons her and she becomes a man-hater.

Seeking refuge in Europe, Jeanne on the way over falls in with two outcasts and the trio seek the destruction of a young American by stealing valuable papers.

Tuesday and Wednesday.

In "Between Men," W. S. Hart takes the part of a man who never forgets a favor. When an enemy threatens the man who befriended him with financial ruin, re responds to the call with alacrity. It's a fight to the finish with both brains and fists to save the fortune of the friend and win the hands of the daughter. The terrific hand-to-hand combat, the terrible Wall Street scene and the final victory combine to produce a play with not a moment's drag.

In many ways "Dizzy Heights and Daring Heatrs" is one of the most wonderful Keystone's ever filmed. Aeroplanes looping the loop, the thrilling chase of a biplane, the miraculous rescue from the top of a tower, and a 200-foot smokestack blown up are only a few thrills.

Jane Gray in "Let Katty Do It." You should see this marvelous Triangle picture to appreciate the way these seven little kiddies—bright live, red-blooded American youngsters—act when they leave their comfortable New England home for the dangers that surround existence in a mining camp.

You will be thrilled as you watch their bravery when they are put to the test to defend their lives and home against the ravages of the savage Mexicans. You can feel your blood run cold as you watch the manner in which the raiders creep upon the house. And when the enemy is finally put to route by the daring children, you'll not be able to refrain from breaking into spontaneous applause.

Sam Bernard in his first Triangle picture, a rollicking Keystone comedy that keeps you doubled up with laughter as you watch the development in the ripping tangle that furnishes a whale of a lot of laughter for the onlooker. It's the kind of a play the tired business man, the loving wife and the youngsters will appreciate, as it sends you home with the feeling that the world is full of fun and merriment. If you want a solid thirty minutes of real enjoyment take a run over and you'll be glad you came.

Senior High School Girls Entertain.

On Feb. 19, the Senior girls entertained the Senior boys at a "Hard Time" party at the Masonic temple. Everyone arrived at 7 o'clock in true hard time style. Everything from "hair parted in the center" to "country cousins," were present. The persons carrying off the prizes were: Anna Bredesen as the dignified county cousin and Fred Scanlon as Charlie Chaplain. Boost Those Who Boost You

"I think that if you send a representative up here at this time most of the people will cancel the Minneapolis papers and take yours because the Minneapolis papers did not give the Thief River Falls Hockey Team advertising during the Carnival and the Commercial Club had to write the Journal before they would even print the scores of the games.

"Hope you will send a man up, and if boosting will do any good there are a few of us here who are with you."

The St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch always print the news, and are only too glad to have had an opportunity to direct public attention to Thief River Falls and its excellent Hockey Team.

Sending out representatives, at the present high cost of publishing a newspaper, is too expensive in proportion to results, but we assure the citizens of Thief River Falls that we will sincerely appreciate every subscription or boost that we receive from them.

New Depot For Ada.

Ada—Judge Grindeland of the District court has upheld the order of the railroad and warehouse commission directing the Great Northern railroad to erect a brick depot at Ada. The railroad appealed from an order of the commission, but the appeal was denied after a hearing, and it is expected that the road will not carry the matter further. The people of Ada are urging the railroad to begin work early in the spring.

Fine Team Drowned.

Walker.—A fine team of horses belonging to Peter Taylor, an Indian, were drowned in Leech Lake last Saturday while driving from the Agency to the Albert Howard home near the long bridge. The heavy snow on the ice concealed a large hole into which the animals plunged. They were rescued, but the exposure was too much for them and being unable to stand on their, limbs they perished on the ice despite the efforts to save them.

Commercial Club Organized.

Grygla.—The citizens of this little town have organized a Commercial club for the purpose of advertising its possibilities and advantages to the outside world. The following were elected as officers for the first year: President, C. M. Adkins; vice president,A. J. Anderson; secretary, C. E. Ballard; treasurer,George A. Johnson; directors, P. P. Maney, Sr., J. F. Brown, O. J. Johnson, Levi Hawkins and A. O. Fladeland.

Canadian Deserter Released.

Duluth.—Mile Connor, who was arrested at Grand Rapids and brought here for trial, charged with being a deserter from the Canadian army, was given his freedom on habeas corpus proceedings by Judge Fessler of the district court. Connors enlisted in the Canadian army in 1915 at Fort Francis, deserting shortly thereafter . He made his way to Grand Rapids, where he was arrested charged with entering this country without inspection. Judge Fessler ruled that the prisoner was held on a warrant that charged him with no violation of the law.

State Gets Much Land.

St. Paul.—The state of Minnesota has been awarded 13,321 acres of valuable land in St. Louis county and the selection has just been completed by State Auditor Preus. These are lands awarded to the state by the federal government for school purposes at the time Minnesota was admitted to statehood, but have never before been surveyed and claimed. Some of the tracts are covered with valuable timber and it is likely also that they may be valuable for their iron ore. Their approximate value at this time is $100,000.

Socialists Snowed Under.

Bemidji.—Although the Socialists had candidates for every office to be filled at the election at Bemidji last week, not one came within a mile of being elected. Charles W. Vanderluis was elected by a majority of204 votes over William McCauig, who mas a candidate for re-election. the remainder of the citizen's ticket was also elected, as follows: Clerk, George Stein; treasurer, George Rhea; assessor, T. E. Lloyd; councilman at large, Frank S. Lycan; Aldermen, Smart, Fiucoult, Miller and Lahr, the latter unopposed. The new mayor has announced that he will re-appoint Frank Ripple as chief of police.

Improvement Bonds Carry.

Holt.—At the election held here last Tuesday for the purpose of voting on whether or not the village should issue bonds for municipal improvements, the affirmative carried almost unanimously. There were 33 votes cast, but two of these being against the proposition. The advisability of a further levy for a sewer and water works system is now being considered by the village authorites.

To Hold First Election.

Newfolden.—This community will hold its first election as an incorporated village on Saturday, Feb. 26, at which time a full set of officers will be chosen. There are as yet no announced candidates and very little enthusiasm is being shown concerning the outcome. Considerable work in the way of public improvements is contemplated and the new officers will find that they have considerable responsibility on their hands at the outset.

What's The Object?

Walker.—This town is to again vote on the "wet and dry" issue at the spring election which falls on March 4. Last year the question was rought before the voters and the ys won out six by six votes. Ow- to the Indian treaty, no liquor can legally sold in Walker, no matter the voting goes, but notwith- ding this, it appears that a liberal ber of business men are desirous ping record favoring a wet town. petition was circulated by Mayor le.

Father Shoots Little Daughter.

Baudette.—The six-year-old daughter of J. Stepan was accidentally shot and instantly killed by her own father on Monday night. Stepan had been cleaning his gun, an old style army musket, and was about to hang it back on the wall, when it was discharged and the load went through the wall and into the next room, striking the little girl in the head.

Indian Chief Buried.

Warroad.—Na-ma-pok, a Chippewa Indian 80 years of age and one of the last chiefs of his tribe in this section of the country, died last week of consumption near this town and was buried on his own land after the ancient Chippewa fashion. A year ago Na-ma-pok sold his allotment of government land for $7,000, retaining only a few acres upon which he resided until his death. The old chieftain was a great favorite with all the white people of the neighborhood and bore an excellent reputation. Two daughters are the only survivors.

Defies Indian Order.

Kelliher.—The village authorities at this place have issued five licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors in spite of the fact that the town is in the Indian territory and has been closed by national edict. The saloon men claim that inasmuch as they have state licenses they cannot be prosecuted for selling liquor and maintain that the only thing that the government can do is to destroy supplies when found. The action will be made a test case and watched with much interest.

Clay County Pioneer Dead.

Moorhead.—James B. Blanchard, for forty years constable-bailiff of Clay county, who built the first house in Moorhead, died Saturday night. He was ninety-six years of age and leaves a wife and one son, Ernest Blanchard of Minneapolis.

Buy Bank Stock.

Crookston.—Charles Kiewel and Frederick W. McGregor Saturday afternoon completed a deal whereby they became the owners of the P. M. Ringdahl and G. O. Hage interests in the Polk County State bank of this city. Mr. Kiewel was elected president of the institution and Mr. McGregor vice president and cashier at a meeting of the directors which followed the closing of the transaction. Mr. McGregor was for a number of years connected with the Scandia American bank of this city and up to Saturday was connected with the state banking department as an examiner. He will begin his new duties on May 1 at which time Gilbert O. Hage, the present cashier will retire.

Red River Ice Going Out.

Grand Forks—Warm weather of the past week has opened portions of the Red river and made the ice unsafe for traffic for some distance below the outlet of the Red Lake. The drop in temperature last evening resulted in a thin layer of ice over the portions that had been opened but the freeze was not sufficient to make the ice safe for crossing.

The Red Lake river is also opening in places where the current is swift. The fact that much snow is melting in this vicinity and flowing to these rivers, brings a fear that another flood will result this spring.

BANK YOUR MONEY

If the bank rendered no other service to the community than to protect its valuables it would render a useful one; but it would be a mousetrap proposition, you could only go one way; but the bank makes it easier to get money out than in, and in the outgoing process assumes risks and renders benefits too often lost sight of in the busy whirl of business.

We take many things for granted and live in a matter-of-fact age. We want our morning paper at the breakfast table with never a delay and with little thought of what it costs to collect, transmit, type, print and deliver the news. We want our train on the dot or we get impatient. We want our milk and our coal, blizzard or no blizzard. We likewise expect the bank to do our business smoothly, efficiently, and without thought of the cost or the risks attending.

When your bank hands you a check book, it gives you license to draw as many checks, in as large or as small sums as you wish, with the only provision (except in certain cases where a minimum balance is required) that you do not overdraw, and promise to honor your checks as presented as long as your balance is sufficient to pay them.

Whether you want to pay your creditor in the next block, or a thousand miles away, the checking privilege of a bank account permits you to make your payment with ease, safety and dispatch.

When you mail your check your trouble is over and the bank's has just begun, for the bank warrants to you three things, all for your own protection and at its own risk. It is well to know them.

It guarantees (a) That it will pay only the checks you have signed. If your name is forged and the bank pays the check, it cannot charge the amount to your account; (b) That it will pay only in the sum originally drawn. If someone gets your check and raises the amount, making it apparently a genuine check, the bank can only charge the amount in which you originally drew the check, unless it can show you were grossly careless in so drawing that you invited fraud. Therefore be careful to draw your checks properly; (c) To pay to the party to whom you ordered the amount paid and none other. If the check gets into the hands of strangers who forge the indorsement, so that the party to whom you ordered the money paid does not get it, the payment is at its risk, and you are harmless.

All this is ultimately for our good as a depositor. You know that your account cannot be drawn against except on your order. You know that the party you want to receive payment gets it. You get back the most perfect voucher known to the business world. Many a dispute has been settled and loss and law suit avoided by producing bank vouchers that told in no uncertain way that payment had been made according to the intent of the drawer. Therefore for your own good you ought to keep your money in a bank, and draw it out by check.

Much Wheat Arriving.

Farmers are hurrying their wheat to the elevators these days, evidently fearing the breaking up of the roads. One elevator received 25 loads a day on three different days last week, and others report similar conditions. The roads are still holding up well, but with the soft weather expected at any time and with high prices prevailing it is thought that most of the grain in the neighborhood will be in elevators before the end of the month.

It is inconvenient, at least, to haul hay continually from the stack to the barn during the winter months

The Silo saves a great amount of labor. You also have a most nutritious food, neatly and compactly stored close at hand, not mentioning the immense saving of feed.

A contrivance which pays for itself within a year by the amount of hay saved. Besides, by materially increasing the production of milk and beef, it proves its own worthiness.

Miss Harriet Hetland's reading of the play, "Quality Street," at the meeting of the Woman's club Monday afternoon was one of the best ever given here. The interpretation of this charming play of Barrie's was most artistic. The characters in the play were made real human beings, who came before the audience and told their own story. Each was drawn with a distinct individuality and with absolute sympathy and clearness. Miss Hetland's hold upon her audience is unfailing, her personality is charming and her perfection of expression is refreshing. To those who heard her last year in the "Melting Pot," her reading came as a distinct surprise. It is seldom that a reader can combine both the broad dramatic stroke of the former and the dainty subtle blending of pathos and comedy of the Barrie play. That Miss Hetland can do both speaks much for her versatility. She will undoubtedly be heard here again next year.

The Woman's club deserves much praise for the quality of entertainment that has been brought to the city. That the public is eager for the good things is shown by the patronage at these entertainments.

Miss Hetland read to a packed house in which standing room was at a premium. To announce that anything is under the patronage of the Woman's club means success.

Miss Phonsie O'Neill gave a very pleasant evening party Monday when she entertained a company of high school girls at her home. As a number of parties were being given at this time in honor of Washington's birthday, Miss O'Neill got her "Irish" up and declared that in one instance at least "Paddy of the sivinteenth of March" should share honors with the "Father of Our Country." So her's was in compliment to "St. Patrick." The invitations for the affair were in the form of little pigs, written in Irish brogue, the home decorations were in green festooning and shamrocks, and in the dainty luncheon served, green and yellow were carried out in the appointments. The Misses Florence Prichard, Gertrude O'Neill and Mesdames O. Lawson and M. Connelly served the refreshments. In the early part of the evening cards were played. Miss Mary Prichard won high score and was awarded a prize. The remainder of the evening was given over to contests and the singing of Irish songs. In a guessing contest Miss Dorothy Miller was the prize winner, and in another contest wherein the guest who could dress a potato into the most artistic doll was to be rewarded, Miss Jean Hay was the successful one. The young ladies who had the pleasure of the evening were the Misses Doris Halvorson, Lois Wold, Florence Fasel, Dorothy Miller, Irene Plummer, Anna Tanem, Helen Weeks, Vivian Raiche, Alice Wilson, Evangeline and Lucile Burns, Agnes Elg, Mary Prichard, Marie Gray, Irene Woodcock, Marian Miller, Jean Hay, Dorothy Bottleson, Harriet Anderson, Ardith Arpin, Myrtle Berg, Helen Strand and Marian Bishop.

One of the most enjoyable events of Washington's birthday was the Colonial Tea given for the Camp Fire Girls by the Misses Patience Lockhart and Belle McKenzie, guardians of the Shutonka and Pembina camps respectively. Novel features marked the pretty affair which was given at the Masonic hall from 3 to 5 o'clock. A real colonial time was enjoyed. Old fashioned dances were the pleasures of the thirty guests who were charming in their colonial costumes which each young lady had fashioned for herself. Promptly at three o'clock the first chord was struck for the grand march. Dancing continued until a quarter of five, when tea was served in old English style. Misses Myrtle Thomas and Mary Prichard, presidents of the respective camps, poured tea and one of the tea-pots in service was 150 years old. Besides the Camp Fire girls those who enjoyed the afternoon were: the Misses Helen Hoag, Daisy Chapman, Gertrude Swanson, Martha Berkland and Lyda Batton.

Three tables were in play and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Geo. Johnson for high honors, and to Mrs. Elmer Johnson for high tricks. Suggestive of spring were the yellow jonquils, arranged in vases, and placed about the rooms, and adding to this hint were tapers with green shades, centering each card table for the service of the delicious luncheon.

Mrs. Dora Erickson of Fosston, was an out-of-town guest..

The score cards used in the card games were also in the form of hatchets. Miss Dora Erickson, a relative of the hostess, who is here from Fosston, a guest at the Doland home, was the honor guest.

✣ ✣ ✣

Mrs. C. R. Stowell was hostess last Saturday when she gave an "informal" at her home. Norwegian whist was played and there were guests for three tables. Mrs. H. G. GERMANS BREAK FRENCH FRONT

Berlin Reports Gains in Alsace and Woevre.

ADVANCE OF TWO MILES

Allies Said to Have Lost Three Thousand Prisoners and Great Quantities of Material—Fighting of Great Violence Along the Meuse.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—Announcement of another important gain in the offensive on the Western front was made by the war office. The statement says that in Upper Alsace the Germans captured a position 700 yards wide and 400 yards deep.

The war office also announced that German forces have penetrated the opposing lines for three kilometers (two miles) in the northern sector of the Woevre. It is said the allies lost more than 3,000 prisoners and great quantities of material.

Paris, Feb. 24.—Fighting of great violence is in progress from the right bank of the Meuse to a point southeast of Herbe forest, the war office announced. North of Verdun there were infantry actions on a front of fifteen kilometers (ten miles) east of Seppois. The French were enabled by a counter attack to retake a great portion of the forest of Causes, north of Beaumont.

The war office admits the evacuation of the village of Haumont by the French, but declares they still hold the approach to the village.

GERMAN FLAG HAULED DOWN

Austrian Consul Tells of French Occupation of Corfu.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—"The Austro-Hungarian consul on the Greek island of Corfu, who made his escape, reports that when the French landed troops there Jan. 10 a French officer asked him to haul down the flag," says the Overseas News agency. "The consul declined, notwithstanding the officer's threats. Finally the flag was hauled down forcibly.

"The French hoisted their own flag on the mast before Achillion castle, the property of Emperor William. Later they observed the German crown on top of the mast and attempted to remove it. Failing in this they sawed off the whole mast."

RUSSIAN VANGUARD NEARIMG TREBIZOND

Petrograd, Feb. 24.—Russian vanguards are within a few miles of Riezh, thirty-five miles east of Trebizond, and the capture of Trebizond itself is now but a few days distant.

Armenian refugees, fleeing from the Christian quarters of Trebizond outside the walls, have arrived within the Russian lines. They report the Turks have been emptying the city of all its valuable stores since the fall of Erzerum, evidently planning no serious resistance.

"We are continuing the pursuit of the remnants of the Turkish army," says the war office. Announcement of fresh successes in the Caucasus which brought enthusiastic demonstrations at the opening of the duma was followed by the official statement that the Slavs have won skirmishes with the Austro-Germans on nearly every sector of the front from the Baltic to Roumania.

"Along the Riga and Dvina fronts German aviators dropped bombs," said the official statement. "Violent artillery actions occurred along the Dvina and also on the Jacobstadt sector and around Orteg, near Illukst.

"In the Smrgen district we penetrated enemy entanglements, bayoneting some of the trench occupants and forcing others to flee.

"On the Upper Strypa the Austrians tried to approach our trenches, but were repulsed with heavy losses. We took a number of prisoners."

FRANCE TO TAX WAR PROFITS

Measure Remains Effective a Year After Cessation of Hostilities.

Paris, Feb. 24.—The chamber of deputies passed the bill taxing war profits.

Germans Release Danish Ship.

London, Feb. 24.—The Germans have released the steamship Bandon, as the seizure, apparently, was a mistake, says the Copenhagen correspondent of the Times. It belongs to the East Asiatic company of Copenhagen and was en route for Siam.

Martial Law Proclaimed.

Shanghai, Feb. 24.—Martial law has been proclaimed at Changsha, capital

PRESIDENT OPPOSES WARNING TO PUBLIC

Washington, Feb. 24.—President Wilson is unchanged in his opposition to having congress warn Americans to keep off armed merchantmen of European belligerents. Congressional leaders have been so advised. It was stated authoritatively that discussion of such a move did not come up at the president's conference with Chairmen Stone and Flood of the congressional committee on foreign affairs and with Democratic Leader Kern, but was revived in quite another way.

The official account is that Senator Smith of Georgia recently went to Senator Stone to discuss the form in which a resolution might be introduced if necessary. It was said Senator Stone at that time opposed such a resolution.

The White House conference, it was said authoritatively, was held so the president might discuss the exact status of the submarine negotiations with congressional leaders.

FRANCIS ACCEPTS POSITION

Former Missouri Governor Will Be Envoy to Russia.

Washington, Feb. 24.—David R. Francis, secretary of the interior in Cleveland's cabinet and former governor of Missouri, told President Wilson he would accept the post of ambassador to Russia, to succeed George T. Mayre, who has resigned. His nomination will be sent to the senate as soon as inquiry can be made of the Russian government as to whether he is acceptable. Mr. Francis will confer with Secretary Lansing at the state department about his duties.

SIOUX CITY STRIKE GENERAL

Twenty-three Hundred Employes of Packing Plants Walk Out.

Sioux City, Ia., Feb. 24.—A general strike was declared at the Cudahy and Armor packing houses here. The men demand higher pay. Twenty-three hundred employes quit, only about 200 remaining at work. The hog butchers and laborers of the butchering department in the Cudahy plant went on strike Tuesday.

Toy Firm Insures Workers.

Sheboygan, Wis., Feb. 24.—A local toy concern has presented each of its several hundred employes under sixty years old with a life insurance policy for $300, to which it agrees to add $100 each year if the employe remains with the company until the policy calls for $1,000.

COURT SUSTAINS PLAINTIFF IN PERSONAL INJURY CASE

Frank Anderson Awarded $3,512 in Action Against Northwestern Drainage Co.—Dynamite Exploded

Frank Anderson has been awarded damages in the sum of $3,512 against the Northwestern Drainage company by Judge Andrew Grindeland at Warren. This case came up for hearing on the last day of the term of court just closed, but no decision was handed down at that time. The issue was one of fact, relating to the extent of the injuries sustained and amount of damages plaintiff should be permitted to recover. The court sustained the petitioner's contentions on all counts.

Anderson was injured by the explosion of about 15 pounds of dynamite while in the employ of the defendant company at Gatzke, Minn. The latter was protected through an indemnity policy held in the Ocean Accident and Guarantee association. No question as to liability arose, the issue was simply one of extent of damages. Anderson lost three fingers, the sight of one eye was permanently injured and the hearing partially destroyed, according to the petitioner. The right leg was also badly shattered.

O. A. Naplin and Theodore Quale of Thief River Falls, were the attorneys for Anderson.
